Says Not Hired Because He Was Jewish

CHICAGO — A Chicagoan last week filed a suit in U.S. District Court charging that Oscar Mayer & Co. refused to hire him because he is Jewish.

Leon Cairo said in his suit that he applied for a job as timekeeper at the company's meat packaging plant at 1241 North Sedgwick on August 21, 1969.

The suit alleged that Cairo was shown around the plant four days later and was told by the head timekeeper he could start work the next day.

Cairo said the plant manager then asked if he was Jewish and that when he reported for work the next day he was told he had not been hired.

Revoke Exit Visa Of Professor Zand

TEL AVIV — The exit visa issued to Soviet Jewish scholar and activist Prof. Mikhail Zand last week was revoked before he could reach home with it, it has been reported.

Dr. Zand told the newspaper Maariv by telephone that after he received his visa he rushed to the Dutch Consulate which handles Israeli affairs in Moscow to obtain his Israeli papers and visited the Austrian legation for a transit visa and the local airline office for reservations. He was enroute home when he heard the authorities were looking for him and returned to the visa office.

Dr. Zand, who said he had sold all his possessions in anticipation of his departure for Israel, was told that his exit permit was revoked because of complaints he had engaged in undesirable activities and had contacts with foreigners as well as many visitors in his flat, and that the reports would be investigated.

Memorial Services Held In Vilna, Minsk

NEW YORK — Memorial services for Jewish Martyrs were held in the Soviet cities of Vilna and Minsk, Jewish sources here reported. In Vilna on April 24, at the site of the World War II murder of numerous Jews, hundreds of Jews turned out for a ceremony that included the laying of wreaths, the lighting of six torches and the reciting of Kaddish. The wreaths were laid in the form of a Mogen David.

In Minsk on May 2, around 100 Jewish youths convened at the stone marking the site of the former ghetto. They laid flowers, recited prayers and cleaned up the area. Last year at this time, only 40 persons showed up for the Minsk ceremony, which was then considered a notably large turnout.

Orthodox Groups Ask Abortion Law Review

ORTHODOX GROUPS ASK MIAMI BEACH — State legislatures throughout the country were urged last week "to review and to revise the permissive abortion laws which have been enacted." This appeal was issued by Rabbi Pesach Levovitz, past president of the Rabbinical Council of America, in an address to 500 delegates attending the Council's convention here.

He stressed that this was not an effort to impose Jewish religious law upon the general society but an expression of anxiety over the "general deterioration of moral values in our society, of which permissive abortion is a significant symptom."

Rabbi Levovitz declared that abortions have already assumed "epidemic proportions," and noted that in New York City alone, "over 100,000 unborn children have been aborted since the liberalized law went into effect last July 1." He asserted that most of those abortions were dictated by "consideration of convenience, not of health."

TO RELEASE 25
NEW YORK — Professor Mikhail Zand and 24 other Soviet Jews have been given permission to leave the Soviet Union, it was reported to the Jewish Telegraphic Agency by a reliable source. According to the information, the decision to let the 25 leave was reached by the special police commission set up by the Soviet government in March to speed applications for emigration by Jews. The commission's office was reported last week to be closing.

Say Israel Prepared To Dismantle Bar-Lev

JERUSALEM — Reliable sources said that Israel was prepared to dismantle its Bar-Lev line fortifications on the east bank of the Suez Canal and build a new line further in the Sinai interior as its contribution to an interim settlement to reopen the canal. The sources said that this hinged on the willingness of the United States to finance the construction of a new line which would run into hundreds of millions of dollars.

According to the sources, Washington has indicated a willingness to consider the proposal.

The present Bar-Lev line, a system of in depth fortifications beginning near the canal's east bank, would be blown up. There were no indications where Israel proposed to build the new line.

If the U.S. underwrites the scheme, it would in effect, give Israel the right to retain part of the Sinai peninsula under an interim agreement pending a final peace settlement with secure and agreed borders, the sources said.

In helping Israel implement an interim solution, the U.S. would be doing nothing more "reprehensible" from the Arab point of view than she did when she supplied Israel with Phantom Jets before there was any such agreement the source stated.

