Parade Highlights Celebration Of 25th Anniversary In Israel

JERUSALEM — Israeli Air Force jets streaked overhead and hundreds of tanks and thousands of soldiers paraded through Jerusalem Monday in an exuberant celebration of Israel's 25th anniversary as an independent state.

About 300,000 people — roughly 10 per cent of Israel's population — cheered and applauded as the heavy weapons and marching units coursed through the capital.

The highlight was a spectacular flypast by scores of Israeli Phantom, Skyhawk and Mirage fighters. They thundered over the city in tight formation, including a six-pointed Star of David, leaving brilliant white trails against a flawless blue sky.

Ex-Arab Sector Silent

In contrast to the celebration on the Israeli side of the city, the former Jordanian sector was silent. All the shops and businesses were closed and the streets deserted in a silent and unofficial protest against the parade. About half of the four-mile route passed through former Arab territory.

"This is our way of showing how we feel," an Arab travel agent said. "The Israelis are entitled to have their parade, but why do they have to bother us with it?"

A reliable Arab source said that no official protest had been organized. "I suppose some shopkeepers simply decided to take a day off," he said, "but most are trying to send the Israelis a message."

The plans for the parade — it cost about $6-million — generated a heated controversy here in recent weeks. Students, intellectuals and ordinary citizens criticized it as excessively costly and an unwarranted display of military power that would damage Israel's image abroad.

All the objections seemed forgotten Monday, however. The enthusiastic crowd of tourists, and Israelis obviously enjoyed itself. As the last line of mounted policemen passed the grandstands, the crowd surged onto the roadway and marched along singing Israeli songs.

Despite the obvious Arab antipathy, a police spokesman said that there had been no incidents of any kind. Nine Israeli soldiers were injured, one seriously, when mechanical failure forced a cruising security helicopter to make an emergency landing on the Mount of Olives.

Perfect But for a Dog

The solemnity of the opening ceremony was shattered by a small terrier that broke loose from its master and tugged vigorously at the pants leg of a member of the honor guard presenting the colors to President Zalman Shazar and Premier Golda Meir. To the delight of the crowd, the dog escaped a pursuing military policeman and scampered down the parade route, nipping at the tires of the lead jeep.

With that exception, the meticulously planned celebration went off without a flaw. To insure its precision, two full-scale rehearsals of the parade rumbled through the city in the early hours last week.

The heavy weapons displayed in the parade illustrated the improvised and international character of the Israeli arsenal. There were British and American tanks, some dating from World War II. There was also a brigade of Soviet T-54 and T-55 tanks that had been captured from the Egyptians during the 1967 war, refitted with Israeli cannon and returned to service in the desert.

Gun Shown First Time

The burgeoning Israeli arms industry was represented by a number of locally manufactured weapons, including the L-33, an Israeli-made 155-mm. self-propelled gun, which was on public view for the first time.

The rumbling weapons were followed by briskly marching units of soldiers, paratroopers and sailors. The crowd gave its heaviest applause to the women soldiers, who marched by in short khaki shirts with submachine guns tucked beneath their arms.

The military nature of the parade was softened by one touch: Most of the tanks and heavy guns had flowers mounted on side.

The parade culminated two hours of celebrations commemorating the anniversary. Beginning at sundown last Sunday, thousands of Israelis crowded into the streets and parks of downtown Jerusalem for a non-stop session of singing and dancing.

Great bursts of fireworks lit the sky just after midnight and huge bonfires burned in the Valley of the Cross until the first light.

By the evening, the city had an exhausted look. The wind fences that had held back the crowd from the parade route lay broken and twisted on the sidewalks. Litter lay ankle-deep in the gutters and the late weary revelers were boarding trains for Tel Aviv.

Museum Will Proceed With Plans For Israel Archeological Show

NEW YORK — Officials of the Metropolitan Museum of Art gave assurances that they would proceed with plans for a major Israeli archeological exhibition and "not yield to terror or to threats of terror" by backing out.

But they also disclosed that the exhibition, originally conceived as a commemoration of Israel 25th anniversary this year, would be mounted in 1975 and linked to the 10th anniversary of the Israel Museum in Jerusalem, where the artifacts are housed.

Assurances that the display would not be canceled were given by Thomas P. F. Hoving, the museum's director, to David Rivlin, the Israeli Consul General here, at a luncheon meeting in Mr. Hoving's office.

Doubts about the exhibition arose after a report indicated that Douglas Dillon, the museum's president, had written letters to Mayor Lindsay, Israeli officials and some of the museum's trustees, expressing fears that Arab terrorists might try to disrupt the display.

According to those present, Mr. Dillon personally set aside those INSTALLED AS PRESIDENT: Jeremiah J. Gorin of Pawtucket was installed as the new president of the Jewish Community Center at the Center's 48th annual meeting on Wednesday evening.

He will replace Harlan J. Espo who was honored at the meeting for having served five terms of office as president.

Mr. Gorin, who has served the Center as vice president of the board and in various committee capacities, was born in Colon, in the Republic of Panama. After attending public schools there, he attended and graduated from Duke University and Harvard Law School. During World War II he served in U.S. Naval Intelligence, and also served as the Consul of the Republic of Panama in Rhode Island.

He is a member of the bar in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and the Canal Zone and is a partner in the law firm of Levy, Goodman, Semonoff and Gorin. Mr. Gorin is a member of the American, Inter-American, Rhode Island and Pawtucket Bar Association, a member of the board of directors of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island and of the R.I. Legal Aid Society.

reservations at the luncheon, which was also attended by Roswell Gilpatric and Richard Perkins of the museum's board; Jacob Stein, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, and Mrs. Charlotte Jacobson, chairman of the American section of the World Zionist Organization.

Mr. Stein said the group had been informed that Karl Katz, chief of the museum's exhibits department, was in Jerusalem conferring with Mayor Teddy Kollek, who is also president of the Israel Museum on arrangements for the display. Detailed plans will be announced later.

Priest Accuses Police Of Favoring Hassidim

NEW YORK — A Roman Catholic priest charged last week that the police had ignored assaults by Hasidic Jews against Hispanics in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn.

The accusation was denied by Capt. Frank T. Massamillo of the 90th Precinct and Assistant-Chief Inspector Carl Ravens, who is in charge of the police in Brooklyn North. They said the police had shown favoritism to neither group.

The priest, the Rev. Bryan J. Karvelis, asserted at a news conference in Transfiguration Church, 263 Marcy Avenue, that there had been numerous "mob beatings" of Hispanics recently and that the police had been reluctant to arrest the Jews despite complaints.

He declared that assaults by Hasidim gangs "of one to 200" had averaged between seven and nine in the last few months.

"The Hasidic community comprises most of the political power in the area, and we feel that the police brass have been prejudiced in their favor," said Father Karvelis, whose parishioners are largely Hispanic. "We've met with the local police brass and urgently requested assailants be arrested, but nothing has been done."

'Action Taken'

Captain Massamillo denied that there had been numerous attacks by the Hasidim against Hispanics in recent months.

"I've been either executive officer or captain of the precinct for three months," he declared. "In that time, there have been no more than five such incidents. All were investigated and action was taken where warranted."

Chief Ravens also denied the charge that complaints by Spanish-speaking residents against Hasidic Jews had been ignored. He said that every incident reported to the police was investigated.

"The Hasidim are a tightly knit community with a long distrust of the police in Europe and America," he said. "Their tradition is not to report to authorities when they are victimized by a thief or assaulted, but to take matters in their own hands, administering a beating to the suspect and then releasing him."

Father Karvelis's charges were denied by Leibush Lefkowitz, a leader in the Hasidic community and president of the United Jewish Organization of Williamsburg.

"We are a peaceful people," he said. "We do not attack anybody. But we will not be driven from our community by those who wield knives and come from elsewhere."

Flare-ups between the Hasidim and Hispanics in Williamsburg have occurred sporadically in the last several years.

The area has 80,000 Spanish-speaking residents, 40,000 Hasidic Jews and 20,000 other people — mainly Italian-Americans.

Jordan Strengthens Controls To Keep Out Arab Terrorists

AMMAN, Jordan — Jordan has imposed severe security controls on travelers to keep out Arab terrorists, and the United States Embassy here is being fortified against rocket attack or assault.

"We don't want another Munich or Khartoum in Amman," said a Jordanian policeman at the border post at Ramtha, where the main highway enters from Syria.

The policeman was referring to the kidnapping and killing of Israeli athletes during the Olympic Games at Munich last summer and the death of the United States Ambassador to the Sudan and his deputy, as well as the Belgian diplomat, in Khartoum in March.

Both terrorist acts were carried out by the so-called Black September Organization, an extremist Palestinian force that came to light when four of its members assassinated Wasfi Tal, then the Jordanian Premier, when he was on a visit to Cairo in November, 1971.

Relations between Palestinian guerrilla organizations and the Jordanian Government have been violent since the army drove the guerrillas out of Jordanian bases in heavy fighting from September, 1970, to July 1971.

Hussein Termed Target

In January the Palestinian National Congress, which represents the guerrilla groups, declared that King Hussein's regime in Jordan was the immediate target because a successful guerrilla action against Israel could not be mounted without Jordanian bases.

Visible security measures have increased in this already heavily patrolled capital and along the border since the arrest here in February of 17 persons, led by Abu Daoud, a high official of El Fatah, the Palestinian liberation movement. The band, which entered Jordan illegally by car from Syria, carried automatic weapons and explosives. It was picked up later during a routine police check.

Sixteen members were sentenced to long prison terms, including a life sentence for Mr. Daoud, after the military prosecutor asserted that they had planned to carry out terrorist acts and assassinate Government leaders.

Sources close to Fatah in Beirut, Lebanon, said that the purpose of the infiltration was not terrorism but the establishment of a clandestine support network among Palestinians in Jordan. Its aims were said to be to help guerrilla units to strike Israeli forces in the occupied West Bank area and to organize political resistance against Hussein in Jordan.

Embassy Security Tightened

Now travelers entering Jordan from Syria are being given as thorough a search as the Israeli occupation forces give Palestinians allowed to visit the West Bank. Automobiles are expertly combed, with body work being removed in some cases. Aerosol dispensers and dry-cell batteries are sometimes confiscated. Searches of both men and women are required.

A line of at least 30 heavy trucks was awaiting inspection one day recently.

Since the Khartoum killings all United States missions in the Middle East have been tightening security, with increased Marine guard contingents in some cases. Local guard units for the embassies have also been noticeably reinforced.

The three-story stone embassy on Jebel Amman, one of the seven hills on which this capital is built, is guarded by a company of Jordanian troops camped in tents in an empty lot. The entrances, window and walls of the embassy are being reinforced with steel and concrete.

As for American personnel and their families, they live in private homes and apartments over a wide area, and security officers concede that there is no way to protect them all.

