N.Y. Hasidim File Claims Of Civil Rights Violations

NEW YORK — The United States Attorney's office in Brooklyn began an investigation last week into charges by the Lubovitcher movement that the civil rights of Hasidic Jews had been violated by the police in a clash that took place outside their synagogue at 770 Eastern Parkway on June 2.

Officials of the Hasidic group disclosed that they had filed 25 complaints with the Police Civilian Review Board charging "police brutality," anti-Semitic remarks, and "police overreaction" in the incident.

The clash, in which three persons were arrested and eight policemen were injured, took place after a motorist had tried to drive through a police barrier that had been erected on a service road near the synagogue. The barrier had been put at the request of Lubovitcher officials, who complained that speeding cars had injured several children.

Robert B. Morse, United States Attorney for the Eastern District of New York met with representatives of the Hasidic group.

Michael Hernandez, conciliation expert for the Federal Justice Department's Community Relations Service, said that Mr. Morse was "exploring the facts" concerning the violation of civil rights.

Defenseless Community

Mr. Hernandez made the disclosure at a news conference in the Americana Hotel. It had been called by officials of the Lubovitcher movement. During the session they discussed the clash and the filing of the charges.

Rabbi Yehuda Krinsky, executive administrator of the Lubovitcher movement, and Rabbi Leib Groner, another official, charged that a sergeant had said, "Go get the Jews."

Rabbi Groner, who said he had been struck by one police officer, said another had wielded his service revolver and shouted: "It's a pity Hitler didn't finish the job he started." Another, he alleged, said, "I want to kill Jews."

Rabbi Krinsky said the "police were responsible for the chaos of that afternoon ... which led to a free-swinging assault on a defenseless community."

The Lubovitcher synagogue and headquarters is in the 71st Police Precinct. Capt. Henry Basso, commander of the precinct, said in an interview, "If the complaints are true, I would like to separate these policemen from our department."

Captain Basso, who was not named in the complaints, cited the cordial relations that he and his staff had enjoyed with the Lubovitcher movement.

Inefficiency Charged

Captain Basso suggested that the "overreaction" of the police might have stemmed from other policemen attached to other precincts who responded to the clash. Captain Basso emphasized "the rapport we have with the Hasidic group."

In another development, Patrolman Robert McKiernan, president of the Patrolman's Benevolent Association, had written to the Police Commissioner, Donald F. Cawley, charging the officers of the 71st Precinct with inefficiency in permitting Hasidic Jews to invade the station following the clash. He said several policemen who were injured had been in upstairs quarters.

Dr. Rufus A. Nichols, a black physician with offices and his home at 736 Eastern Parkway, has charged that the police had favored the Hasidic Jews by blocking the roadway. He was driving the first of two cars involved in the June 2 incident.

JDL To Continue Harassing Russians

NEW YORK — Three members of the Jewish Defense League were arrested outside of the Soviet Mission to the United Nations and were charged with the harassment of Soviet diplomats. According to David Fisch, executive director of JDL, Steve Thomashow, Jeffrey Weltman and Zev Yourman were "following closely behind Soviet diplomats and speaking loudly, asking why the Soviet Union is mistreating the Soviet Jews."

The JDL resumed its harassment of Soviet diplomats on May 24, the day after the FBI raid on JDL headquarters. Fisch said five to ten JDL members will continue harassing the diplomats "round the clock," although a Soviet diplomat had complained about harassment recently in the UN.

The three arrested were scheduled to go on trial June 7, but requested postponement because June 7 is the second day of Shavuot. Meanwhile they have been released on their own recognizance.

Discover Underground Of Student Terrorists

TEL AVIV — Security services have disclosed that they have uncovered a terrorist underground made up of students in the West Bank town of Tulkarem. Most of the members were said to be high school students and students at the Kadouri Agricultural School in Tulkarem. They are suspected of sabotage, including cutting telephone lines near Tulkarem, and attempting to set fire to the local labor exchange and to a water pumping station last month. They are also suspected of printing and distributing anti-Israel leaflets. Police said more arrests in connection with the ring were expected.

The Kadouri Agricultural School was established in the 1930s through the legacy of a wealthy Jew in India. He had apparently intended it as an exclusively Jewish institution but did not specify that in his will. The British Mandatory authorities divided the legacy to establish the Kadouri school for Arabs in Tulkarem and another in the Jewish township of Affula.

N.Y. Thieves Take Religious Objects

NEW YORK — The rabbi of the Elmhurst Jewish Center in Queens has appealed to burglars who took a number of antique religious objects to return them. Rabbi Moshe Portnoy said that a reward would be given for the return of three silver ornamental crowns and four silver pointers and no questions would be asked.

The items had been brought out of Nazi Germany by members of the congregation "at great personal risk." He said while he did not put a dollar value on them, they were priceless to the congregation. Rabbi Portnoy added that the police are investigating the case and hinted that the thieves might have been drug addicts because "they knew what they were taking. They took only valuable things of silver."

Israel Opens Major Campaign To Stop US From Selling Planes

WASHINGTON — Israel has opened a major campaign to persuade the Nixon Administration to drop its tentative plans to sell Saudi Arabia 24 to 30 F-4 Phantom jet-bombers.

In recent days, Ambassador Simcha Dinitz has met twice with Joseph J. Sisco, Assistant Secretary of the State for Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs, and with Henry A. Kissinger, President Nixon's adviser on national security, to express Israel's concern about the pending sale of the Phantoms, the top plane in the American military inventory.

In addition, Israeli diplomats have been talking openly with newsmen and with public figures here to draw attention to the situation.

The Administration has defended the sale of the Phantoms as part of a package deal to upgrade Saudi Arabia's defenses.

Last week the State Department said the sales, not only to Saudi Arabia, but also to other Persian Gulf nations such as Kuwait and Iran, were needed to meet the "legitimate security requirements" of the countries in the area.

Any such sale "takes fully into account our long-standing policy of support of Israeli security," the State Department said at the time.

Mr. Dinitz and other Israeli officials have not objected to the over-all American policy of improving the military capacity of the Persian Gulf states. In fact, the Israelis assert that they had been urging direct American involvement in the area ever since Britain withdrew her military support for the countries in 1968.