Only In America

Pornography in the United States
By Harry Golden

There was a character in Edmund Wilson's novel, "Memoirs of Hecate County," who had devoted half his life to collecting pornography. Having amassed the available supply this chap turned to magic and mastered all the tricks of the great masters. But when he tried to entertain his friends, they spent the evening perusing the books in his library while he kept furtively producing rabbits from hats.

I, too, had a pal who devoted himself to pornography with the same intensity, say, that Richard Nixon has devoted himself to public office. Shall we call him Myron?

Well, Myron had everything: Solomon's "Song of Songs" illustrated with exquisite etchings; leather-bound books from India so clinical hospital libraries could have stacked them; he had D.W. Lawrence's "Lady Chatterly's Lover"; Geronidias's entire list; even Edmund Wilson's once-banned "Memoirs of Hecate County."

Every man needs a bit of celebrity and this was his. He paid high premiums for fire and theft insurance.

Insurance men, dumbfounded at the unexpected windfall, congratulated him on his perspicacity and taste and happily wrote the policies.

Then the United States Supreme Court did him in. Judge Woolsey had dealt him one below the belt when he refused to ban James Joyce's "Ulysses" but the Supreme Court was dealing lethal blows when they ruled the Postmaster ought to get out of the censoring business. Books Myron had paid $200 for flooded the market in cheap paperback editions. The day and age when a Charlotte housewife could go into Eckerd's drugstore on the corner of Tryon and Trade Street and buy the Marquis de Sade along with deodorants was a day and age in which shy pornographers were rapidly losing celebrity.

Even the insurance company wrote him and said his premiums were too high.

That book from India was barnyard literature compared to the sophistication of Playboy magazine or the Evergreen Review.

Myron is cheerier these days. The movie executives have announced films will no longer include explicit sex. The moguls on the Coast have discovered the folks are not so much outraged as indifferent, preferring the implicit sex of "Father Knows Best" or the non-existent sex of "My Three Sons."

The pendulum, Myron told me portentously, is swinging the other way. By the time he dies Myron expects his library to be worth every penny he paid for it, which is one way of looking at things.

I didn't point out that what holds for the movies may also hold for hard-core pornography. Maybe the folks have found the books wanting. The kids after all have the pill and the salesmen have their biennial conventions. The folks may no longer need the books.

Confirmations

The annual Confirmation Service at Temple Beth Shalom will be celebrated on Friday, May 28, at 8:15 p.m. Rabbi Marc S. Jagoliner will officiate at a special folk-rock service titled, "Chants for Peace," assisted by the confirmands and Mrs. Norman Landroche at the organ.

"Chants for Peace" is an original folk-rock service based on the traditional Maariv service. It combines Jewish musical concepts with the folk/rock rhythms and chord progressions.

An Oneg Shabbat will follow the service.

High school graduation at Temple Sinai will be held at Friday evening services on May 28 starting at 8:30 o'clock. Students who will be graduated include Joyce Abrams, Peter Adelsberger, Susan Bell, Ellen Berlinsky, Marcia Goldstein and Richard Silver.

Pay Tribute To Woman

NEW YORK —For almost an hour last week 1,500 persons filled a synagogue on the Upper East Side and paid tribute to a Jewish woman from the Soviet Union whose daughter was about to go on trial there.

She is Mrs. Rivka Aleksandrovich, 47 years old, a teacher of language who speaks Hebrew, Yiddish and English along with Russian. Her daughter, Ruth, a 23-year-old nurse, went on trial May 24 in the Latvian capital of Riga on charges of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda.

Only recently Mrs. Aleksandrovich, her husband and their son were granted visas to leave the Soviet Union. She and the son went to Israel, while her husband remained behind to be close to their daughter.

She came here to plead the cause of Soviet Jews and plans to return to Israel.

Mrs. Aleksandrovich had heard about the rally for Soviet Jews at the Park East Synagogue, at 163 East 67th Street —opposite the Soviet Mission to the United Nations. When she entered the synagogue, she was immediately recognized.

As if by signal, the audience began chanting in Hebrew "Am Yisroel Chai" ("The People of Israel Live") and "Let our people go." Then followed an unusual tribute.

Mrs. Aleksandrovich was carried aloft in a chair several times around the synagogue. The Hassidic custom, normally reserved for a bride and groom, is also a tribute to a woman who has distinguished herself.

Mrs. Aleksandrovich was reported to have gone on a hunger strike in the Soviet Union and to have spoken out in behalf of Israel.