JEW ELECTED WESTON-SUPER-MARE.
— The United Nations Association, at its annual conference here, for the first time elected a Jew to its powerful procedural committee. He is Sidney L. Ship-ton, general secretary of the British Zionist Federation, who at one session, presided over the committee. His election, however, appeared to be a gesture of atonement for the anti-Israel bias manifest in the resolutions on the Middle East adopted by the conference.

Weinsteins Plan To Leave For Israel On Aliyah

The occasion of the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the State of Israel seems a most appropriate time for us to bid our many friends in Rhode Island a fond adieu, since we are leaving for Israel on Aliyah. Having served as Educational Director of Temple Emanu-El, I and the members of my family say to the Temple family: "Shalom u'lehitraot!" Although our sojourn in Providence was short it was most memorable. The foundation plans for our Aliyah, though laid in June of 1972 were fully brought to fruition in January of this year. We are especially beholden to Rabbi Joel Zaiman for his endeavors on our behalf. His unique interpretation of the traditional moral and ethical precepts of Judaism were the inspiration for Aliyah, which tops a career of more than 25 years in American Jewish religious and public education.

As yet we do not have a permanent address in Israel, but we can be contacted through our children, Ora and Shlomo Levi, at their gift shop: Eshel's Treasure Trove, 21 Mea Shearim St., Jerusalem. Shalom!

DAYAN RAPS DOVES

TEL AVIV — Defense Minister Moshe Dayan delivered a blistering attack on the doves and singled out Foreign Minister Abba Eban for particularly scathing treatment. Speaking at the closing session of the Labor Party secretariate which had been debating the future of the administered territories, Dayan said he was not shocked by the concept of "creeping annexation" applied in areas such as the environs of Jerusalem, Nebi Samwil, Kiryat Arba near Hebron, Gush Etzion and the Latrun salient, and the Kfar Saba region. He called for more intensive settlement of these areas both by government and private initiative

On behalf of the United Moes Chitim Committee I would like to thank all those who contributed to our campaign. Through your generosity we were able to help many families who would not have been able to celebrate Passover.

Say 'Cheese'

To curb the soaring cost of cheese, President Nixon has ordered a 50 per cent increase in imports of this popular food between now and July 31. This will add a towering 64 million extra pounds to our normal annual import quota of 128 million pounds in the short span of three months, raise the total of cheese imports to 192 million pounds in '73 alone.

As a result, says John T. Dunlop, director of the Cost of Living Council, "We are hopeful ... that rising cheese prices will at least level off."

Note that modest statement: "at least level off." For what that remark is shouting to you is that the most you can hope for is a slowdown in the rise in cheese prices — and in overall food prices from a gallop to a trot in the foreseeable future.

It's utterly unrealistic to grumble about forcing the cost of your marketbasket back to where it was a few months ago: it won't and can't happen.

It's downright nonsense even to talk in terms of halting the rise in living costs across the board. We'll be lucky when we get the annual rise back into the 3 to 4 per cent range.

We've already forfeited the chance for that in 1973. Too much inflation has been built into our price structure in these first five months to permit the '73 rate of rise to return to the 3 per cent level — much less to the 2½ per cent target which the President set for this year.

So what do YOU, a typical city family, do about it?

What you do is try to beat the cost of living on your own. What you do is find and use every rule you can to offset increases in every area — food, shelter, clothing, medical care, personal care, goods and services of all kinds.

That's what I am doing — learning the rules, collecting them and passing them on to you.

For instance, cheese — which compared to steaks and to chops, offers a lot of nutrition for relatively little money.

* Stick to the less expensive domestic cheeses vs. the foreign imports — which, incidentally, have been pushed up in price merely by the devaluations of the U.S. dollar.

* Buy grating cheese in blocks, grate it yourself and save 50 per cent that way alone.

* Buy cheddar in blocks also and slice it as you need it. You'll

Love of Eretz Yisroel

By BERYL SEGAL

The Shtetl on the Ukraine in which I was brought up, small as it was, had three Zionist groups at the time of World War One.

The largest of three was the General Zionists, or Algemeine Zionists as they were called in Yiddish. To this group belonged all those who were brought up on Theodor Herzl, Max Nordau and Ahad Haham. They were good Shekel holding people, middle class substantial citizens. They were content to constantly talk about their love for Zion, and it never occurred to them to leave their homes and business and go to Palestine. Anyone suggesting such a thing to them was branded as a "Socialist" and that was the worst name calling in their vocabulary. Some of them bought land and orchards in Palestine where Arab labor worked.

Then there were the Poale-Zion group. They were the Socialist-Labor Zionists who insisted that there was no future for Jews in Russia; their only hope was Palestine, but a Palestine built by the sweat of their brows. Out of that group came Ben Gurion, Golda Meir and Berl Katzenelson. They went to Palestine to build roads, work on farms and defend it when the need arose. Most of Haganah was recruited from them.

A third group, the youngest of the three, in our little town at least, were the Zeire-Zion, the Zionist Youth. They were more revolutionary than the Poale-Zion, and insisted on going up in groups to take possession of the land and to organize Kibbutzim. But before going up to Palestine they prepared themselves in Hachsharah farms so as to be expert farmers when they got to the land. The heroes of Zeire-Zion were A.D. Gordon, the Jewish Tolstoi, and J.H. Brenner who was killed in an Arab attack.

The Zeire-Zion were, strange at it may seem, sons and daughters of the "nicest" families. A group of Zeire-Zion left from the neighboring Kamenatz-Podolsk for Palestine, and they were all students, teachers, and "Intelligenza" of the city. When we came to Israel we still found a Kibbutz settled by the Kamenetz-Podolsk Zeire-Zion, no longer young then, but living in the Kibbutz founded by them. They guarded the land against marauders, defended it against enemies, and held on tenaciously to the soil.

But the bulk of the population of the Shtetl knew nothing of the bickering and striving that went on between these three groups. They were Jews who loved Israel. To them it was always Eretz Yisroel, the Holy Land, the Land of the Fathers.

How can you love a land that you never saw?

They were never in the land, but they knew as much about it as they knew about themselves.

Eretz Yisroel was the land of Father Abraham and Mother Sarah, where they wandered with their flocks of sheep and cattle. Eretz Yisroel was the home of the founders of the Jewish people and of their faith.

Eretz Yisroel was the land where Mother Rachel lay buried by the side of the road and tears ran from her eyes like water when her children were led in chains into captivity.

Eretz Yisroel was the land of Milk and Honey promised by Moses our Teacher to the Children of Israel when he led them out of Egyptian bondage.

King David and Solomon ruled in the Land of Israel and the Holy Temple stood in Jerusalem in splendor.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK: One of the items searched by security agents aboard the Queen Elizabeth II, prior to its heavily guarded voyage to Israel, were copies of Sandy Lesberg's new cookbook, "At the Table of Israel." More than 500 copies of the book were aboard ship for sale, and agents feared terrorists might have concealed devices inside a copy ... The film version of Cabaret is now being shown in Israel and Egypt — but at Cairo's Palace Theater all references to Jews have been edited out of the film.

Singer Alan Titus, who appeared in Leonard Bernstein's Mass, will perform in Town Hall's new Encore Concert Series. Dubonnet, the French aperitif maker, is sponsoring the concert, and Titus will sing Ravel's drinking song, "Chanson a Boire" ... Joe DiMaggio is to be honored at the second annual Dinner of Champions, under the auspices of the National Multiple Sclerosis

The Children of Israel lived in Eretz Yisroel in peace and tranquility, each under his own vineyard and under his own fig tree, and knew no fear of enemies.

In Eretz Yisroel walked the Judges and the Prophets, and the Elders, and the poets sang their songs from Dan to Beersheba.

They also mourned, these Jews, the fall of Jerusalem so many thousands of years ago and cried and fasted for the glory that was gone as if it happened in their own days, during their own lifetime.

Though not Zionists in the sense we understand it now, the Jews of the Shtetl were always yearning for Zion. An emissary came from Eretz Yisroel and they would gather round him and hang on every utterance from his mouth. He had been in the Land of Our Fathers with his own body, walked the land with his own feet, and touched the Western Wall, the Wailing Wall, with his own hands.

Every Jew in the Shtetl threw in a penny or two in the Reb Meir Baal Nes box, the great worker of miracles, a box that was to be found in most Jewish homes. Through this box they kept ties with the land and the people who sat there and studied Torah.

And when one asked a Jew: Are you a Zionist? He would look at the person who asked the absurd question, and answer:

"Must I be a Zionist to love Eretz Yisroel? Might as well ask me whether I love my father and mother."

They have carried that love thousands of years, through many lands, until it became part of them.

And now that Israel is twenty-five years old, the Jew who knows nothing of party alignments, the Jew for all seasons, will observe the event in his own heart. He will not join in parades, perhaps, to honor the occasion. He will not be among the singers of Hossanah and Hallelujah. The Jew will say with the poet of the Middle Ages, Judah Halevi who in his yearning for Israel sang nearly nine hundred ago:

West and East and North and South,

From far and from near,

We salute you from every side:

Peace! Shalom

ORGANIZATION NEWS

TO PRESENT CONCERT

The Young People's Symphony of Rhode Island will present the final concert of its third year with a performance on Sunday, May 20, at 4:30 p.m. at the Veterans Memorial Auditorium. Dr. Joseph Conte will direct the program of popular music and light classics. Pianist-composer-arranger Michael Renzi's trio will play with the group. Fred Grady, radio personality, will act as master of ceremonies.

Proceeds will help to finance YPSORI's 11 day summer camp-music workshop in Newport from July 12 to 22.

TO PERFORM

The Rhode Island Dance Repertory Company will perform on Saturday, May 19, at 8 p.m. at Winman Junior High School in Warwick. The concert is sponsored by the Rhode Island State Council on the Arts and the Warwick Arts Foundation as part of the Warwick Arts Foundation's 10th anniversary celebration.

Featured on the evening's program will be two works recently added to the company's repertoire, "Sweet Patchwork," choreographed by Carolyn Adams of the Paul Taylor Company, and "Summer Sounds: Driving in a Car," choreographed by Andy Roth. Mr. Roth has been dancing with the company since it was founded and the piece represents his first major choreographic attempt.

TO HOLD AUDITIONS

Theatre-by-the-Sea at Matunuck will hold auditions for local talent to supplement the New York company on Sunday, May 13, at the theater.

Dramatic talent will be seen from 12 noon to 1 p.m.; singers and dancers from 1 to 2 p.m., and musicians will be interviewed at 4 p.m.

Actors should have a short scene prepared or ready to read. Singers should bring music, a pianist will be provided. Musicians should not bring instruments since this is a preliminary interview. No children will be auditioned at this time.

PLAN TEA FOR AGED

A tea for the residents of the Jewish Home for the Aged will be sponsored by the Young Women's Division of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island as part of their Project Mitzvah program. The tea will be held on Tuesday, May 15, at 1 p.m. at the Home. Refreshments will be served and there will be entertainment.

Further information may be obtained by calling 421-4111.