Concern Over Jet Sale

What concerns the Israelis, they say, is the specific sale of the Phantom jets to Saudi Arabia. In addition, Israelis report that Kuwait has also asked for the F-4's, but she is not certain that she will receive any.

The Israelis assert that although Saudi Arabia may agree not to use the Phantoms against Israel, the United States cannot guarantee this. They note that American tanks, given to Jordan with the proviso that they could not cross the Jordan River, were used against Israel in the 1967 war.

According to the Israelis, the Phantoms, which can be used as bombers, could attack Israeli cities from fields in northern Saudi Arabia.

But beyond the security problem, the Israelis have expressed concern that the sale of Phantoms might lead to the sales or grants of advanced jets from other powers to the area. They said that the Soviet Union might feel more free to provide MIG-23's and the French, Mirage V's.

Over-All Military Package

American officials have told the Israelis that their concern would be considered before a final deal was worked out with the Saudi Arabians. But the officials have indicated that the Administration made the policy decision to sell the Phantoms as part of the over-all military package that may top $1.5-billion for both Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. Iran is spending about $2.5-billion in a long-range modernization program.

So far, the Israelis have denied that the Phantom sale would become a major issue similar to the feud in 1971 over the sale of Phantoms to Israel. The State Department, in the fall of 1971, resisted an Israeli request for additional Phantoms on the theory that it would upset the balance in the area. But President Nixon finally authorized the sale.

Reflecting Israel's concern, the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, a pro-Israel lobby, issued a statement saying, "We are dismayed" about the Phantom deal.

Calling for the Government to reconsider its decision, the committee said that Saudi Arabia "is in a holy war with a democratic Israel," and that "we cannot be complacent if Saudi Arabia is permitted to acquire weapons deadly enough to give belligerent effect to its bigoted hostility."

Premier Golda Meir To Visit West Germany In Fall

JERUSALEM — Chancellor Willy Brandt has announced that Premier Golda Meir had accepted his invitation to make a formal state visit to West Germany.

He made the announcement at a news conference at the conclusion of the second day of his talks here with Mrs. Meir.

Although both Mr. Brandt's invitation to visit Germany and Mrs. Meir's acceptance were expected, the visit nonetheless underscores the degree of closeness that has been achieved in the evolving relations between West Germany and Israel.

Just a few years ago a state visit to Germany by an Israeli Premier would have been unthinkable. Mrs. Meir herself said in an interview with an Italian journalist last fall that ever since World War II she had found it difficult "even to set foot" in Germany. In fact, she has only stopped in airports in Germany, and not even that as Premier.

No date for her visit was indicated, but Mrs. Meir's aides said they were sure it would be after the Israeli elections in October.

Mr. Brandt, speaking to foreign and Israeli correspondents at a convention hall in Jerusalem, also called for a Middle East peace "negotiated by and acceptable to all directly concerned."

He also suggested that Bonn's accords on Eastern Europe, in which the West Germans accepted the postwar realities for the sake of peace, might provide an example for the Middle East conflict.

Statements Warmly Received

"I think the methods used can be of some importance in resolving conflicts in other parts of the world, even if the circumstances are different," he said.

Both statements were warmly received by Israeli Government officials, who read them as an indication of West German support for the Israeli policy of direct negotiation with the Arabs and substantial changes in Israeli's borders.

"Brandt has disarmed everyone, even his critics, by his straightforward approach," an Israeli journalist observed today. "He took the sting out of the situation the moment he arrived."

Mrs. Meir alluded to this in a toast to Mr. Brandt at a state banquet in his honor in the Israeli Parliament.

"You are the first, or among the first, who said that what was done cannot be undone," she said. "This is a task that could have been very difficult for us if you had not made it easier."

Oxford Dictionary Editor Insists On Definition

LONDON — The editor of the Oxford English Dictionary is standing his ground against a court suit over its secondary definition of "Jew" as "a name of opprobrium or reprobation; specifically applied to a grasping or extortionate money lender or usurer, or a trader who drives hard bargains or deals craftily."

A complaint against the definition is to be heard by a High Court Judge on July 5 after a four-year battle by Marcus Shloimovitz, a 67-year-old textile merchant. He maintains that Jews have been maligned.

R. W. Burchfield, editor of the dictionary, has come to the defense of the definition although he told the Philological Society that he was prepared to make one concession.

Mean What They Mean

Speaking on the general subject of "controversial vocabulary in the Oxford English Dictionary," he said that in the vast revision now under way — it is being published in a three-volume supplement — the definition would not be changed but an explanation of how it came about would be given.

The dictionary's first definition is "a person of Hebrew race; an Israelite."

Mr. Burchfield said that words mean exactly what they mean, not what people want them to mean, and that definition derives from usage, not taste.

However deplorable certain usages may be, he continued, if they are easily found in print they must be regarded as current, and the dictionary has not merely the right but the duty to record them.

He criticized David B. Buralnik, editor-in-chief of the Second College Edition of Webster's New World Dictionary, who suggested that words such as "dago," "wop" and "kike" should be excluded from dictionaries.

Webster's Third New International Dictionary, unabridged, carries four definitions for the noun "Jew." The final one is "a person believed to drive a hard bargain." A verb form is defined: "to cheat by sharp business practice — usually taken to be offensive."

Kahane Not Allowed To Return To US

TEL AVIV — An Israeli court this week forbade Rabbi Meir Kahane from flying to the United States lest he organize disturbances there during the forthcoming visit by Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist party leader.

Explaining his decision on the leader of the Jewish Defense League, Judge Haim Dvorin said: "Judges have their feet on the ground. I can't ignore the consideration that a visit by the applicant during the next few weeks in the United States is liable to embarrass the authorities there seriously. I don't think the law courts here should lend a hand to such a situation considering the present constellation."

Rabbi Kahane retained his

United States citizenship when he settled in Jerusalem in 1971, but the Israelis impounded his passport in October when he was arrested in connection with an alleged Jewish Defense League attempt to send arms abroad illegally for counter-terror against Arabs.

Man and Beast

By BERYL SEGAL

In the "Kinder Zeitung," a bi-monthly magazine for children of the Arbeiter Ring Schools, appearing in New York, I came upon a remarkable poem. It is remarkable because of the man who wrote it and also because it is in the best tradition of Yiddish poetry.