Speaking in Hebrew in front of the Ark, which holds the Holy Scrolls, Mrs. Aleksandrovich remarked, "What a joy to speak Hebrew publicly; what a joy also to speak in Yiddish."

The rally was sponsored by the New York Conference on Soviet Jewry in cooperation with Jewish youth groups. Earlier in the day, Mrs. Aleksandrovich appeared at a news conference of the American Jewish Committee and spoke of the desire of Soviet Jews to emigrate to Israel.

Convictions in Leningrad

A Leningrad court has convicted the nine Jews who have been on trial there and sentenced them to terms of one to ten years. This semi-secret trial from which foreign observers were barred sheds light on the two-pronged nature of the strategy Moscow has adopted to deal with what it regards as a complex and difficult problem.

Moscow looks forward to the time when Soviet Jews will have been completely assimilated and will be completely unidentifiable as a special cultural, religious or other minority. However, the process of voluntary assimilation is a slow one. It is evident that the Mideast Six-Day War in 1967 stirred many young Soviet Jews, gave them pride in their heritage and stimulated Zionist feeling.

Now the Soviet Government is attempting to reverse that setback in its policy. One tactic, represented by the latest Leningrad trial and its predecessor last December, is aimed at terrorizing Jews who resist assimilation and who actively seek to learn more about their heritage and to spread such knowledge. The second tactic, represented by the sudden increase of exit visas earlier this year, is to get rid of some of the worst "troublemakers," i.e. of some of the Jews who are considered hopelessly anti-assimilationist.

This double strategy, particularly in its repressive aspects, cannot work. Sooner or later the Soviet Government is going to have to recognize that the only thing that will solve the "Jewish problem" in the USSR is to open the doors and let anyone leave who desires to do so.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

After Seven Years

By BERYL SEGAL

Only seven years have elapsed since the General Jewish Committee, now the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island, published the Population Survey of the Jews in Greater Providence, made by Dr. Sidney Goldstein, and already the same author has published a follow-up study that suggests changes in the population patterns in the various cities and towns of the state.

The new study is called "Number and Distribution of Jewish Households in Rhode Island," and was prepared for the National Jewish Population Study of 1970.

In this study the author makes comparisons between the survey made by the Jewish Community Center in 1951, the population study of 1963, and the data of the decennial Federal Census in 1970. Thus we have a span of 20 years, and of seven year intervals, and the results are very striking.

The first thing that strikes us is the fact that the number of Jews in the state did not change during these 20 years. It remains relatively stable at about 6,000 families. By intuition, if not by actual counting, we have not been saying for the past 20 years or so, that the number of Jews hovers between 24,000 and 25,000 souls. That number is still the same in the Present study as well as in the 1963 and 1951 surveys.

Still more striking are the facts of distribution of Jewish families throughout the state.

What were the centers of greatest Jewish concentration are now almost deserted. What were suburbs in the 1951 survey are now cities in their own right, and they are forming sub-suburbs and outcroppings into new areas in the state. These changes are noticeable even within the seven years since Dr. Goldstein completed his now famous population survey in 1963.

In 1963, the number of Jewish households in the suburbs was 1,644. In the 1970 study that number had grown to 2,032, an increase of 24% in seven years. About 35% of the entire Jewish population lives in suburbia. It is not a particular Jewish problem. The problem of Inner City and Blighted Area is general.

The exodus from Providence is appalling when we compare the number of Jewish households 20 years ago and today.

The South Side of Providence, a district thickly populated by Jews, has come down from 1,871 to 725 households. We have to remember that for purposes of the Federal Census, Washington Park, Broad Street and Elmwood Avenue are included in the South Side. The neighborhood we remember, the Willard-Prairie Avenue, the South Side proper is all but empty of Jews. The neighborhood that had five Shulim, a Hebrew school, Jewish stores and shops of every description, halls for meetings and weddings, street corners where people gathered on summer evenings for continuous debates and discussions, all this is gone.

The North End fared much better during these 20 years. There the population moved up toward better neighborhoods, but still remained in the North End. Shawmut and Chalkstone Avenues are gone, but there is still Pembroke and Oaklawn Avenues and the streets facing Chapin Hospital and Providence College. Still the number of Jewish households 20 years ago was over 800, while in 1963 it was only 330, and in 1970 it went down to 216.