LA LACHE LEAGUE

The Cranston La Lache League will hold its first of a continuing series of discussions on breast feeding on Tuesday, May 15, at 8 p.m. at the home of Alice Connaughton of 25 Belmont Road in Cranston. The topic will be "The Advantage of Breastfeeding to Mother and Baby."

Further information may be obtained by calling Jane Miller at 942-6446.

TO INSTALL OFFICERS

Mrs. Ted Steinberg will be installed as president of the Providence Chapter, Women's American ORT at its annual dinner and installation of officers to be held on Thursday, May 17, at 7:30 p.m. at Marcello's Original Restaurant at 1087 Cranston Street in Cranston.

Other officers who will be installed are Mrs. Errol Hurwitz, Mrs. David Seidman, Mrs. Rhoda Grover, Mrs. Victor Kossoy and Mrs. Leon Missry, vice presidents; Mrs. Alan Pearlman, financial secretary; Mrs. Alan Berman, recording secretary; Mrs. Irving Waldman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Melvin Schwartz, treasurer, and Mrs. Reuben Alexander, parliamentarian. Mrs. Richard Strauss will be installing officer.

DONOR LUNCHEON

The Providence Chapter of Hadassah will hold an Israeli fashion show at its donor luncheon which will be held on Monday, May 14, at 12 noon at the Jordan Marsh Community Room in Warwick Mall. Proceeds of the affair will be used for the Hadassah medical organization in Israel.

Chairmen of the event are Mrs. Manfred Seiden and Mrs. Larry Fain, donor; Mrs. Sanford Rose, reservations; Mrs. Louis Katznelson, treasurer; Mrs. Morris Greenberg, contributors; Mrs. Robert McGarry, publicity; Mrs. Herbert Katz, ad book; Mrs. David Sloane, ad book treasurer; Mrs. Julius Epstein, decorations. A new salon/boutique, known as "i" has just opened at Midland Mall and offers a great deal in the way of natural cosmetics.

They carry a collection of preparations for the face, body and hair, all based on natural fruit, vegetables and herbal ingredients.

"i" was the idea of Lois Muller and Sandy Oringer, two New Yorkers who decided a few years ago that the time for organic cosmetics had come. After opening a shop in midtown New York, they started to franchise their store and line. Pat Plourde has opened the "i" shop at Midland Mall.

Party plans and lecture demonstrations are available. Further information may be obtained by calling Pat Plourde at 828-8784.

PROTEST HARASSMENT

LONDON — Jewish sources in the Soviet Union reported that 50 Moscow Jews went to the Central Committee of the Communist Party, crowded into the reception hall and handed in a letter of protest with all their signatures against harassment of applicants for exit visas to go to Israel. According to the sources, the letter said that freedom to go to Israel for those who want it would save both sides great unpleasantness. They were told that they would get a reply within a few days. The sources reported that 24 Jews went home immediately but 26 others stayed until the evening to make their point and went home late. There were no incidents.

IN BIBLE CONTEST: David Eli Leeman, 17, son of Rabbi and Mrs. Saul Leeman of Cranston, was the second place winner of the Tenth Annual World Bible Contest that took place in Jerusalem on Monday, May 7, as part of Israel's celebration of the 25th anniversary of its independence.

Competing in the contest were 30 teenagers from about a dozen countries, including France, Mexico, the United States, Canada, South Africa, Uruguay, Australia, Venezuela and Israel. The contestants were all top finalists in the National Bible contests of their respective countries. David has been a top winner in the U.S. Bible contest each year for the past four years.

The contest, conducted in Hebrew, requires a mastery of 500 chapters of scripture.

David is a graduate of the Providence Hebrew Day School, and is a senior at Maimonides School in Brookline, Massachusetts. He will remain in Israel until September, at which time he will enter his freshman year at Harvard.

CRITICIZES SYSTEM

CAPE TOWN, SA. — Rabbi A. H. Lapin, Chief Minister of the Cape Town Hebrew Congregation, criticized the system of migratory labor for Black workers in South Africa as out of keeping with the importance which Judaism attaches to the preservation of family life. In a sermon in the Great Synagogue here he said that migratory labor led to a breakdown of family life and suggested that the government, industry and commerce devise alternatives to the migratory labor system.

Jewish Historical Association To Hold 19th Annual Meeting

The Rhode Island Jewish Historical Association will hold its 19th annual meeting on Sunday, May 20, at 2:30 p.m. at the Rhode Island Historical Society Library, 121 Hope Street.

A small group of Rhode Island Jews formed the R.I. Jewish Historical Society which was chartered on September 11, 1951, "to procure, collect and preserve books, records, pamphlets, letters, manuscripts, prints, photographs, paintings, and any other historical material relating to the history of the Jews of Rhode Island; to encourage and promote the study of such history by lectures and otherwise; and to publish and diffuse information as to such history."

The first issue of the Rhode Island Jewish Historical Notes appeared June 1954. The timing of the society's founding and its subsequent first journal was to publicize the celebration of the tercentenary of the Jews in the United States and the centennial of the first Jewish congregation in Providence.

The society, with the guidance of Professor William G. McLoughlin and Professor Sidney Goldstein of the History and Sociology Departments, respectively, of Brown University, has continued to publish the Notes.

Recently sent out to all members of the Association was Volume 6, Number 2 of the R.I. Jewish Historical Notes. This issue contains a history of the Jewish Community Center; four articles on various aspects of 18th century Newport, including three on Touro Synagogue; an exhaustive study of Jews in the textile industry in Rhode Island; Rhode Island Supreme Court cases involving Jews, and a story of Samuel Mason and his work for HIAS in Yokohama.

The Association is a member of the League of Rhode Island Historical Societies. Each year in the spring the annual meeting of the Association features a speaker on the subject of Rhode Island Jewish history. The May 20 annual meeting this year will have as its speaker, Nancy Halverson Schless, president of the Philadelphia chapter and national director of the Society of Architectural Historians.

The Association provides research scholarships to graduate students in history or sociology. The current recipient is working on a demographic study of the Jews in Rhode Island, a followup on studies made by Dr. Goldstein.

Cuban Community Struggles To Maintain Jewish Life

NEW YORK — Cuba's dwindling Jewish community will "almost completely vanish by the end of this century," according to Lavy Becker of Montreal. Speaking to the American section of the World Jewish Congress, he said that the Cuban Jewish community is struggling to maintain Jewish life without any rabbis, cantors, or professional teachers.

Concern for the one million Jews of Latin America was expressed by Dr. Gerhart M. Riegner, of Geneva, WJC secretary-general. "Unless we help these Jewish communities come through this difficult period, we will soon be faced with another serious crisis," he said.

Dr. Riegner stressed that "economic and political uncertainties rather than anti-Semitism represents the root of Latin American Jewry's problems." He said that the WJC had already united the divergent factions of Latin America into an umbrella group where they are working on common concerns.

In his report on Cuba, Becker, the WJC's Consultant on Inter-Community Affairs, unfolded a portrait of Jewish life under the Castro regime and a communist government. He returned last month from his second visit in two years.

The Jewish population of Cuba reached its peak in the 1950's numbering 14,000. Many arrivals were refugees from Nazism. Today 900 Jews live in Havana and 300 are scattered throughout the rest of the island. Most of the remaining Jews are older.

The government, Becker noted, has permitted the community to retain all of its five synagogue buildings, one of which serves as a Jewish Center and house of worship. Subsidies are provided indirectly by the government which rents the synagogue auditoriums for various functions. Additional small contributions are made by the Cuban Jews from their earnings.

Activities of the community include religious services, festival observances, adult education classes, twice-weekly Hebrew lessons for young people, cultural programs, a circulating library and a choral group. Also a Zionist club and Zionist activities are permitted. The community has remained a member of the World

Jewish Congress, and its leaders participate in international meetings, Becker reported. A day school, named after Theodor Herzl, was nationalized as a State School, and with the agreement of the community renamed after Albert Einstein. This was "a more acceptable identity for a communist state, despite Cuba's legation exchange with Israel," Becker observed.

He noted that "as a gesture of cooperation, in a nation with gasoline rationing, the 30 to 40 grade school children are bused to the Einstein School so that they can, after their regular classes, study Hebrew and other Jewish subjects for an additional 90 minutes daily."

Unfortunately, Becker related, the two teachers, whose salaries had been paid by the government, are no longer able to work. Today the children are being taught Hebrew and other subjects by a young Catholic teacher, who received her Hebrew training in the adult classes in the Jewish community center.

Intermarriage Rate High In Denmark

COPENHAGEN — "Three out of four Danish Jews take non-Jewish mates," reports a young sociologist, Jacques Blum, in a book which has just been published in Copenhagen.

According to this study, there were 5,499 Jews in Denmark three years ago. Since then, the Jewish population has been augmented by 3,500 refugees from Poland, of whom only 1,800 have expressed a desire to be part of the organized Jewish community of Denmark.

Until recently, writes Mr. Blum, 57 percent of all married Jews had non-Jewish spouses, but recently that percentage has risen to 75 percent. The author further reports that a statistical search revealed there is a higher rate of divorce in mixed marriages than in those where both partners are Jewish.

The overtrick is the important thing in today's hand although it is a fairly difficult situation to recognize. However, I would wager that more would look for it if the Spades and Diamonds happened to be reversed and the contract was five Diamonds instead of four Spades. Now that extra trick would have to be found or the hand go down. Actually, it shouldn't make any difference to a good player for he automatically ought to play every hand to the hilt and make every trick possible. Some players did make that extra trick because of a favorable lead at trick three but even without that lead a good Declarer can find out exactly how to do the right thing.

Mrs. Bernard Weiner and Mrs. Herman Selya were North and South, East-West were vulnerable, East Dealer with this bidding:

E	S	W	N
P	1♠	2♦	3♦
P	4♠	End

As you can see, we need not comment on the bidding and every pair but one played the hand in four Spades and although I did not see the hand played every round, I am certain that every West played two high Diamonds on the first two tricks. Meanwhile, the Declarers were all quite complacent in the fact that they were sure of making their contract. Most of them didn't even worry about the Club Queen for they could afford to lose it and still make their contract. And anyhow, the finesse might work when they took it.

If West played anything but a Club at trick three the Declarer is on his own for that eleventh trick but two Wests did switch to that Club which, of course, gave a free finesse. Otherwise, every South but two won the Heart which is what the other Wests switched to, drew Trumps and took the Club finesse after playing the King in

Insists Emergency Measures Needed

NEW YORK — Kalman Sultanik, a member of the World Zionist Organization Executive, said last week that the issue of intermarriage and the alienation of Jewish youth has been overstudied and that "the time has come for the initiation of emergency measures to combat the assimilationist epidemic." Sultanik addressed a meeting of the executive board of the American Jewish League for Israel, a constituent of the World Confederation of General Zionists of which he is executive vice president.

He said that "with the estimated rate of intermarriage now reaching 35 percent and as much as 40 percent among Jewish students, the unified Zionist movement in this country can no longer afford to play a low-key role in fighting assimilation." Sultanik said that "intermarriage has been the subject of a multitude of studies, surveys and reports accompanied by the formation of one commission after another." But, he said, the time has come for "emergency measures."