The author of the poem is Zsame Telezin. He recently left the Soviet Union and settled in Israel where he lives happily in Jerusalem. The name of the poem is In Gast (Inviting Guests). It is also in the traditional manner of Yiddish poetry in that it asks questions in the first verse and answers the questions in the second verse. I read it again and again and recommended it to friends who know Yiddish.

Here is the poem translated in free verse into English:

Did you ever hear/that into a sparrow's nest/ another sparrow/ should come and bring/a kernel into the nest?

I have never heard,/I have never seen/such a thing happen/ on the earth among sparrows.

Did you ever hear/of a mouse inviting/for breakfast/ a neighbor mouse;/invite into the hole/under the house another mouse.

I have never heard,/I have never seen,/such a thing ever happen/ on earth among mice.

Did you ever see,/did you ever hear,/that a bear should invite into the lair/another bear;/invite for a meal a relative bear?

Who ever heard./who ever saw./such a thing ever happen/on earth among bears?

But did you ever meet/a man in the world/who never steps over the threshold/of another man's house./and does not let anyone/across his own threshold?

Such a man is rare indeed./who does not go to visit/ other men./and does not invite guests/to his house.

Man does what neither the sparrow, nor the mouse, nor the bear, nor any other animal ever did.

Faith in man's capabilities for good. Faith in the face of cruelties and degradation. The ancient Jewish Emunah, belief in the ultimate triumph of what is just and right. These are the principal themes in Yiddish poetry. Zsame Telezin, a man who saw the stifling of the human spirit in the USSR, could nevertheless write this children's poem. Man is, after all, higher than the bear. He invites people to his house and he is the guest of others in their household.

Mani Leib, another Yiddish poet, had the same faith in man's goodness and compassion. He wrote numerous poems for children in which somebody wanders in a cold, dark night. He is tired and hungry. But somewhere in the distance the wanderer sees a lamp shining in a window. In the light of that lamp, to this window, the wanderer directs his footsteps, there to find a bed in which to sleep and a smiling face to send him off on his way.

This tradition of hope in the face of devouring despair, light in the midst of enveloping darkness, is, it seems to me, the main mission of Yiddish poetry. It is the mission of all Jewish literature in its highest form:

To heal the aching heart.
To wipe away tears of despair.
To bring hope when things look hopeless.

This tradition as laid down by the masters of Yiddish literature is being followed by Telezin as well.

New Medicare Benefits for Younger Americans

A fortnight from now, July 1, full Medicare health insurance benefits will, for the first time, be extended to some 11,000 Americans under age 65 who are suffering from chronic kidney transplant.

If you are eligible for these benefits, the hospital where you are having (or planning to have) a transplant and/or dialysis probably has notified you of the new rules. But if it has not, contact your local Social Security office now — before July 1 — to find out the details of these extraordinary benefits due you.

Also as of July 1, some 1,500,000 disabled Americans under age 65 will become eligible for full Medicare hospital and doctor bill benefits — for the first time, too.

These are the two most sweeping changes in our Medicare system voted last year by Congress in an historic package of Social Security Medicare and other amendments — primarily aimed at our elderly population but in some cases reaching younger Americans as well.

What are the new rules? What must you do to be sure you (or your parent or relative or friend who might be eligible) receive the new benefits?

Q. Who is eligible for disability benefits?

A. People who are (or have been) entitled to at least 24 consecutive months of Social Security or cash benefits because they are disabled. Included:

- Disabled workers at any age;
- Disabled widows; disabled dependent widowers between the ages of 50 and 64;
- Women age 50 or over who are entitled to mother's benefits who, for 24 months prior to the first month they would have been entitled to Medicare protection, met all the requirements for disability benefits except the actual filing of a disability claim;
- Those age 18 and over who re-

SIGNS OF PROSPERITY ABOUND IN ISRAEL ...

TEL AVIV — Signs of prosperity abound in Israel.

Television antennas sprout from apartment buildings. Automobiles jam the streets. Shops overflow with goods. The Tel Aviv Hilton has an occupancy rate of 97% and is adding another story. Eilat, the busy port on the Gulf of Aqaba, has six hotels and a marina under construction. A convention hall and a Hilton hotel are going up in Jerusalem.

And now a company is being formed to invest in Israel. To become a shareholder, you must put up at least $1 million. Even though the corporation hasn't even announced its name, at least a hundred of the world's well-heeled capitalists are expected to snap up the chance to be founder-stockholders.

Before the year is out, Israel, the strongest military power in the eastern Mediterranean, is likely to be the area's No. 1 economic power, too. Sources here say that Israel's gross national product is moving ahead of that of Egypt, a country with 11 times the population that Israel has.

But this nation isn't booming enough for Israel's economic leaders and its supporters. "I always want more than I can get," says Pinhas Sapir, minister for finance. "We must be strong economically, we must double our exports, then double them again." Israel's eventual aim: self-sufficiency.

Defense and Immigrants

The task of becoming self-sufficient is complicated by the fortress economy that Israel feels it must maintain as the Arab-Israeli confrontation continues. All planning is being done on the premise that the current no-war, no-peace relationship with Arab neighbors will continue. Twenty percent of Israel's gross national product goes to defense. The defense outlays are evident in the ubiquitous khaki uniforms on the streets and in the Mirage and Phantom jets that streak across the skies.

A further burden on the economy is the steady stream of immigrants. An El Al Boeing 707 arrives here with several dozen shabbily dressed Soviet Jews carrying a motley collection of handbags. Well-trained greeters hurry the strangers into the airport terminal to begin their preparation for lives in their new home. To its current population of 3.2 million people, Israel expects to add 65,000 immigrants annually over the next five years.

In its 25 years as a state, Israel has received $13.5 billion in help from the outside — about 80% from U.S. sources. Currently Israel is exporting only two-thirds as much as it imports; in 1972 it exported goods and services totalling $2.1 billion while imports hit $3.2 billion. To bridge the gap, Israel has depended on capital imports through borrowing and bond drives in foreign nations, through reparations payments and through donations from world Jewry.