The area that holds its own, and still has the greatest concentration of Jews in the state is the East Side. Even here some changes are noticed. In 1963 the number of households was 2,296. In 1970 it came down to 2,059. This is due to the incursion of the Black community in the old East Side, namely the Benefit, Camp and Hope Street areas.

In the suburbs the picture is very interesting. It seems that the suburbs have problems of their own now. Thus in Cranston, the Eden Park area declined from 328 households in 1963 to 306 in 1970. Inhabitants of the Eden Park area will probably find some reason for the decline, but it shows a trend. On the other hand, the Glenwood area has grown from 200 to 251 households in seven years. Garden City has doubled its Jewish population and Oaklawn grew from 64 in 1963 to 136 households in 1970.

Twenty years ago the Cranston Jewish Center, now Temple Beth Torah, was the only Jewish house of worship and gathering in the suburbs. Now it is joined by Sinai and Beth Am. Warwick, only in its infancy in the previous surveys as a suburb of Providence, is now the fastest growing city in the state. It shows a fantastic number of Jewish households since 1963. Warwick today has 500 Jewish households. The areas of greatest concentration is in the Governor Francis Farms, the Pilgrim Park, the Gaspee Plateau and in Massachusetts. And it is growing or spreading out to East Greenwich.

Ironically, East Greenwich had at one time a considerable Jewish population as is evidenced by the Shul that still stands there.

We cannot go into details of all the cities and towns of the state. There is much valuable information on the East Providence-Barrington-Bristol about changes in Pawtucket and Woonsocket and other communities in the state. We might come back to Dr. Goldstein's study some other time.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

By Roger E. Spear

Low-Priced Tobacco Issue Attractive

Q: I have been following tobacco stocks closely and am surprised at the weakness in British American Tobacco shares. Do you expect the stock to rise? —K.S.

A: A temporary reaction following a stock split is not unusual and these shares which were split two-for-one in mid-January have since rallied strongly. R.P. Dobsen, chairman, recently estimated that sales for the current fiscal year to end September will probably not be much different than those of fiscal 1970. Record 1970 sales reflected improvement in all products areas.

The Brown & Williamson subsidiary increased its share of the U.S. tobacco market and hiked profit margins as well. The previously unprofitable perfume business recovered, contributing to the 20% gain in earnings to a new high. Tobacco products are sold on a worldwide basis, excluding Great Britain, however. Softness in any marketing area is somewhat dissipated by the company's geographical diversification.

Company has reduced dependence on the one product; 86% of 1970 sales were derived from tobacco compared with 97% in 1969. Registered ADRs, now trading at 11x 1970 net, appear to have better-than-average upside potential.

Q: Recently I received a settlement of $20,000. In addition to this I have capital of $5,000 and retirement income of $225 a month. The money is now in a 90-day account at 5 1/4%. Should I buy $15,000 Boise Cascade 10% bonds or put the money in 2-year certificates of deposit and live on the 6% interest? —O.B.

A: The $15,000 which you have available for investment would purchase 14 Boise Cascade

Credit Corp. bonds and would return $1400 annually. Certificates of deposit would pay $900 on the same investment. This would be $9.61 less income per week. On the other hand, when these bonds are redeemed in 1975, you will receive face value or $1000 per bond compared with a cost of $1080.

There is also a considerable difference in the risk involved in the bonds as compared with certificates of deposit.

Housing Boom—Fact or Fiction

Q: I have 1000 shares of Masonite Corp. at an average cost of $49. What is your opinion regarding its long-term growth and future splits? —R.C.

A: With approximately two-thirds of sales derived from the building and allied industries the fortunes of Masonite are closely tied to those of the construction industry. That a building boom is long overdue is a foregone conclusion; whether one materializes, however, remains to be seen. Certainly all the ingredients are there.

In the Seventies some 14 million new households will be formed, 40% more than in the Sixties. The government is committed to keeping the money supply at a level which will spur construction. Mortgage rates have eased to a 20-month low, while mortgage money, generated by the high rate of savings, is more available than ever.

The Nixon Administration has projected that housing starts will reach 2 million this year. However, more conservative estimates of 1.8-1.9 million are still substantially higher than the 1.46 million of 1970.