Dummy first. Now they had to lose to the Queen and made only four. How can they play the hand to know exactly how to play those Clubs to guarantee catching the Queen? West did the bidding so some were planning to try to drop a doubleton Queen but that didn't work when they too, played Dummy's King first.

Mrs. Selya decided to leave the Clubs until she could learn more about them. She won the first Heart and ruffed a Heart with a high Trump. Then drew Trumps ending in Dummy, watching as West showed out giving a count on the Trump suit. Next came the second high Heart and another Heart ruff as West showed out again. And now a Diamond ruff with Dummy's last Trump to which East followed with the Jack. Now what is known about the distribution of each hand?

When West showed out of Spades that suit was known, East having three. When West failed on the third round of Hearts, that gave East six. And East followed to three rounds of Diamonds. Add East's known cards and now tell me how many Clubs he can have. One only and it might be any one, the Queen, ten or a low one. If a low one, then West would have to have both the honors and would have a natural trick if he split them when Declarer played to the King-9 in Dummy. But if East's singleton is either the Queen or ten, the suit can be picked up with no loss.

With that in mind, Declarer plays the Ace first and takes a good look at East's card. When she saw it was the 10 she knew by her careful count that West had to have the Queen and that now that the 10 was gone, that Queen could be finessed successfully. It didn't matter whether she played the Jack or small Club to Dummy's nine. Either way no Clubs were lost for her fourth one had been discarded on the Heart King. Every Declarer should have played the hand this way. Maybe they would have had they been forced to make 11 tricks.

Moral: Especially in Duplicate but it should become a habit just in case some day you might need an extra trick, always try to make as many tricks as possible. Assume you are in a contract higher than you actually are and then see how you can make that other trick or two. In other words, don't settle.

He proposed the immediate launching of a program for the establishment of a future network of Zionist day schools patterned after similar schools established by the British Zionist Federation and the South African Zionist Federation. He also proposed the expansion of work-study group tours for Jewish youth to Israel.

ASK EXTRADITION

TEL AVIV — U. S. authorities have requested the extradition of Yohoshua (Gerry) Zeller, a 19-year-old soldier in the Israeli Army, on charges of murder and arson in connection with the fire-bombing of impresario Sol Hurok's New York office January 26, 1972 in which one person was killed. He was remanded in custody for 15 days by a Tel Aviv magistrate and U.S. authorities asked he be held pending the arrival of documents relating to the charges against him. Meanwhile, groups of Soviet immigrants are gathering petitions against his extradition, saying "the boy has risked his life for our cause and we must help him."

MEETING CHAIRMAN: Harold S. Roberts is chairman of the 118th annual congregation meeting of Temple Beth El which will be held on Sunday evening, May 20.

Mrs. Schwartz Named JCC Program Director

Mrs. Irving Schwartz has been appointed program director at the Jewish Community Center, it has been announced by Sigmund J. Hellmann, executive director.

Mrs. Schwartz has been a member of the Center staff for the past 10 years and has been serving as the director of the children's department. In this capacity she was responsible for the supervision of all Center activities for elementary school-aged children, including the Center nursery school. She has also been assistant director of Camp Centerland, the Center summer day camp, and director of Camp Small Fry and Camp Jay-Cee, the Center's incity day camps for young children.

Mrs. Schwartz attended Brooklyn College, the Rhode Island School of Design and the Boston University Graduate School of Social Work Institutes. She is the corresponding secretary of the New England Association of Jewish Center Workers. She is married to Irving Schwartz, vice president of Chemical Products Corporation. They have two children, Peter who is a student at Worcester Polytechnic Institute, and Erna, a student at Brown University.

Mrs. Schwartz will assume her new duties in June.

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

BAGGATAWAY: It was the original and universal game of the American Indians. The French explorers called it "Lacrosse." It was played from Canada to Florida and west to the great plains. The Choctaw version of the game, played in the Southeastern section of the U.S., involved two webbed bats or crosses. North Indians used only one cross. The ball was made of deerskin, stuffed hard with hair, and it was — and still is — a rugged game demanding skill, speed and endurance. The Indians sometimes had several hundred players on a side! So remember that when you see those Brown U. players carrying a "crosse" on the way to "Lacrosse."

DR. NAISMITH'S IDEA: John White, an English artist, visited Virginia in 1585. There he saw the Indians playing a game in which they cast a ball at a square target placed on the top of a high tree.

Hello Again!

Forerunner of basketball? Could have been, eh.

TUT, TUT, SIR THOMAS: Starvation, malaria and Indian attacks were taking their toll in the Colony of Jamestown in 1611 and Sir Thomas Dale had hastened across the sea with a relief ship to help the colonists. When he debarked, he found the starving colonists deeply engrossed in a game of Bowls. It was the first game of any athletic competition played by white men in America. They didn't even notice the man who had sailed the seas to help them. Early evidence of the hysteria we Americans have for sports. Sir Thomas became a bit enraged and threatened to put the players in irons.

HORRORS! Up in New England a few years after the Jamestown bowling incident, Governor William Bradford voiced his objection to sports with the vehemence of Sir Thomas. Omigodness! The Gov actually saw men "in ye streete at play, openly; some pitching ye barr & some at stoolle ball—" The Governor stopped such shenanigans; gaming! reveling! Abominable! (Pitching ye Barr was something like javelin throwing and "stool ball" was an early form of Cricket.)

THE DUTCH: It is written that sports made little headway on this side of the Atlantic until the Dutch arrived. Bowling on the Green was popular with them. An ancient picture shows a game at Bowling Green in New York City and it shows the Dutch bowling at some objects that resemble the present-day pins. Different than the other "Bowling on the Green" game in which there are no pins.

NOT SO POPULAR: The game of "Gander Pulling" did not retain its popularity. The old picture shows a participant in the bow of a small boat going down the stream across which was stretched a rope. Hanging from the rope was a Gander, the point being for the man to grab the Gander's head and pull it off its body. If he did it, he was given the Gander and if he failed, he got a ducking in the water (Wonder why they didn't say "Gandering" instead of "ducking?")

PROVERBIAL: Wonder if Henry C. "Duke" Duquette ever bowled on the green? Duquette emulates the proverbial "one-armed-paper-hanger." He is Executive Secretary for R.I. Duckpin Bowling Association; 1st V.P. for National Duckpin Bowling Congress; answers a thousand and one questions while serving a dozen people coffee, donuts, muffins and such at the same time. Duke moves from the Legion Bowladrome in Cranston to every section of Rhode Island and nearby environs while supervising Bowling Tournaments. That involves Connecticut where the two-thousand dollar star AM tournament will take place in Manchester on June 14 and 15. It's open to men and women and he'll tell you all about it.

GREAT WOMEN: Add the name of Kay Foley who has won the "Most Valuable Bowler" honors for the season in the R.I. Intercity Women's Bowling League. More than 210 bowlers in that 42-team circuit. Kay was awarded "The Big O Trophy" for outstanding achievement. It is only the second time it has gone to a woman and from the way the gals are moving ahead, it will not be the last time! — CARRY ON!

- save at least 10¢ a pound.
- Buy cheese in plain packages vs. fancy containers. Gift-wrapped packages of cheese are often priced out of sight. Remember this at Christmas when you are tempted to splurge on tinsel-wrapped cheese wedges.
- Prepare your own cheese dips, using the basic cheese plus whatever flavoring you prefer. You'll save, and your dip probably will be better-tasting than the prepared type.
- Avoid cheese from pressurized cans. Obviously you pay plenty for this type of package.
- And while you're in the dairy section of the supermarket, consider milk — another good source of protein — and how to get bargains in it.
- If your family drinks a lot of milk, buy it in gallon containers. This size is always cheaper than by the quart.
- If you are using regular milk for cooking, use nonfat dry milk and canned evaporated milk. And if you are using skim milk, make it from dry milk at half the cost. (Be quiet about it and see if your family notices; I'll wager they won't.)

- If your family agrees, mix non-fat milk half and half with fresh and thereby cut your milk bill one-third. (Again, see whether your family notices the difference.)
- Buy cream according to the degree of richness you actually need — for adding to cereals or fruit, for cooking, for whipping. The price is directly related to the fat content.
- Finally, eggs are certainly a low-cost meat substitute and a protein bargain.
- Don't waste money buying first-grade eggs when lower-grade will be just as good for your purposes. You need Grade AA or Grade A eggs only if you are poaching, boiling or frying. Grades B and C are good for scrambling, for general cooking and for use in cakes and pies.
- Don't pay more for white eggs. Brown eggs have the same nutritional value and you won't detect any difference in taste.
- Simple, aren't they? But did you know all these rules for getting the most nutritional value in cheese, milk and eggs for the fewest dollars?

Protest Forest For Royalty

LONDON — Ahmed Anis, director of the Arab League Office here, has warned that the Jewish National Fund's presentation to Prince Philip of a volume recording the planting of a million tree forest near Nazareth in honor of his and Queen Elizabeth II's 25th wedding anniversary would put a severe strain on Anglo-Arab relations. Meanwhile, Minister of State Julian Amery accepted an invitation to address the JNF Guildhall dinner May 7 at which Prince Philip will also speak. Anis said "it would have been more appropriate if the million trees were planted in Britain. The Arabs real misgiving is that the land on which the forest is being planted is Arab land, unjustly expropriated. The legislation under which the land was taken away can only be described as legalized robbery." He said a protest to the Palace has been organized by Arab students in London.

On Israel's 25th Anniversary

Mood Made Up Of Equal Parts Relief, Confidence, Concern

JERUSALEM — Israelis are celebrating the 25th anniversary of their independence in a mood that seems to be made up of equal parts of relief that the past is behind them, confidence in the present, and concern about the future.

A series of conversations on the eve of the anniversary with six different Israelis produced, as the Israeli joke goes, seven different opinions about the state of the nation.

But a consensus emerged from the conversations. The six spoke of their great satisfaction that their country was politically established, militarily strong and economically buoyant. At the same time, they acknowledged that it was faced by serious social inequality, communal tension and the consequences of galloping modernization.

Just as there was a common gratification among the six that the Jewish people had finally established a state, there was a common lament that the state had not measured up to the ideals of the founding fathers.

Nothing Like the Dream

In no case did the Israel of 1973 faintly resemble what any of the six had imagined on May 14, 1948, when former Premier David Ben-Gurion proclaimed Israel's independence in a stark and simple ceremony in Tel Aviv.

The question at that time, as Foreign Minister Abba Eban has observed, was not the next 25 years but the next 24 hours. A combined Arab force was threatening Israel from three sides.

"Israel experienced the joy of birth and the fear of death in a single day," he said recently. "There was the exultation of the declaration of the independence coupled with an obsessive doubt about whether it could be made good."