Last year's trade deficit of $1.1 billion was more than made up for by such capital imports. But authorities here now believe that Israel's dependence on such capital imports must be reduced. The method: sharply higher exports of goods and services. A recently announced five-year program calls for doubling this country's exports by 1978. The hope is that by then exports will total 83% of imports. Authorities seek to continue that trend into the 1980s, when Israel will approach self-sufficiency.

"To increase our exports, we must increase their quality and our productive efficiency," says Simcha Landau, director of Israel's economic planning authority.

Charting the Course

To meet these goals, world cooperation was being sought at an economic conference last week. It attracted to Tel Aviv about 1,000 industrialists and financiers from 26 nations.

The purpose is to encourage more foreign investments in Israel, especially those that contribute technological know-how and increase the competitiveness of Israel exports. The conference is seeking to enroll world friends of Israel in a campaign to modernize and expand Israeli industry. About half the participants are from the U.S.; about a third are non-Jews. "We are taking a hard-nosed commercial attitude, rather than a philanthropic approach," says Victor M. Carter, the head of the U.S. Delegation. He is a director of United California Bank, in Los Angeles and retired president of Republic Corp. "Businessmen want to invest in a stable country where they can make a profit," he says. "That describes Israel."

Mr. Carter reports that 45 of Fortune magazine's top 500 U.S. companies have representatives at the conference. He lists such names as Ford Motor Co., Lock-

URI Prof. Norman Zucker Publishes Book On Israel

Coinciding with Israel's 25th anniversary this spring is the publication of a book about Israel by Norman L. Zucker, a University of Rhode Island political science professor.

Dr. Zucker's book, "The Coming Crisis in Israel," published by the MIT Press, is the first full-scale objective discussion of Israel's religion-state conflict.

Dr. Zucker writes that the ongoing religion-state controversy is the most important issue in Israel's existence and goes to the core of its political system. Over and above the immediate conflict with the Arab states, the struggle between the religious and the secular will be the test of Israel's ability to survive as a democratic political community, he says.

The book is the result of more than six years of research and interviews with Israeli officials and religious leaders.

"The Coming Crisis in Israel" discusses some of the many problems facing the Israeli government today and introduces the new concept of "theopolitics."

Dr. Zucker describes the prevailing "tug-of-war" between the demands, on the one hand, of those ultra-Orthodox Jews who see

Mrs. Aaron M. Sherman

Temple Emanu-El was the scene of the wedding of Miss Robin Ruth Berger and Aaron M. Sherman on Sunday, June 3. Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen and Cantor Ivan E. Perlman officiated at the noon wedding which was followed by a reception in the temple social hall.

The bride is the daughter of Edith Berger of Providence, and Abraham Berger, also of Providence. Mr. Sherman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Sherman of Laurel Avenue.

Wearing a gown of silk peau de soie styled with a lace bodice, and a veil held by a band of fresh white roses and stephanotis, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She carried a bouquet of white roses and stephanotis.

Miss Jaya Kurtz was maid of honor. She was dressed in a gown of green peau de soie and carried daisies and yellow roses. Jorge Quiroga, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man.

The couple will take a wedding trip to Cape Cod.

RAGS TO RICHES

TEL AVIV — It was rags to riches for 50-year-old Eliahu Vaknin, a junkman of Rehovot. This father of 10 children was living in near poverty when he won nearly $200,000 in Israel's football lottery. Apparently his lack of worldly goods did not stop him staking $30 on the winning series of games. He told newsmen he intends to provide better housing for his ten children and 16 grandchildren.

ALBUM ABOUT JEWS

BOSTON — "An Album of the Jews in America," a narrative history by Yuri Suhl, is being distributed by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith for use by elementary through high school age children.

in the establishment of a Jewish state an opportunity to recreate a nation based upon Jewish law and tradition and, on the other hand, the extreme secularists, who view the State of Israel as no more than the homeland of a people having common historic roots.

Dr. Zucker contends that "all Israeli governments to date have maintained a delicate balance of concessions made to the secularists and to the religious as the demands of each threaten to topple the government and precipitate a kulturkampf."

Yet for the majority of Israelis, he notes, neither a totally theocratic nor a completely secular state is possible.

In essence, Dr. Zucker feels that a paradox confronts not only Israelis, but Jews throughout the world. For thousands of years, Jews have struggled to keep their private faith free of public restrictions, meanwhile longing for the restoration of the land of Israel. But now, he contends, 25 years after the establishment of Israel, Jews face the problem of "how Judaism can flourish within the framework of a sovereign democratic Jewish state."

Report Six Soviet Jews
Arrested For Hunger Strike

NEW YORK — Six Soviet Jews began a hunger strike last week near the Kremlin Wall in Moscow and were immediately arrested, according to word received here by the National Conference on Soviet Jewry.

The strike, said to be unusual since it was held in public and not in a private home, was described as a gesture of protest against the Soviet practice of withholding emigration visas on the grounds that the applicants were needed to work for the state, even though some were jobless.

Jerry Goodman, executive director of the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, which maintains offices at 11 West 42nd Street, said that he received a call from the Soviet Union from Dr. Aleksandr Luntz, a mathematician, who informed him of plans for the strike and asked that Mr. Goodman call back later.

When Mr. Goodman returned the call, he said he was informed by Prof. Aleksandr V. Voronel, a physicist and friend of Dr. Luntz, that Dr. Luntz and the five other hunger strikers had been arrested.

Dr. Luntz, permitted to call Professor Voronel from the police station, had told his friend to expect the call from the United States, Professor Voronel said.

Those arrested, in addition to Dr. Luntz, were identified as Valery Krizhak and his wife, Dr. Vladimir Raginsky, a physicist, Dr. Viktor Brailovsky, a cyberneticist, and Ida Nudel.

Mr. Goodman said that 11 other Jewish activists had been picked up in other sections of Moscow and detained by the police until late at night.

Deny Ordering Surveillance Of Israeli Cabinet Members

JERUSALEM — The Prime Minister's Office denied on May 23 that Premier Golda Meir had ordered the security services to put members of her Cabinet under surveillance in 1970 to track down alleged leaks of classified information to the press. The statement referred to a report published in Haaretz. It termed the newspaper report as unfounded.

The statement said that in 1969 material damaging to the State's security was leaked to the press and that Mrs. Meir, acting on a Cabinet decision of March 19, 1969, ordered all persons who had access to the restricted information questioned about it. They included the entire Cabinet.