The greatest area of need is for the $20-$22,000 house. Yet according to the Federal Home Loan Bank, the average home purchase price was $36,600 in

From time to time I hear minor complaints that many of my columns are geared too high for the newer player. Today's hand is pointed to those neophytes who have spoken thus. The experts and pseudo-experts will just have to bear with me for this one even though I watched in horror as a couple of duplicate players, players who should have known better, went wrong. I will show you just what they did and how they should have known to do otherwise.

Moral: Holding enough Trumps, if you can afford to ruff high, ruff as high as you can to stop an overruff. But when ruffing high might cost you a Trump trick and there is little danger of an overruff, ruff low.

ECOLOGY INSTRUCTION

GREENFIELD PARK, N.Y. —The Hebrew day schools joined the ranks of the conservation-minded by deciding to initiate instruction in ecology. The move was approved by 300 day school principals at the end of a four-day convention here of the National Conference of Yeshiva Principals and the National Association of Hebrew Day School Administrators, affiliates of Torah Umesorah, the National Society for Hebrew Day Schools.

No one was vulnerable, East Dealer with this bidding.

E	S	W	N

To discuss the bidding, South felt entitled to make a try for game even though he had but 15 high card points because he did have a six-card suit already supported. He reasoned that the extra Heart was worth the effort, North went on to game, accepting the offer even though he had a weak hand. He did have the upper part of his bid for his raise to two had shown but five to nine points. So South became Declarer at game in Hearts.

West made the automatic lead of the Diamond Queen won by Declarer's Ace. At this time the better players would plan their play by counting their tricks and figuring just where they could best obtain more. Even if the Trumps broke as badly as three-one they had six Trump tricks plus the two high Spades and the Diamond Ace. This added to nine. The tenth could easily come from ruffing the small Spade in South with one of Dummy's Trumps.

Obviously this plan is the best and all Declarers should go along on this basis but how to do this varies greatly. Most players have been taught to draw Trumps. But the idea is to draw them unless there is something better to do with them. Here one of them had to be used for ruffing. So one Declarer drew all the Trumps and had none left to take care of his losing Spade.

The best way is to draw two rounds, hoping they break evenly. When they don't ruff the Spade with Dummy's remaining Trump, then return to South and draw the other Trump. One Declarer did this wrong, too. He did draw two rounds but played his own King first and then went to Dummy's Ace. True, he still had a trump in Dummy but it was the high one. If he used it to trump with, it would make East's Jack high for the setting trick. What he should have done was to play the two high Trumps from Dummy first. When the Trumps broke badly, stop and now ruff the third Spade with Dummy's small Trump. When he gets back to his own hand eventually he can then draw East's last Trump and make the hand.

Of course, they could have easily ruffed that Spade before even touching the Trumps as long as they ruffed low. But they should not tempt fate even though that would have worked almost all the time. Every once in a while someone might be out of Spades, too, and overruff if the Trumps are not taken out.

The best technique is to play as safely as you can and in situations like this the best way is to test the Trumps first and then proceed in the manner dictated from there.

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

Hello Again!

ARGUE ABOUT THIS: Which is the biggest event in the world of sports? Is it the World Series of Baseball? Or the Super Bowl game of football? And how about a heavyweight boxing championship? Or maybe it's the 500-mile Indianapolis Auto Racing Classic!
NO CAR FARE: The world's first auto race was in France on June 22, 1894. The course was from Paris to Rouen. Henry Ford wanted to see that race but couldn't get there. It is said he couldn't even borrow the carfare.

A MILE A MINUTE: Ford built an early racing car known as "999" but didn't consider it too good and sold it to Barney Oldfield and Tom Cooper, that pair rebuilding it and eventually developing "a mile a minute" with it. It was the first time that unheard of speed had been attained. Sixty miles an hour was considered "fast" in those days. Qualifying runs for this 1971 "Classic" have averaged 171,604 miles per hour!
FIRSTS? It is said that the first race track was built at Washington Park, Chicago, and the world's first auto racing speedway was built at —where do you think? —Indianapolis, of course.

NARRAGANSETT PARK: Big time automobile racing was held at old Narragansett Park, located where Cranston Stadium now stands. A famous match race between immortals Barney Oldfield and Ralph DePalma took place there.