Same Themes Come Up

- The gap — social, economic and personal — that separates the white descendants of the European Jews from the darker-skinned immigrants from North African and Arab countries. Few of the six interviewed believed that the gap was being closed at a satisfactory rate.

- Israel's headlong transformation into a full-blown industrialized society and all the accompanying assaults on the quality of life here.

- The status of the more than 400,000 "Israeli Arabs" — those who have lived, often as second class citizens, inside Israel since the 1948 war.

- The "bureaucratization" of Israeli life; the ensnaring red tape, the need to have "proteksia" — the Israeli equivalent of clout — to get a response from most Government offices.

- The generalized lack of concern about these and other problems. Several of the six felt strongly that most Israelis, burdened by two jobs, financial worries and the desire for more luxuries, seldom gave much thought to the internal fabric of their society and its direction.

The Positive Aspects

In contrast to their concerns, the six also mentioned several aspects of Israeli society that gave them great satisfaction:

- Israel, despite 25 years of hot and cold war, universal conscription and the omni-presence of weapons and uniforms, has not degenerated into a militaristic state.

- Over the years, an intellectual freedom and diversity of opinion has grown up in Israel in place of the rigid political and ideological dogmatism that typified life here in the early years of the state. Several of the six thought that this development had been most striking since the 1967 war.

- Their belief that, despite the frequently-heard lament about its decline, the kibbutz movement and the principles it represents are still alive and well in Israel. Two of the six, kibbutzniks themselves, believe the institution has a promising future.

Their Roles in Life

The six Israelis who expressed these and other views in a series of conversations included a former ambassador, a retired university president, a Jerusalem poet, a novelist living on a kibbutz, a professor and an Israeli Arab who has lived here all his life and considers himself as Israeli as any Jew.

In a place as diverse as Israel, no individual typifies more than a small segment of society. But the six have one common characteristic: They were all either here in 1948 or actively involved with the founding of the state, and they have all lived here through Israel's first quarter-century.

They also represent different steps on the Israeli economic ladder. The former university president, for instance, lives in a handsome old house that opens onto an elegant sculpture garden. The Israeli Arab lives in a modest stone house near the railroad tracks.

The six range in age from 34 to 70, but each remembers vividly where he was and what he was doing on May 14, 1948.

A Speech, and Bombers

Shlomo Avineri, for instance, was a 14-year-old messenger boy for the Tel Aviv branch of the Haganah, the Israeli underground. Born in Poland and brought here as a child, he remembers listening to Mr. Ben-Gurion read the independence declaration on the radio. A few hours later, he recalled, the first Egyptian bombers appeared over Tel Aviv.

Mr. Avineri, now a professor of political science at Hebrew University, talked about Israel in his comfortable apartment in Jerusalem.

"I expected Israel to be much more of a social-democratic model than it is," he said. "We are still more egalitarian than most West-

Plan LIFE Report On State Of Israel

NEW YORK — Time Inc. will publish "The Spirit of Israel", a one-time Special Report bearing the LIFE magazine logo.

The LIFE Special Report will appear on newsstands only, with a worldwide distribution of 750,000 copies starting with the week of Israel's 25th Anniversary. The magazine will contain no advertising and will have a single-copy price of $1.50. Copies go on sale nationally, starting May 14. A reduced rate is available for bulk orders which may be placed by phoning 800-621-8200.

If the special Israel issue meets the reception hoped for it, it may be followed by other one-time publications carrying the LIFE logo and utilizing LIFE's brand of picture and text journalism.

"The Spirit of Israel" will be LIFE magazine trim-size, and will contain 92 editorial pages. The Safran Printing Company of Detroit, will print it using the off-set method.

Edited by Philip B. Kunhardt, a former LIFE assistant managing editor, the Special Report will trace the story of the land which became the Israeli state and its people — from the early Zionists of the turn of the century to the most recent immigrants from Russia.

About 80 percent of the magazine is pictures, many taken in the last few weeks. Picture chapters will be devoted to all aspects of Israeli life, Independence Day celebrations, the Six Day War, life in the occupied territories and guerrilla warfare. Major picture essays by distinguished former LIFE photographers are planned: Co Rentmeester is contributing a portrait of Tel Aviv; Harry Benson, an intimate essay on the Sabras, the native-born Israelis; and Cornel Capa, a variety of Israeli scenes.

Among the textpieces — all original material — is an article by English journalist Harry Craig on the Arab viewpoint today and a historical treatment of Israel done by Professor Walter Lacqueur of the University of Tel Aviv.

'It's A Small Revolution' Brought About By The Club

"It's a small revolution," says Haim S., 28, the intense active Secretary of the Jewish Agency-sponsored Public Development Council of Netivot.

We are in the pleasant clubroom of the Netivot Laundry Club, a large spacious building provided rent-free by the Jewish Agency with funds raised by the United Jewish Appeal. The coffee urn is steaming, and over the humming of the five modern washing machines in the room behind us, we hear the voices of the women in the home economics class. To judge by the noise, over a dozen kids are enjoying their supervised play in the yard outside, and the old-fashioned foot-pedal machines in the sewing room are going at top speed.

A development town founded in 1966, Netivot is on the road from Beersheba to Gaza. The Club serves a neighborhood of about 200 families, a fifth of the town's present population of 6,500. Mainly from North Africa, the families are large, their breadwinners are generally unskilled, and their incomes low. Boredom and fatigue were the daily lot of the housewives of the quarter, and laundry one of their biggest problems.

Miriam A., who operates the Club and contributes greatly to its cheerful atmosphere, is a neighborhood girl. "We couldn't afford washing machines in Morocco, either," she says. "But my mother and aunts would get together in the back yard and light a fire under the boiler. My grandmother would cook for the whole family, I'd keep an eye on the little kids. Washing is never easy, but we'd help each other and have like a little holiday."

The Laundry Club has changed all this for the neighborhood women. They bring their heavy washing in once a week, and many of them return several times to attend classes.

"That's one aspect of the revolution," says Haim. "When you see a woman leaving the sewing class with maybe her first pair of curtains, when another reports that she is saving on her food budget since she learned how to make the best use of her refrigerator, you know that something has changed for them, that they are coming closer to the mainstream of Israeli life."

"But that's not all. The club has a wider meaning that can be applied all over Israel. It shows that if you have a good idea, you can get cooperation. We get this building rent-free from AMI-GOOR, the Jewish Agency housing management company. The Ministry of Education provides the teachers and the Ministry of Welfare and the municipality pays Miriam's salary."

As we leave, a shy, worn woman smiles at Miriam and whispers something in her ear.

"That's Mazal F.," Miriam tells us. "She still has six of her nine children living at home, but she was the first to sign up for the Hebrew classes. She just told me that she went to see her sister, and changed buses three times without asking a single question, because she can now read the direction signs."

In Netivot, the signs seem to be pointing in a direction which many other small Israeli towns can take.

Guerrilla Leaders Challenge Qaddafi

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Two Palestinian guerrilla leaders have attacked the President of Libya, Col. Muammar el-Qaddafi, and challenged him to nationalize United States oil interests in his country.

Salah Khalaf, the No. 2 man in Al Fatah, and Nayef Hawatmeh, the head of a Marxist guerrilla group, the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, spoke at a rally held at the Shatila refugee camp here in commemoration of the guerrillas killed in the Israeli raid on Lebanon on April 10.

Mr. Khalaf, citing statements Colonel Qaddafi made on April 15, said that "the voices that say the guerrilla movements exist only in radio broadcasts must shut up," and added, "When we hear that an Arab ruler has nationalized the oil, only then will we know that he has taken a stand in support of the Palestinian revolution."

Mr. Hawatmeh said the commando movement's problem "is more with certain Arab regimes than with Israel," adding, "This is because Israel is an open enemy while the Arab regimes are a cover behind which imperialism hides."

"To those who say that the commando movement is finished and to our brother, Muammar el-Qaddafi, we say, "Nationalize the imperialist interest in your country."

'Status Quo Vadis' Allowed To Proceed

JERUSALEM — The Knesset education committee was asked to decide whether the play Status Quo Vadis should be performed around the country under the sponsorship of the Education Ministry. The Knesset voted to send the matter to committee after two Orthodox MKs, Dr. Yehuda Ben Meir of the National Religious Party and Avraham Werdiger of Poale Agudat Israel, alleged that the play was "anti-religious."

Deputy Premier and Education Minister Yigal Allon told the Knesset that he supported the Omanut Laam theatrical department's decision to produce the play. Omanut Laam is run jointly by the Education Ministry, Histadrut and the Israel-America Cultural Foundation. It arranged theatrical performances in new development areas. Allon said the group had assured him that the play was not anti-religious in any way.

University Sets Up Center For Studies

One thousand young Israeli men and women, determined to earn advanced degrees, but previously unable to pursue their studies because of economic problems, are now being provided with a solution to their perplexing dilemma.

This, their "last chance," has been granted to them by the Center for Pre-Academic Studies, in which they have enrolled this year. The center is a department of Jerusalem's Hebrew University, and upon completing its prescribed courses, the young Israeli is accepted as a regular student at the university.

Dr. David Harman, the Center's Director, reports that its enrollment of 1,000 this year is more than the entire student body put together over the previous nine years of its existence, reflecting a recent and truly dramatic expansion of its program. Dr. Harman points out that fully 90 per cent of the Center's graduates over its 10 years of existence have gone on to enroll as full-time students at the Hebrew University. He strongly emphasizes the fact that these students would never have been able to continue their educations otherwise.

The majority of students in attendance at the center come from financially and culturally deprived "oriental" families among whom there are very few who attain a college education.

The Center was established as an experiment in February 1963 by the Hebrew University, the Ministry of Defense and the Ministry of Education and Culture. Its purpose was to prepare a small group of soldiers about to leave the army—from families of Asian and North African origin and with economically disadvantaged backgrounds for a full academic curriculum. There were fewer than 50 in that original group.

From its original blueprint as an institution accepting only soldiers, the center broadened its scope to include young people from slums and developments.

Dr. Harman speaks proudly of his students' thirst for knowledge, pointing out that only 7 per cent of Center graduates going on to study at the University subsequently dropped out, an exceptionally low proportion compared with other schools.

Students from the Center have also gone on to advanced study at other institutions of higher learning in Israel. Dr. Harman estimates that 95 per cent of the students enrolled are able to do so because they are awarded scholarships. The Israeli government provides a portion of the funds for the scholarships. Other sources are the United Jewish Appeal, the Hebrew University itself and other charitable organizations and individuals.

Currently, the Center's trimester program is divided between the university's Mount Scopus campus and a former monastery structure in Jerusalem's Musrara quarter. By next year, all students will attend classes in the soon to be completed Louis and Eli Rousson building now under construction on Mount Scopus.

The "last chance" for that original 50 has become the "new beginning" for countless other deserving and educationally starved Israeli young men and women.

With financial assistance flowing from Jewish individuals and organizations throughout the world—including the United Jewish Appeal—Israel's young people are en route to a brighter tomorrow.

ern states, but there has been a drift toward a more bourgeois society that I don't like."