The questioning was done openly and no minister was placed under surveillance, the statement said. Mrs. Meir said that only one minister objected to the questioning but did not identify him. According to the Haaretz story, Gahal leader Menachem Begin, a member of the coalition government at the time, raised the issue at a cabinet meeting and succeeded in getting Mrs. Meir to rescind her alleged surveillance order.

TO BUILD PARK
JERUSALEM — Israel is building a national park that will encircle the old city portion of East Jerusalem.

Today's hand is another difficult one but I am showing it because similar situations come up quite often and if the readers learn to recognize them possibly they will count out more hands and because of their doing this, make many more tricks. I was unable to watch this hand too often so I did not see the hand played the two times ten tricks were made. Once I was told that the successful Declarer made a correct guess but it was truly a guess not from information gained. Ten tricks should have been made legitimately.

Mrs. Dick Chase and Ludwig Klein were North and South. East-West were vulnerable, East Dealer with this bidding:

P	3♥	End

Three brave Souths went right on to game after their partners raised their opening Heart bid to two. Two Norths didn't respond at all. The game bidders went down. However, the normal score on the hand was plus 140 although there were a few Declarers who boxed themselves enough to hold themselves to eight tricks. This could happen if they were not careful.

West's automatic lead was the Club King followed by another high Club on which East would play up showing a third Club. Now West has to switch or he will make Dummy's Jack good so the normal play now is a Diamond. It costs Declarer nothing to ride this around to his Queen in hopes that West had led from the King even though it is unlikely. But East wins this and probably returns another Diamond. The times I did watch this hand played Declarer won this trick with the Queen and went right after the Trumps by playing the two high ones from his own hand. True, that is the usual way to play when one holds nine Trumps, missing the Queen. This, of course, will work when the suit either breaks evenly or the Queen is a singleton. In today's hand neither happens so that Queen must be lost. This, along with the two Clubs already lost plus the Diamond loser already adds to four tricks lost. The Spade King must still be reckoned with and now there is no entry to Dummy to take the Spade finesse. There is one, a low Trump could be played to the ten after giving East the Queen and while over there that small Spade can be discarded on the Diamond Ace but now that Spade finesse can only be taken once and even though it works, East's King will not fall on the next play of the suit so East will eventually make a trick with that King. The only salvation is that on the third round of Trumps when East is given the lead with the Queen he has to lead something. Unless he leads a Club he will give another entry to Declarer. A Club won't. How should the hand be played? The Spade finesse must be taken and to do so one must be in Dummy so the best way is to do something completely foreign to most players.

When East plays that Diamond back, instead of winning with the Queen, overtake it with Dummy's Ace and take the first Spade finesse. Now play the Spade Ace and the Trump Ace and ruff a Spade watching East drop his King on this. At this time you should have just about a complete picture of the whole hand. Your only problem now is that Trump Queen which you can either try to drop or finesse. You have already ruffed out your small Spade and now your other one is good. How do you play the Trumps? Let's stop to count West's hand. He must have had four Clubs including the Queen or he would not have played that suit that way. By the Diamonds he played on the two leads of that suit he must also have four of those and when East's Spade King showed up at the third play of Spades West must also have four in that suit too. Adding that to twelve leaves but one Trump which has already been played on the lead of that suit. Now you are sure that East has the Queen and the finesse must be taken but certain to win.

Moral: No one tosses out cards just for fun, they try to give messages with each or play the cards they have to when they have no choice. Watch them all and draw inferences. If you do it right you will gain fantastically.

REJECTED PRESIDENT: Dr. Melvin D. Hoffman was reelected as president of The Miriam Hospital Medical Staff Association at the annual meeting on June 11. Also reelected to serve for a period of one year were Dr. Martin E. Felder, vice president, and Dr. Henry M. Litchman, secretary. Dr. Henry F. Izeman was elected to serve as treasurer.

Dr. M. Howard Tiedman was elected a member-at-large of the executive committee on recommendation of the nominating committee which was headed by Dr. Stanley Simon. Other members were Dr. Alden H. Blackman, Dr. Izeman and Dr. Jay M. Orson.

 ceive Social Security benefits because they became disabled before reaching age 22.

Q. When does this protection begin?

A. On July 1 or in the 25th consecutive month after you originally became entitled to Social Security disability benefits — whichever is later. Medicare for the disabled provides precisely the same protection as Medicare offers others at age 65.

Q. What must you do to make sure your new Medicare insurance goes into effect?

A. You will be automatically notified by the Social Security Administration prior to the first time you are entitled to this coverage. As of July 1, you'll also be automatically signed up for the special "Part B" doctor bill insurance for which you must pay $6.30 per month — a sum matched by the federal government unless you specifically inform the Social Security Administration that you do not want this coverage.

This premium will be automatically deducted from your Social Security or railroad retirement disability check, starting with the check you receive in the month in which you first become eligible for Medicare coverage.

If you (or a relative) do want both types of coverage — for hospital and physician services — simply clip out the "Health Insurance Card" which has already been sent to you by Social Security. This shows the date on which you become eligible for medical insurance — which also is the date on which you owe your first premium.

If you do not want the Part B insurance, check a box on the form sent to you, sign the form along with a witness — and return it as instructed. You then will receive a card indicating that you have only the hospital insurance.

Warning: if you don't accept this Part B coverage now, you won't get another chance to sign up until January.

TO BE HONORED: Samuel J. Medoff of Woonsocket will be honored for service to the Jewish people and to the State of Israel on the occasion of his 70th birthday at a brunch in behalf of the State of Israel Bonds. The brunch will be held on Sunday, June 24, at 9:15 a.m. in the auditorium of Congregation B'nai Israel in Woonsocket.

Edward Baram, Martin Goodman and Lawrence Sadwin are co-chairmen of the tribute committee. Israel Amitai will be the guest speaker.

Mr. Medoff has served as president of Congregation B'nai Israel from 1958 to 1963 and from 1967 to 1969. He is a member of the board of directors and chairman of the endowment fund for the Jewish Home for the Aged and a member of the board of overseers and board of trustees of The Miriam Hospital of which he is also a past chairman of the finance committee.