ON SMITH STREET, PROVIDENCE: Preparing for his race with Oldfield, the great DePalma tuned his car in a shed that occupied the space now used for parking adjacent to the R.I. State Office Building. He drove the car up and down Smith Street in front of the R.I. State House for tune-ups. (And "Yes" —the front of the State House is on the Smith Street side although the great marble stairway entrance on the other side appears like the front. It wasn't because the old Cove Basin was on that side when Stanford White designed the architecturally-perfect edifice.)

ASK PAT LOMBARI: I talked with Pat Lombardi, auto - engineer - superb, about racing during the past week and the subject switched to the motor-paced bicycle kind, Pat having piloted one of those blarsting, noise-making contrivances on the banked wooden tracks when such "greats" as Vincent "Poosha" Madonna, George Chapman, Clarence Carman and others rode the "Wheels in daring competition."

CYCLEDROMES: Huge wooden saucers were built for the races, one being located near the corner of Reservoir and Park Avenues. Crowds were attracted for miles around with programs being held twice a week. There were seven laps to the mile at that Cranston Cycledrome, according to Mr. Lombardi. Later a more spacious oval was built off North Main Street at the Providence-Pawtucket line. There were only four laps to the mile in that one. In fact, its infield was big enough for football games and it became the home of the world champion Providence Steamroller team. It seated more than 15-thousand and was filled to capacity for both bicycle racing and football games.

MOTOR-PACED: It meant that a "pacer" rode a motorcycle in front of the bicycle-rider. The bicycles were built with a big back wheel and a smaller wheel in front. The smaller wheel matched, in height, a metal roller on the back of the motor-cycle and when the pedaling rider pressed lightly against the roller, the pacer would speed up. A good pacer was of utmost importance for if he put on too much speed the motorcycle would pull away from the bicycle rider who would lose his pace and have to get started all over again as his competitors veritably flew past.

HOW FAST? There were several types of events including "The Race Of Nations," match races and a race of one hour duration. During that hour the riders would cover sixty miles —so —they must have been going sixty miles an hour. It required skill and steel nerves for both pace-maker and rider and it was one of the greatest of all sports. "Do you think it could come back?" was the question asked Pat Lombardi. "I don't think they'd go these days," he replied. Then with characteristic enthusiasm, he checked himself. "I'd go," he said, "And yes, I guess it would make a terrific television attraction!" — And so Pat, it WAS great stuff — and CARRY ON!

The Other Side Of The Question

A Soviet Jew Replies To The US Protests

By ARON VERGELIS
 (Aron Vergelis is a Soviet Yiddish poet and editor in chief of the Moscow Yiddish magazine Sovietisch Helmland.)

MOSCOW — It is with more than a little astonishment that I read tales in the American press about the "plight" of Jews in the Soviet Union. There is no freedom of religion, Jewish culture is suppressed, great masses of Soviet Jews clamor to leave their homeland for Israel and so on ad nauseum.

I often wonder: Are the authors of these tales really talking about the Soviet Union?

What they say has no relation whatever to the facts, to put the matter most politely. Why then are these tales concocted?

Take the canard that Jewish culture is suppressed. I happen to have some familiarity with this question as a writer of Jewish descent and as the chief editor of a Yiddish cultural publication, who has lived all his life in the Soviet Union, quite happily, thank you.

As readers of The New York Times should know, the Soviet Union is a multinational state. Soviet citizens of Jewish descent have made and are making a most worthy contribution.

I do not know how many literary works are published in Yiddish in the United States, but judging from what I hear, they are very, very few in number. In the Soviet Union, which has a considerably smaller Jewish population than does the United States, writers of Jewish descent, who choose to write in Yiddish, publish numerous books annually.

I understand that in the United States the Yiddish theater has died out. In the Soviet Union there are Jewish theatrical companies, both professional and amateur, in Vilnius, Kaunas, Kishinev, Dvinsk, Birobidjan and elsewhere. Yiddish songs are recorded and widely distributed on gramophone discs.

And then, there is the canard, uncritically swallowed by some Americans, that great numbers of Soviet Jews ardently desire to leave their homeland and to settle in Israel because of Zionist sentiments.

May I assure my readers that I have attempted to make a thorough study of these allegations and found them completely groundless. First, only a relatively insignificant number of Soviet Jews apply for permits to go to Israel; second, most of these applications are motivated by the desire for reunion with relatives.