We now have a new class of Government-encouraged capitalists who are getting rich as a result of Government policies. They're accumulating wealth all out of proportion with the system."

Ben-Gurion Steps Down

Mr. Avineri said that the key to the flourishing of intellectual life here was the traumatic process he described as the "de-Ben-Gurionization" of Israel. It began, he said, in 1963, when Mr. Ben-Gurion relinquished the post of Premier after 15 years on the job.

"He dominated everything, from politics to biblical scholarship, and stifled all debate," Mr. Avineri said. "Today, nothing is taboo — any policy can be challenged. The country has matured."

Another sign of maturity, the professor said, was the social mobility in Israel today. "When I was 16, he recalled, 'I never dreamt of going up to the university for an academic life. Then it wasn't done. You were supposed to go to a kibbutz and build the land."

"Today, it's taken for granted. Young people can study, go abroad, pick their own career. It's up to them."

First Envoy to U.S.

Eliahu Elath was in Washington on May 14, 1948, where, as the representative of the Jewish Agency, he received the United States' formal recognition of the new Jewish state. He became Israel's first Ambassador to the United States and later president of Hebrew University. Retired now, he has time to admire his wife's sculptures in their garden and to talk about Israel.

"We've created the practical solution to centuries of Jewish homelessness," he said. "A complete Jewish community in a place we call our own."

In large measure, Israel has fulfilled Mr. Elath's dreams. At the same time, he is concerned about the "bureaucratization" of Israel as he calls it, and by the urbanization that has been so dramatic in the last 25 years. A total of 85 per cent of the population now lives in the cities.

"Urbanization represents a terrific moral and social danger for Israel," he said. "It can carry us back to the sort of middle-class Jewish society we left behind in Europe."

Dreams and Reality

Amos Oz, by contrast, feels that Israel has fallen far short of the founders' dreams of a unique social experiment. A 34-year-old novelist, born and reared in Jerusalem, was filling sandbags with other schoolchildren on May 14, 1948. Now he makes his home on Kibbutz Hulda, an agricultural settlement halfway between Jerusalem and Tel Aviv.

"My grandfather and parents came from Russia to build a model socialist society — to beat the Russians at their own revolution," he said. "It was an unbelievable ambition. They managed to create the state, but then they became so infatuated with the toys of statehood — a flag to wave and embassies abroad — that they forgot their original dream of something different."

Talking about the kibbutz on which he has lived half his life, Mr. Oz said that it had become a much more relaxed, self-confident institution during the last 17 years.

"In the early days," he said, "the whole kibbutz went through a crisis every time a member received a phonograph or something special from a relative abroad. The fact that one member had something the others didn't seemed to threaten the very existence of the place."

"Now they take such things in stride. They can even laugh at themselves — that's the healthiest sign."

Mr. Oz thinks, in fact, that as conditions in Israeli cities continue to deteriorate, the kibbutz will evolve as the more attractive alternative for many Israelis.

"We've become the nearest thing to a country gentry that Israel will ever have," he said with a smile.

'A Place to Live'

Another view of the kibbutz was offered by Ehud Avriel, a Viennaborn Israeli who has lived all over the world. He was buying arms for Haganah in Prague on May 14, 1948, and subsequently served as Israeli ambassador to Czechoslovakia and five other countries. The home he has always returned to, however, is Kibbutz Neot Mordechai, in the Northern Galilee.

"The kibbutz is a place to live today, not an ascetic exercise in self-sacrifice," he said. "I think we should pamper and encourage it, because it is the only feasible way to settle new immigrants on the land, rather than in the cities."

On May 14, 1948, a very new Israeli, T. Carmi, was lying in a field in Jerusalem with a machine gun, waiting for the Arab Legion to advance. The son of an American rabbi, he came here in 1947 (Continued on page 14)

Israeli Wine Industry Increases Diversification

NEW YORK — In this country, traditional wine for most Jewish families has come to mean the sweet heavy wines made almost entirely from Concord grapes, most of which are grown in New York State.

Most of the so-called Kosher wines are doctored with sugar, partly to make them sweeter and partly to offset the unusually high acidity of the Concord grape.

In recent years, some efforts have been made to cut the sweetness of these wines, in response to the growing sophistication of American wine drinkers. Even so, they still bear little resemblance to the drier table wines that have become so popular.

27 Varieties Available

This year, many Jewish families combined religious tradition and contemporary taste by serving Israeli wines during the Passover season. Israel's wine makers produce some 27 varieties of wines, all of which are available in this country and all of which are, necessarily, kosher.

The Israeli wine industry, from vines to bottles, is Government-owned, so there is no problem about brand choice: they all bear the Carmel Wine Company label.

Carmel dates back only to 1952 when the company was founded in this country to market the wines. A similar company has been doing the same thing in Britain since 1897. The United States and England are the two biggest customers for Israeli wines, but they are also sold in about 30 other countries.

Wine was produced in Palestine at least 2,000 years before Christ and Biblical references to wine and vineyards are almost too numerous to mention. In fact, wine apparently was more plentiful than water and was used in house cleaning chores, as medicine and as dyes.

Dates Back to 1870

Roman legions tore up most of the Palestinian vineyards in 70 A.D. and those that were replanted were destroyed during the long years of Arab conquest before the Crusades.

According to Alexis Lichine's "Encyclopedia of Wines," the modern story of Palestinian wines began in 1870 when an agricultural school was founded at Mikveh with a program that included experimentation with wine grapes. Some Christian monastic orders were growing grapes in the country and, in 1880, German Templars planted large tracts of land in the Carmel district with vines from the Rhine Valley.

Around the same time, the first Zionists were beginning to arrive in Palestine and some of them, underwritten by Baron Edmond de Rothschild, began planting vineyards and by 1890, some 7,000 acres of grapes were in cultivation.

In 1906, the Rothschilds turned the vineyards over to the growers. The cooperative they founded still exists. In fact, it produces some 75 per cent of Israel's wines.

The cooperative has two major facilities, one at Rishon-le-Zion, near Tel Aviv; the other at Zikhron Ya'agov, a few miles south of Haifa. Not until the establishment of Israel, however, did the nation's wine business begin to prosper.

The influx of thousands of immigrants, some of them trained viticulturists, led to vastly increased domestic consumption of wine and, by 1950, to a doubling of the wine grape acreage. Today, there are some 10,000 acres of vines in Israel.

Here in the United States, the Israel wine industry hopes to build a market for Carmel wines both as holiday wines and as table wines for any meal.

Promotional efforts recently have dwelt heavily on the original Rothschild influence and, in fact, there are Bordeaux qualities to the Israeli wines. But they are wines of the Mediterranean basin, much more akin to the wines of Greece or Cyprus. To burden the wines by forcing a comparison with Bordeaux is unfair to them. They should be drunk and appreciated in their own class.

Carmel wines, which are mostly under $2.50 a bottle are widely available in this country, particularly in metropolitan areas. The best known include Adom Atic, a Burgundy type; Avdat Red and Avdat White, blended along Bordeaux lines; Partom, a port style, and Sharir, a sherry.

The inventory includes a champagne, brandies, liqueurs, even a gin and a vodka. One of the brandies, of which there are reputed to be only 2,000 bottles available, was released just for Israel's 25th anniversary. It comes in a blue satin bag and is called not surprisingly, Carmel 25th Anniversary Brandy.

There is another way to enjoy Israeli wine: own your own vineyard. An outfit called Israel International Corporation will sell you a half-dunam (50-by-100 foot) share of a vineyard near Zikhron Ya'agov, for about $2,500. Your deed, the company claims, entitles you to 10 cases of your own wine, with your private label, every year. Israel International is in Greenwich, Connecticut.

Rubin Dobin of Lawrence, Long Island, one of the promoters, said the company is also buying land near Nazareth and Bethlehem.

WARSAW THEATER TO TOUR

BONN — The State Jewish Theater of Warsaw will tour West Germany this year. The ensemble, the only one outside the Soviet Union to use Yiddish, was reformed after 1968 when its director, Ida Kaminska, and several actors left Poland as a result of the government's anti-Semitic campaign against Israel and Zionism.

Attempts To Break Monopoly On Diamond Polishing Machines

HAIFA — Automatic diamond polishing machinery, invented at the Technion - Israel Institute of Technology, is revolutionizing Israel's 1386 million diamond export industry, but Israel's monopoly use of the machines may be broken by an unauthorized manufacturer who threatens to export them.

Over 150 of the automatic faceting and girdle polishing machines invented by Professor Yeshaya Yarnitsky, Director of the Stone Technology Center of the Technion Research and Development Foundation Ltd., are now being used in Tel Aviv diamond processing plants, and the Israel Diamond Institute, which financed the development of the machines, has refused all requests from other countries to export them.

The Israel diamond industry, the country's largest exporter and the world leader in cut diamond exports, has sought to keep a monopoly on the machines in order to preserve the competitive advantage they provide.

The Diamond Institute granted manufacturing rights to Kulso Ltd. of Haifa, a subsidiary of Philadelphia-based Kulicke and Soffa Inc., and Kulso has produced the 150 machines now in use.

Prior to production, the Institute filed Israel patent applications but a Tel Aviv manufacturer obtained models of the girdling machines and is producing copies which he is preparing to export. There is demand for the machines in West Germany, Belgium, South Africa and the United States.

Professor Yarnitsky said that this manufacturer is trying to capture the market for the machines, on which he pays no royalties.

The Diamond Institute invested more than $60,000 in the development of the machines.

The Technion-invented machines were first introduced into Israeli industry in 1971.

One machine provides error-free automation for the important stages of grinding and polishing the angled faces (facets) onto the diamond. For centuries, and still today, this has traditionally been hand-done by skilled craftsmen, of whom there is a shortage in Israel.

Under the traditional system, the diamond to be polished is fitted into a small vise, called a dop, which is held in the worker's hand and pressed against a fast-revolving wheel (scaife) to grind the facets onto the diamond and polish them. Only one or two skilled craftsmen can work around a scaife at the same time.

In contrast, four of Professor Yarnitsky's compact machines can work at each scaife, with only one semi-skilled operator needed to supervise a group of machines and to place the diamond into each prior to automatic operation.

The machine is designed to grind the facet of each diamond to its correct depth, then automatically lift the diamond away from the scaife and swivel it around to the correct position for grinding the next facet.

How Much Are You Making?

People are always asking the actors and the writers how much money they make. This is a question these gentle people wouldn't dare ask of the laundryman, the retail merchant, the scrap-metal dealer, or even the major, whose salary is a matter of public record.

They feel no compunction, however, with actors, song writers, and other creative people. An actor who has spent 12 years in his profession trying to master his craft at an average of $1,000 a year will always seem overpaid.

He may have worked a 16-hour day for $30 a week in summer stock; he may have landed a lucky job at $50 a week in an off-Broadway show; he may spend 12 years selling neckties in Macy's during the Christmas season before he finally lands a good part in a Broadway show he knows is destined for a four-month run at best.