Mr. Medoff has been extremely active in the civic life of Woonsocket. He is vice president of the Woonsocket Citizens Housing Committee, past chairman of the board and is now a member of the Woonsocket Industrial Development Corporation, a member of the board of trustees of the Industrial Foundation of Woonsocket and member of the board of managers of the Rhode Island Hospital Trust National Bank. He is vice chairman of the board of directors and treasurer of the I. Medoff Company.

Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir Introduces New Five Year Plan

JERUSALEM — A new national economic plan covering the five-year period up to 1978 was introduced by Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir in the Cabinet. He called for an expanded economy to meet the needs of 65,000 new immigrants yearly. The plan, which will be debated by the Ministerial Economic Committee, calls for an average yearly gross national product of 7.8 percent and an average annual increase of 4.5 percent in productivity.

Planning officials figure that by 1978 the Israeli economy must expand to handle an estimated population increase annually of 3.3 percent. In five years, Israel should have a population of 3.8 million, an increase of 600,000 officials say. Exports, according to the projections, are to increase at an annual rate of 5.8 percent, while im-

Say 50 Jews To Receive Visas Only If They Sign Confessions

NEW YORK — The Soviet secret police (KGB) has told 50 Russian Jews that they would receive exit visas if they signed confessions implicating Col. Efim Davidovich, who is under criminal investigation in Minsk on charges of anti-Soviet propaganda and concealment of a secret weapon. This was learned by the American Jewish Congress in a telephone conversation with a leading Moscow activist.

The Jewish source reported that the 50 Jews are being investigated by the KGB. They had been told, the source disclosed, that refusal to cooperate in implicating Davidovich would result in their being brought to trial along with the re-

Hello Again!

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

KINGS THREE TIMES: The talk has been about "Triple Crowns" and it has been beamed at horses. Too bad there weren't more than five in the Secretariat race at Belmont. What would Man O'War have done if in there with Secretariat? "Big Red," as Man O'War was called, was such a handsome, impressive-looking horse that he was an odds-on favorite in his very first start as a two-year-old. He lived up to his looks, winning by six lengths, and from then on he was an odds-on favorite in every race he ran. Three times he went to the post a 1-to-100 choice.

AMAZING: For two brilliant seasons, 1919-1920, he amazed turf followers with his regal appearance and, of course, speed. He won twenty out of twenty-one races, losing only to the aptly named Upset by a half-length because of a bad start and bad ride. They met several times after but Upset could never repeat his victory.

ASTOUNDING: In 1920, Man O'War broke either a track record or a world record in eight of his eleven starts, and he was pressed only once. If he had needed to go all out in his races, he might have set a record every time. He won the Belmont Stakes by 20 lengths, the Lawrence Realization Stakes by 100 lengths! Only once did Jockey Kummer ever have to touch him with the bat. It was when Man O'War raced John P. Grier at Acquaduct. The two thoroughbreds were matching stride for stride until they came into the stretch. Then the jockey touched "Big Red" for the first time and Man O'War leaped into the lead and won going away. What a horse!

VISIT WEST BANK
JERUSALEM — Elected representatives of the Jordanian Parliament visited the West Bank for the first time since the Six Day War of June, 1967. Taher el-Masri and Maher Ershaid crossed over via the Damiyah Bridge in what was described as "part of Amman's effort to consolidate relations with the West Bank's population." The pair were emissaries of King Hussein.

SOME THERE WERE: There were some Turf followers who rated Citation above Man O'War. "Big Cy," they called him and he was the first million dollar horse with total earnings of $1,085,760. After winning the Triple Crown, Citation came to the post for the Pimlico Special but there were no challengers and he picked up $10,000 by breezing around the track all by himself.

A DIFFERENT TRIPLE-WINNER: Although "Triple Crown" generally refers to a horse, it can also refer to a remarkable man of the boxing ring. Henry Armstrong, a human dynamo from California, collected three world crowns and held them simultaneously. Armstrong was a tireless, two-handed puncher with abnormal strength and endurance. He swarmed all over his opponents, smothering them with blows that came from all angles. "Hurricane Hank," weighing 124 pounds, won the first of his three titles in 1937 when he kayoed Featherweight Champion Petey Sarron. Seven months later, he outpointed Barney Ross for the Welterweight Title. Then he dropped down a class to win the Lightweight Championship from Lou Ambers. Thus Armstrong became the first man in boxing history to hold three titles at the same time.

FOUR TITLES: James "Ace" "Jimmy" Hart will collect an additional honor when the R.I. Umpires Association holds its annual meeting on June 21. Jimmy will be awarded the Eddie Jansen Trophy in recognition of having umpired college games earlier than any other living member of the association. Eddie Jansen was outstanding as an athlete and more so as a baseball umpire who, by his own admission, "Never missed one."

AT HOPE HIGH: Jimmy Hart's other titles involve many achievements, starting at Hope High. Whether it was baseball, football or hockey, he was a champion. Add another to that list because the "Ace" could zig and zag in most elusive fashion while playing the now extinct game of Ice Polo. "A most deserving fellow," writes Barney Burke, brother umpire and former catcher. "The Ace" started umpiring at R.I. State, now U. of R.I., and at University of Connecticut with both Eddie Jansen and Tim Ferrick, the latter having been the recipient of the award that will be presented to Hart. Thanks Barney and congratulations Jimmy.

AND ODDITY FROM BARN-EY: "Do you know?" asks Barney Burke and continues, "That we had the only league in the country where it was impossible to get a three-base hit?" (Barney refers to Tim O'Neil's Providence Amateur League.) "The rule was, 'Two bases into the crowd and the ball is dead.'" The crowds encircled the fields and times were changed, eh! — CARRY ON!

Charges Israeli Jets Try To Invade Syria

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Syria charged last week that Israeli jets tried twice to penetrate her air space but were driven off.

According to a military communiqué broadcast by the Damascus radio, the first Israeli attempt was made in the morning and the second in the afternoon. The communiqué said that in both incidents, along the coast between Tartus and Latakia, Syrian MIG's chased off formations of enemy aircraft while ground defenses opened fire on them.

The communiqué did not say how many planes were involved or whether dog fights developed.

This is the first such incident between Syria and Israel since the air strikes that Israeli Phantom fighter-bombers carried out January 8 against targets and radar stations in the Latakia area of Syria, some 150 miles north of the Israel border.

Built-Up Is Reported

According to reliable information from Damascus, the Syrians have been replacing radar stations knocked out by the Israelis in January. The source of the information said that SAM-2's and mobile SAM-6's, surface-to-air missiles, supplied by the Soviet Union, had also been set up recently around Damascus and other Syrian cities and vital installations.

The latest reported incidents came as a high-ranking Syrian military delegation was holding talks in Cairo. The delegation was headed by the Defense Minister, Maj. Gen. Mustafa Tlas who arrived there yesterday.

Israel Declines Comment

TEL AVIV — The Israeli military command declined to comment on the reports from Damascus. "We don't usually comment on reports of this nature," a military spokesman said.

Abba Eban Says Public Need Not Know Everything

JERUSALEM — Foreign Minister Abba Eban of Israel appealed to the world press on Monday to permit diplomats to conduct negotiations "free from the pressures and inhibitions of publicity."

Mr. Eban, speaking to the opening session of the annual meeting of the International Press Institute, an organization of 1,800 editors and publishers from 62 countries, said that if talks between Washington and Hanoi had not been conducted in secret "the tragic war would still be raging in Southeast Asia."

He suggested there was a "need for the theme of creative dialogue between those who deal with international relations and those who deal with mass information."

Mr. Eban said that this "voluntary acceptance of inhibition on publication seems to be a theme that your institute should give its attention."

He said he believed it was erroneous that the public had a right to know of every exploratory phase of international agreements.

PLEASED WITH SPEECH

BUENOS AIRES — Well-informed Jewish circles here have expressed satisfaction with President Hector J. Campora's inaugural address. They noted that his remark, "We are conscious of pluralism in Argentine society," was the first statement of its kind ever made by a President of Argentina. The circles have also called attention to the fact that while Campora expressed sympathy for national liberation movements in many parts of the world, including Vietnam, he omitted the Middle East. It is believed in Jewish circles that the omission was deliberate to avoid hurting the feelings of one side or another in that region.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Metzger

Rabbi Jerald Bobrow of Monroe, New York, officiated at the garden wedding of Miss Robin Newman to Bruce Metzger on Sunday, June 3. The 3 p.m. wedding was held at the home of the bride.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Newman of 392 Rochambeau Avenue. Mr. Metzger is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Metzger of East Mountain Road, South, Cold Spring, New York.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride was gowned in white sata peau designed with a high neckline, an empire waistline and an A-line skirt accented with cotton lace at the waist and hemline. A matching headpiece held a silk illusion shoulder length veil. She carried a bouquet of red roses and baby's breath.

Attendants were sisters of the bride, Miss Eileen Newman and Miss Betsy Newman.

D. Craig McClure served as best man.

Following a trip to Strickland's in the Poconos, the couple will reside at 935 Pontiac Avenue, Cranston.

Mrs. Leon Seltzer

The wedding of Miss Nettie Simon of 17 Braman Street to Leon Seltzer of 1550 East 13th Street, Brooklyn, New York, took place on Sunday, June 10, at Temple Emanu-El. Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen and Cantor Ivan E. Perlman officiated at the 1 p.m. ceremony which was followed by a reception at the temple.

The bride is the daughter of the late Harris and Sophie Simon. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Seltzer of Brooklyn.

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. and Mrs. George Berger, her brother-in-law and sister. Miss Evelyn Simon served as maid of honor for her sister. Bernard Shatkin was best man.

Following a wedding trip to Nassau, the couple will reside in Brooklyn.

Katzir To End Use Of Synagogue

JERUSALEM — President Ephraim Katzir said that he would continue to maintain the synagogue built into the Presidential residence by his predecessor, President Zalman Shazar, but that he would not continue Shazar's practice of holding weekly Sabbath services there.

The President, who took office May 24, announced his decision to the dozen or so neighbors who regularly attended services at the Presidential residence. He said they would be welcome to continue but indicated it would be preferable if they worshipped elsewhere from now on.

Katzir, who is not Orthodox in his religious observances, said he would use Shazar's synagogue only for special services. He said he intended to spend most of his weekends for the next six months at Rehoboth where he intends to keep up his scientific work at the Weizmann Institute of Science. He said that even when he is in Jerusalem he would prefer not to be bound to one synagogue.

ARGENTINA MINISTER

BUENOS AIRES — Jose Bar Gelbard, a Polish-born Jew, has been appointed Finance Minister in Argentina's new government. The appointment was announced at the inauguration of President Hector J. Campora. Gelbard, 56, who came to this country with his parents as a child, is also acting Minister of Commerce and Agriculture until permanent appointments are made. It is believed that his first step will be to tighten currency controls as a step in combatting the skyrocketing inflation.

heed Aircraft Corp., Varian Associates, Miles Laboratories Inc., Avco Corp., Control Data Corp., and McDonnell Douglas Corp.

Mr. Carter is one of the founder-members of the millionaires' investment corporation whose formation is to be announced at the current conference.

The second-largest delegation to the conference is British, and the 178-member group is headed by Derrick Keeman, chairman and managing director of Kleeman Industrial Holdings Ltd., London, and a director of the London merchant-banking firm of Singer & Friedlander Ltd. "This isn't a one-shot affair," he says. "Economic assistance is a continuing thing. We are making it possible for Israeli industry to solicit technical help, training and application of new ideas not only for the manufacture of products but for their marketing abroad."

Seeking Partners

Conference participants were given a dossier of 35 projects involving companies that are seeking partners in joint ventures, licensing arrangements, or financing for modernization and expansion. These range from an Israeli maker of sauna-bath equipment that wants to expand with a foreign partner to a moviemaking company that wants to sell part of its equity to acquire capital and know-how for marketing its films in the U.S.

Participants in the conference are divided into industry committees so that general discussions can be bypassed in favor of specifics. These include panels for such industries as plastics, metalworking, printing, chemicals, computers, footwear, electronics, and tourism.

In the U.S., offices have been set up in Los Angeles, Chicago, New York and Atlanta to steer American businessmen to the right sources.