But people whistle in admiration when, in stunned embarrassment, he confesses that he makes $350 a week. That's wonderful money, they tell him, for three or four hours' work.

But people are intensely interested in how much a creative man makes. Why?

Because the commercial society feels a guilt. And the creative man inspires this guilt. He is not inadequate in the way the commercial society knows and feels it is inadequate. The commercial society tries to relieve this guilt two or three times a year by going up to the schoolhouse and bullying the teachers, or sitting on the dais and throwing weight around, but it doesn't work. It is not enough.

There are a few million men in America who would gladly do what Willie Mays does for nothing. People sense an impropriety in the fact that on top of all this Mays gets more than $100,000 a year.

The commercial society takes on the pain of mercantile endeavor. Secretaries misfile important correspondence, the employees are demanding a new water cooler on the factory floor, the salesman loses his samples, the raw material or the new part for the busted machine is delayed in transit.

For all of this pain, the commercial society needs to reward itself with money. The creative man creates; that's his reward. But when the creative man makes money on top of it, well, this is just too much to hear.

So they ask, "How much are you making?" And whether you reply or not, they think it is too much.

When I Came to Carolina

Thirty years ago this spring, I stepped from a train into the Charlotte train station. The station was then downtown and from it I could see the lights of the Greyhound bus terminal and the Charlotte Hotel. I count myself one of the first immigrants to the new South.

Over these three decades, the South along with the southwest and California is the recipient of the new immigration.

The immigrants are not foreigners as they were in the eastern seaboard and midwestern cities but native-born citizens moving from the old industrial base in the north to the new one in the south.

Six New Trustees Named At Miriam Annual Meeting

Six new trustees were elected at the 47th annual meeting of The Miriam Hospital Corporation held on May 8. The new trustees are Andrew J. Joslin, lawyer with Zietz, Sonkin and Radin; Mrs. Frank Licht, wife of former Governor Licht; Alvin W. Pansey of Pansy Weaving Mills; Harris Rosen of School House Candy Company; Lila M. Sapinsley, R.I. State Senator, and Mrs. Leonard J. Friedman, former president of the hospital's Women's Association.

Robert A. Riesman, industrialist, was elected as a life member of the board of trustees. Norman M. Fain was reelected as president; Stanley Grossman as vice president; Edwin S. Soforenko as treasurer, and Edmund Wexler as secretary.

Reelected to three year terms as members of the board of trustees were Melvin G. Alperin; Dr. Werner A. Baum, Sol Koffler, Herbert Malin and Harold A. Winstead.

Selected to serve on the board as representatives of the Rhode Island Board of Rabbis were Rabbi Jacob Handler of Temple Beth Israel and Rabbi Leon M. Mozeson of Congregation Shaare Zedek-Sons of Abraham. Mrs. William E. Reeves, incoming president of the Women's Association also was elected to the board.

Joseph Thaler, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the report. Members of the committee include Lawrence S. Gates, Samuel J. Medoff, Mrs. Eugene M. Nelson and Ralph P. Semonoff.

Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, general director of Beth Israel Hospital in Boston, Massachusetts, was the guest speaker.

Some synagogues are discriminated against, he charged, because the NRP majority on the councils does not like the political attitudes of the rabbi and congregation. and emerged as one of the heroes of the 1948 war. He has since become one of Israel's leading Hebrew poets. He lives in an apartment in a house in Abu Tor, a mixed Jerusalem neighborhood. A family of Jews recently immigrated from Iran, lives in the basement beneath him.

"We are light-years apart," he said unhappily. "When will we learn to communicate? Not in my lifetime."

— Mr. Carmi — T. Carmi is the name he goes by — is struck by the differences between his attitudes 25 years ago and those of his son, now 22 and just out of the army.

"He is much more disillusioned than I was at his age," he said. "He looks around him now and he sees poverty, deprived groups, abuses of political power — a pattern of social corruption. But he is also probably much more realistic about what is going on around him than I was at his age."

The Arab's Story

Omar Othman was also in Jerusalem on May 14, 1948, huddled on the floor of his father's house next to the railroad tracks that ultimately became the dividing line between Israel and Jordan. When the fighting was over, the Othman family found itself 50 feet inside Israel.

"I had friends among the Jews," he said, "but every time there was an incident along the borders, the bitterness came out. Once, when a bomb went off in

SYRIA RECEIVES ARMS

JERUSALEM — Syria is once more on the receiving end of a massive Soviet arms lift, this time on an unprecedented scale, Israeli sources reportedly told British newsmen recently. The report carried in the London "Financial Times" and picked up for quotation here, said the shipments include the most modern tank in the Soviet arsenal, the T-62 and Sam-2 and Sam-3 anti-aircraft missiles. Israeli news reports stated that the arms deliveries are "aimed at bolstering (Syria's) offensive and defensive capacity."

BEACHES UNFIT

TEL AVIV — Two more beaches on Israel's Mediterranean coastline have been declared unfit for bathing because of sewage pollution. Both are adjacent to this crowded metropolis. Interior Ministry officials told newsmen here that they closed the beaches because bacteriological tests have shown a considerable increase in the contamination of the sea off the two bathing areas coming from the sewage piped into it.

Jerusalem, I ran home. I knew I'd be arrested or beaten up if they caught me.

The worst time for Mr. Othman was the 1967 war.

A Jewish neighbor who lives in the apartment house across the way came onto the balcony with a machine gun on the first day of the war," he recalled. "He shouted at me: 'Now I am going to kill you. We've beaten three Arab states and now I am going to get you. You're an Arab just like them.'"

"I ran inside, closed the shutters and we stayed there for three days," Mr. Othman said.

Despite the difficulties and discrimination he has suffered in the last 25 years, Mr. Othman intends to stay in Israel. He says he will stay even if a Palestinian state is formed on the West Bank of the Jordan.

"I am an Israeli now," he said. "I was born here, went to school here and I belong here."

Cleveland and Chicago, to take two examples, count fewer citizens each census. Their workers are leaving heavy industry for electronics, aerospace and science-based industries elsewhere.

Florida is also a southern melting pot if you will, although we are aware the melting pot didn't melt. The aged come to Florida and so, too, do the Cubans. Miami has a large Cuban-refugee population.

Among the exotic immigrants into the industrialized centers of the South have been the Cuban Jews who fled Castro.

Almost all of them were born in Europe and were the children of a small cohort who found safety in Cuba (another small cohort still lives in the Dominican Republic).

These Cubanos who come originally from Vienna or Salzburg or Budapest speak Spanish with an accent. When they speak English they sound like Charles Boyer with a hoarse throat.

Perhaps there are 100 of them in northern Florida, Georgia, the Carolinas and Virginia. In Augusta, Charleston, and Richmond these Jews discover, as have Jews everywhere in all times and places, an actuarial role. Where once a Jew opened a store or peddled, today he bids for a franchise.

In some Southern cities, a fellow with tinted eyeglasses and a pencil moustache, who speaks like Leo Carillo, runs the Hertz franchise or the Avis rent-a-car and sometimes the Midas Muffler and sometimes the temporary office

Roger Williams To Install Officers

Roger Williams Chapter, B'nai B'rith Women, will hold its annual installation and luncheon on Thursday, May 17, at 12 noon at the Kirkbrae Country Club. Co-chairmen for the luncheon are Mrs. Harry Davis and Mrs. William Hyman. Chairman of the day is Mrs. Hyman Goodwin and Mrs. Leo L. Jacques will be the installing officer.

The slate of officers and board of directors which will be presented includes Mrs. Benton Odessa, president; Mrs. Yale Udin, Mrs. John B. Schechter and Mrs. Samuel J. Kolodney, vice presidents; Mrs. William Hyman, treasurer; Mrs. Paul T. Litwin, recording secretary; Mrs. Samuel Perlman, financial secretary; Mrs. Al Goldberg, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Hyman S. Goodwin, counselor; Mrs. Nathan N. Rosen, guide; Mrs. Leonard I. Salmonson, guardian; Mrs. Sol M. White, sentinel.

Members-at-large are Mrs. Samuel Chase, one year; Mrs. Aaron Caslowitz, two years, and Mrs. Benjamin Luftman, three years.

Members of the board of directors for three years are Mrs. Aaron Gershkoff, Mrs. Samuel Michaelson, Mrs. Leo Weiss, Mrs. Leo L. Swartz, Miss Hannah Scoliard, Miss Ethel Scoliard, Mr. Joseph Mittleman, Mrs. Maurice Yosinoff, Mrs. Reuben Cohen, Mrs. Howard Lipsey, Mrs. Robert Bernstein, Mrs. Samuel Bomes, Miss Ethel Shindler, Mrs. Lewis Nulman and Miss Anne Bercovitz.

Elected to the board of directors for two years are Mrs. Joseph Fishbein, Mrs. Charles Sallet, Mrs. Gerald Winograd, Mrs. Samuel Eisenberg, Mrs. Milton Jacobs, Mrs. Abraham Israel, Mrs. William Lipson, Mrs. Martin Lerner, Mrs. John Newman, Miss Mollie Smith, Miss Marion Kessler, Miss Dora Sherman, Mrs. J. Harold Krasnoff and Mrs. Milton Kessler.

Those named to serve on the board of directors for one year are Mrs. Harry Goldman, Mrs. Sidney Factor, Mrs. Herbert Gleckman, Mrs. Manfred Weil, Mrs. Hannah Baratz, Mrs. Morris Kramer, Mrs. Belle Saxe, Mrs. Louis Kirshenbaum, Mrs. Maurice Share, Mrs. Al Saltzman, Mrs. Harold Homonoff, Mrs. Sidney Greene, Mrs. Abraham Ehrlich, Mrs. Frances Rosenberg and Mrs. Louis Bernstein.

Members of the nominating committee are Mrs. Goodwin, chairman; Mrs. Jacques, Mrs. Joseph J. Seefer, Mrs. Fishbein, Mrs. Leonard J. Sholes, Mrs. Harry T. Davis, Mrs. Caslowitz and Mrs. Luftman.

assistants' bureau and perhaps some are found behind the fountain of the Carvel or the Dairy Queen.

The first immigrants to my home state of North Carolina were the English colonials, mostly Scotch-Presbyterians; they were succeeded by Germans from Moravia who founded the beginnings of the banking system and then a small consortium of Greek came South after the 1900s (they almost elected the Senator, too).

Most of us subscribe to the fact that the immigrant tradition came to an end in 1924 with the Reed-Johnson Act. But the intense mobility of Americans — the family moves on the average of once every five years — might indicate the tradition is carried out on a different level and in a different way.

Millions of the poor migrate to the large cities for welfare. Millions of the middle class migrate to the suburbs and there is every reason to believe the suburbs are no longer stable. Within the suburbs, families keep moving and recirculating, keeping all the realtors rich. Workers follow their industries. The Jews follow commerce.