This conference is the third to be held. The first two, in 1968 and 1969, were made up mostly of Jewish businessmen and emphasized the need for Jews abroad to help Israel; the current meeting pushed the theme that it is profitable to invest in Israel and is designed to appeal to non-Jews as well. The 1968 meeting became known as the millionaires' conference because every man present — except for government officials — was a millionaire. That conference led to the involvement of many of these men in Israel industry.

Long before that conference, in 1952, the Israeli Institute of Productivity had been opened by the government. But Mr. Carter, the head of the U.S. delegation to the current conference, says it didn't have much impact until after the millionaires' conference. Then, funds and technical aid began to flow into the institute from abroad.

Today the institute has 368 professional people on its rolls, 200 of them with industrial-engineering degrees. It operates as a management-consulting firm to provide advice, research and employe training for industry. In one case, after the institute analyzed operation of a small textile plant, it suggested changes that led to a doubling of production with about the same-size staff. Scores of Israeli plants now have quality-control departments after having been taught how to set them up.

Aiding the Fabric of Society

Another offshot of the help-Israel campaign is Shenkar College of Fashion and Technology. Michael Nir, its general manager, explains that with help mainly from Britain and the U.S., the school was opened in October 1970 as a two-year college to train students in textile design, production and management. "There was a definite need for an institution of this kind to upgrade the quality of our textile industry," he says.

The college which graduated its first class of 83 last summer, now has 260 students enrolled. Graduates are eagerly sought by this nation's textile industry, which is expected to export over $160 million of products this year, sharply above the $95 million of 1970. The intention is to establish such training facilities for every key industry where they aren't available.

"The Israeli economy now is in transition from pioneering efforts to long-term strategy," says one participant in the current economic conference. And Israeli Finance Minister Sapir warns that it would be wrong to measure results of the conference immediately after it winds up. "We will see the results over the next five years," he says.

Eban Does Not Fear Outcome Of Talks

NEW YORK — Foreign Minister Abba Eban of Israel said here that his country saw nothing to fear from forthcoming talks on the Middle East between President Nixon and the Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Mr. Eban said that after a thorough review in Washington with American authorities, he was convinced that Israel's negotiating possibilities would be defended and that the United States would not give up its view that a political settlement cannot be imposed. The Nixon-Brezhnev summit talks are due to start in Washington on June 18.

He stressed that he felt assured after his round of Washington meetings that America's need for oil purchases from Arab countries would not be allowed to alter relations with Israel, which he described as "firm and steadfast."

Mr. Eban, who is in the United States on a speaking tour, addressed Zionist leaders at a luncheon at 515 Park Avenue celebrating Israel's recent 25th anniversary. He met in Washington with Secretary of State William P. Rogers, Henry A. Kissinger, President Nixon's adviser on national security, and Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz.

Israel Selling Aircraft To Several Countries

PARIS — The first commercial aircraft manufactured in Israel — the Arava and the Jet Commodore — arrived here recently to go on display at the International Air Show. Nearly two million aviation experts, sight-seers and potential buyers are expected to attend the show. Elkana Galli, a spokesman for Israeli Aircraft Industries which manufactures the planes, said its 1973 line has been sold out but it is accepting orders for 1974 models.

Galli said that over a half dozen countries have already purchased the Israeli planes and that an undisclosed number of Israeli-made missiles have been sold abroad. He refused to disclose the buyers. Israel's new "Shafir" missile and the surface-to-surface "Gabriel" missile, a sea-borne weapon, are also on display here.

Galli said that three-fourths of Israeli Aircraft Industry production is devoted to military needs and the rest is for the civilian market. He revealed that the company showed a $2 million profit in 1972.

TO CHANGE LAWS

ROME — Italian Justice Minister Guido Gonella told representatives of the Jewish community here that the government would like to change the law to put Jews and members of other faiths on the same level as Roman Catholics. It proposes, he said, to change certain articles of the penal code, bringing into line sentences for offending any religion. Roman Catholics now enjoy a privileged status in Italian society, partly as a result of the 1929 Church-State Concordat.

RECEIVES DEGREE: Henry Berger, son of Rose Berger of 128 Lexington Avenue, and the late Oscar Berger, received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Clinical Psychology at Columbia University commencement exercises on May 16.

During his doctoral candidacy he was a Fellow of the National Institute of Mental Health.

Dr. Berger is currently on the clinical and supervisory staff of the Fordham University Counseling Center and also holds an academic appointment to the Faculty of Medicine at Columbia.

Dr. Berger was graduated from the Providence Hebrew Day School and Classical High School, magna cum laude.

Find Difficulty In Adjusting

TEL AVIV — Israel is now "flooded" with artists from the East and West. In Israel, a small country with limited means, artists have some difficulties finding a market for their productions.

The artists from the free countries come here with illusions, believing they would be received with open arms. They have, however, some knowledge of the economic conditions; they know there is great competition and that art could be a cruel way to make a living. More difficult is the position of the artists who come from the Communist countries.

They arrive as if from a different planet, where the life of the cities is ordered by the state. They are shocked when they find out they must seek employment in an open market. They come from a giant country to a small land whose population is not larger than a metropolitan city in the Soviet Union.

There is a symphony orchestra in Israel and a small number of theatres whose capacity is limited. The absorption of these artist immigrants is one of the hardest problems facing Israel's Absorption Ministry.

CHIEF RABBIS ELECTED

TEL AVIV — Rabbi Itzhak Yedidya Fraenkel, for more than 30 years the spiritual leader and rabbi of the Southern Tel Aviv suburbs was elected as the Ashkenazic Chief Rabbi of Tel Aviv. Rabbi Chaim David Halevi was elected as the Sephardic Chief Rabbi. Both rabbis had their first meeting and assured everyone that they will work in mutual cooperation and respect so that the Torah is honored. Rabbis Fraenkel and Halevi replace Rabbis Sholmo Goren and Rabbi Yosef Ovadia who were elected to posts of Chief Rabbis for Israel.

OUR YOUNGER SET: David Samuel Resnick, six years old, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Resnick of 44 Laurelhurst Road, Cranston.

Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Louis Vilker of 809 York Avenue, Pawtucket.

INDEX SOARS

JERUSALEM — The consumer price index soared by almost 4 percent during April according to official figures here. The overall price rise since Jan. 1 is 9.5 percent.