20 PARTICIPATE IN TELETHON: Max Alperin, president of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island, participated in the United Jewish Appeal National Telethon for Cash held in New York last week. Mr. Alperin is a member of the National Cash Committee of the UJA. He was one of 25 Jewish community leaders from all over the United States who participated in the event. Engaged in a briefing before actual telephoning began are, left to right, Mr. Alperin; Ambassador Jacob Barmore, deputy permanent representative of Israel to the United Nations, and Alan Sagner, president of the Jewish Federation of Essex County, New Jersey. Donors have been asked to set an example by paying their pledges so that urgent needs may be met.

ORGANIZATION NEWS

BOARD LUNCHEON

An original musical skit written by Mrs. David Horovitz will be presented at the annual board luncheon of the Ladies' Association of the Jewish Home for the Aged. The affair will be held on Wednesday, May 16, at 12 noon at the Ramada Inn in Seekonk, Massachusetts. Performing in the skit will be Mrs. Bernard Gladstone and Mrs. Horovitz, accompanied by Mrs. Harry Seltzer at the piano.

Mrs. Horovitz, chairman of the day, will be assisted by Mrs. Ben Sinel and Mrs. Alvin Venokoor, reservations, and Mrs. Max Rose, transportation.

Members of the nominating committee for 1973-74 are Mrs. Isador S. Low, chairman; Mrs. Albert Alter, Mrs. Donald Dwares, Mrs. Joseph Galkin, Mrs. Leo Greenberg, Mrs. Sydney Grunberg, Mrs. Lawrence Koffler, Mrs. Mayer Levitt, Mrs. Herman Rosenberg and Mrs. Harry Sklut.

CHESS FESTIVAL

The Rhode Island Novice and Amateur Chess Festival will be held on Sunday, May 13, from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Sayles Hall at Brown University.

Four novice sections will be held for adults, high school, junior high school and elementary students. Trophies will be awarded to top finishers in each section.

An open section will be held for more experienced players. This will be rated by the United States Chess Federation and chess clocks will be used.

Advance entries may be sent payable to Daniel Semonoff of 9 Exeter Street in Providence.

IN SET

The In Set, the Jewish Community Center's single young adult organization, will conduct a Coffee House at the Center on Sunday, May 13, from 8 to 11 p.m.

There will be live entertainment and refreshments will be available.

RUMMAGE SALE

The Sisterhood of Temple Beth Am will hold its annual spring Rummage Sale at the William Shields Post, 662 West Shore Road, Warwick, on Tuesday, May 15, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Chairmen of the event are Mrs. Bernard Bieder and Mrs. Samuel Berditch.

ART SHOW

The second annual all Rhode Island Art Show, sponsored by the East Greenwich Art Club, will be held at Warwick Mall on Friday and Saturday, May 11 and 12, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., and on Sunday, May 13, from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Major Innovation In Option Trading

Q: I am interested in knowing more about the new put and call market in Chicago. Would you please discuss this in your column? H.H.

A: Gladly. Under the sponsorship of the largest commodity market in the world, The Chicago Board of Trade, a new option market began operations recently. Thus far only calls on 16 Big Board stocks are being traded. Within a year the number should reach 100 and put options should also be included. In contrast to previous OTC option transactions the new market allows an option buyer to sell his contract prior to exercise date. Furthermore, on the Chicago Board Option Exchange all contracts expire the last business day of January, April, July and October.

Volume on put and call options has traditionally represented about 1% of the daily volume of the underlying securities. In its opening days CBOE trading has averaged about 91,000 shares or 14% of the volume of the securities represented. Institutional activity is thought to account for 50% to 65% of trading to date. Premiums currently range from a low of 3% on a July Am. Telephone option to 32.5% on a January contract on Northwest Airlines. In the case of Telephone, the buyer has paid $315 for the option to buy 100 shares at $50 before the end of July. Northwest shares will have to advance 8 1/2 points or 32.5% before the end of January for an option buyer to break even. Thus the market is indicating its belief that this latter is a strong possibility.

Included among the 600 members of the CBOE are several market makers who — like NYSE specialists — are responsible for providing liquidity by buying and selling for their own accounts. Each stock is handled by one board broker who is responsible for that market. Customer orders from brokerage firms are filled by one of the several roving floor brokers. While options are still in the high-risk category, an orderly market has now been provided for traders interested in this form of speculation.

Municipal Bond Yields

Q: I am interested in buying tax-exempt bonds in $1,000 denominations, having a major degree of safety and bearing 5%-7% interest. Where may these be obtained? H.P.

Q: I would like information on 6% to 7% tax-free bonds. E.B. & A.K.

A: Prime quality, 20-year municipal bonds are trading to yield just under 5% to maturity at this time.

Thus, an investor would have to sacrifice safety and be willing to buy longer-term issues in order to achieve a higher return. Good quality 30-year tax exempts are currently yielding 5.25% to maturity. Even this rate is a far cry from the 7% return requested. Tax-exempt bonds are usually difficult to buy and to dispose of in amounts under $10,000 since a round lot is $100,000. Most retail brokerage firms have facilities to handle these transactions.

Although many municipals carry 6% to 7% coupons and yield 6.7% or more on a current basis, because such issues command a premium, at maturity you would face a capital loss of $100 or more per bond. Thus, in purchasing tax exempts, yield to maturity, which includes the capital gain or loss, is the important figure. Equivalent taxable yields are also an important guide for potential buyers. For example, a 5.25% yield on a tax exempt is equal to 7.5% taxable interest if you are in a 30% tax bracket, 8.75% in a 40% bracket and 10.50% in the 50% tax bracket.

Q: Three or four years ago I paid 71/8 for Technical Tape (ASE). Shortly after that you advised a reader to avoid the stock and to be sure you were right. It is now trading around 2. What should I do? T.D.

A: Joining the swelling ranks of companies which are repurchasing corporate shares, Technical Tape directors have recently announced the firm's intention to purchase on the open market up to 300,000 shares or 9% of the outstanding common. This may be interpreted as a constructive development, indicating management's optimistic outlook for TTI. Hold.

Metropolitan Sued For Hiring Bias

NEW YORK — The Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the United States Attorney in Manhattan are suing the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company with "unlawful employment practices which discriminate against Jews and other minority group members."

In a complaint filed April 5 in Federal District Court in Manhattan the government charged that the 55,000 employee corporation followed a hiring policy which limited employment opportunities of Jews and other minority groups and that it failed to make reasonable accommodation in certain shift week assignments to enable Jews to observe their Sabbath.

TO HOLD OPEN HOUSE: The International Society of Single Adults will be holding an open house dinner dance and cocktail party on Sunday, May 13, for single adults of all ages at Guiliano's Golden Villa Restaurant, 393 Charles Street, from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Marilyn Mason is chairman and further information may be obtained by calling 272-6628 or 831-9897. Members of several New England Jewish Community Centers will be attending the dance.

TO WRITE MEMOIRS

JERUSALEM — Israeli Premier Mrs. Golda Meir is to write her memoirs, a Jerusalem publishing company announced recently. The book should be ready by April, 1974, a press communique stated. This presumably means that Mrs. Meir will have plenty of time during the coming year to get down to the job of writing and dictating.

SANTIAGO — Israeli water irrigation experts have been invited to Chile to help this country study ways and means of irrigating arid land and improving present irrigation methods, it was reported by Israeli Ambassador Moshe Tov. The Israeli envoy said that several months ago President Salvador Allende sent the Chilean Minister of Development to Israel to meet with Israeli water irrigation experts. After several days of intense work, the minister and the president of the Institute of Arid Zones in the Negev came to an agreement, along with the Latin American Institute for Economic and Social Planning, to conduct a one-year study program.

A.I.D. GRANT
NEW YORK — At the opening session of Hadassah's annual mid-winter conference, the national president reported on the implementation of the $4.85 million United States A.I.D. (Agency for International Development) grant to the Hadassah Medical Organization in Israel. Rose E. Matzkin, in her report to Hadassah's 200 leaders at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, noted that all of the grant is spent on dollar purchases in the United States. The grant was made in 1970 under the provisions of Section 214 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1967 dealing with schools and hospitals.

The Treasure Chest

Of Outstanding Offers and Opportunities

By Alan Shawn Feinstein

Hello, my friends, here's what we have for you this week.

To get your free copy of the 1973 Travel Guide and Atlas write to Travel Guide, Department #2, P.O. Box 20, Phoenix, Arizona 85001. And my apologies for inadvertently leaving the address out when I wrote about his item in my last column ...

For my intellectual readers: you can get, free the latest issue of a magazine just for you, Intellectual Digest. One article a day is guaranteed to keep the cobwebs away. If you like the offbeat, the in-depth, you'll find this magazine stimulating. Address is P.O. Box 2986, Boulder, Colorado 80302.

One problem though: I sent for a free copy four months ago and I've been receiving this magazine regularly ever since. Come to think of it, that's their problem, not mine ...

Do I really come up with something for just about everyone? Well, here's something for smokers. If you're still puffing away despite all the discouragements, you can get a free booklet you certainly should like — it gives the case for smoking. It's The Cigarette Controversy available from the Tobacco Institute, 1776 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006. I'm in no way vouching for its accuracy or even worth but if you still like to smoke you might like to know what your allies have to say.

Interested in playing a musical instrument? Be different. Why peck away at the piano when you can learn to play the harp? Or how about the dulcimer or a balalaika?

Those words throw you? Think how your friends would feel if they heard you actually could play one of them. For your free catalogue about these and other far out musical instruments write 8665 West 13 Avenue, Denver, Colorado 80215.

Last but not least for investors: you should read the book, Winning Market Systems, by Gerald Appel. Its title aptly tells it — a collection of the most profitable systems for winning in the stock market.

With some study it could make you a lot more than its $19.95 cost. Available from the Capitalist Reporter, Inc., 150 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York 10011.

That's it for now, my friends. Coming up next some fascinating news about diamonds. And making money. And saving it.

Alan Shawn Feinstein is a syndicated columnist. He is the author of "Making Your Money Grow," "Folk Tales From Siam," and other books.

German, Dutch Couple Honored In Israel

JERUSALEM — Israel has honored a former German soldier and a Dutch couple for saving the lives of Jews during World War II.

In 1942, German Sgt. Richard Abel was ordered to guard five young Tunisian Jews who were waiting to be executed for trying to escape Nazi-occupied Tunis.

Sergeant Abel ignored his orders and provided the youths with food, arms, maps and instructions which eventually helped them reach safety.

At the same time, Mrs. Dozy Van der Goot of Amsterdam and her late husband, Peter, were providing false identity papers for many young Jewish nurses fleeing Nazi occupation. Mrs. Van der Goot was secretary of the Amsterdam Nurses Union.

Mr. Abel, of Birstein, Germany, and Mrs. Van der Goot recently were invited to the Yad Vashem memorial in Jerusalem, where they planted a tree in their honor along the Avenue of the Righteous.

When in doubt, you need look no further for the perfect gift. The Herald subscription is always appreciated for birthdays or holidays. Call the Herald at 724-0200.