The Zionist tale that the Soviet Government prevents Jews from going to Israel is patently absurd. Not long ago a high Israeli official stated that about a thousand Jews annually emigrate from the Soviet Union to Israel. Despite the absence of diplomatic relations between the Soviet Union and Israel, Soviet Jews who wish to go to Israel can do so —not, of course, by hijacking airplanes.

That the number of such Jews is very small simply testifies to the truth that the vast majority of Jews in the Soviet Union are devoted to the same lofty socialist ideals as the other peoples of the Soviet Union and totally reject the pretensions of Zionism.

And this brings me back to the question I originally raised: What motivates the current Zionist barrage of anti-Soviet fabrications and the shouts about "Soviet anti-Semitism?"

The root cause, I believe, is the crisis of Zionism itself, stemming from its ideological and political failures. The leaders of Zionism had hoped to draw to Israel, Jewish people from all corners of the world. But this was a wild dream that failed.

The intensification of Zionism's anti-Soviet campaign is timed with a view to the 28th world Zionist congress scheduled to take place at the end of this year. One of the goals of the congress is to raise a billion dollars for Israel to enable it to continue its course of aggression.

Whether these Americans are ready to be milked by the organizers of the congress is their business. But as a Soviet citizen and as the editor of a Soviet Jewish literary publication, I feel impelled to register my indignation at the anti-Soviet canards that are being fabricated in this connection.

15,000 STUDY IN ISRAEL
JERUSALEM —With the graduation of 21 students from the Hebrew University's fourth international course in groundwater research, exactly 15,000 students from developing countries have completed studies in Israel over the past 15 years. That figure was given at a farewell banquet for the 21 new graduates by Azriel Harel.

Mr. Hochman, son of Mrs. Vera Hochman of 115 Lauriston Street, is also a member of the debate club at RIC. Before transferring from Rhode Island Junior College, he won the RIJC Alumni Award and was named to "Who's Who in American Junior Colleges." Kirk House and Armando Marini, standing at left and repr, directed the play which also featured Beverly Marini and Ron Depot.

Columbia Rabbi Becomes Symbol Of Restructuring Of Campus

NEW YORK — A 28-year-old rabbi at Columbia University has become a symbol of a restructuring of the university community that has followed the campus disorders of 1968.

Rabbi Charles Sheer, chosen as Jewish chaplain at Columbia by students from among half a dozen rabbis they interviewed, will be under contract, beginning September, to a tax-exempt federation made up of Columbia students, alumni and faculty members and of leading Jews in the city.

Before the demonstrations of 1968, the Jewish chaplain was selected by an alumni group known as the Jewish Advisory Board. Its choice was approved, almost as a matter of routine, by the trustees of Columbia.

"This is a new concept in religious campus organization," said Rabbi Sheer in an interview describing the foundation, called Jewish Campus Fund Life, Inc. "This approach may become a model for agencies in universities around the country," he said.

The foundation will soon announce a drive for about $40,000 for a year's program that includes not only religious services but also lectures, seminars, movies, folk dancing, outings, a newspaper and Talmudic studies.

A body of representatives comprises five students, five alumni, three professors and two members of the city's Jewish community. A student, Steven M. Cohen, is a vice president of the group.

"We have a much broader base now," said Clarence S. Barasch, a graduate of Columbia College and Columbia Law School, who is president of the foundation.

"We are much closer to the students and professors and they will instruct us," he remarked. "We have great hopes. I'm sure it will be tried to other universities."

Indicative of the sober approach of the students to Jewish questions was a discussion last year, at the Earl Hall Center for Religion and Life on how to observe the 25th anniversary of the holocaust of Jews in Europe.

One student suggested that Jews at Columbia be urged to wear yellow arm bands like those decreed for Jews by the Nazis. This idea was rejected on the ground that the arm band symbolized much greater suffering than anything the students had endured. Instead, they wore buttons with a yellow Star of David.

In his office, in the basement of Earl Hall, the blond-bearded rabbi described in an interview how the Jewish groups at Columbia had evolved the concept of a federation. He said:

"The students and I did most of the groundwork, and then the alumni arranged the legal details. Though I will be under contract to the foundation, the students, in effect, appoint the rabbi, and they can fire him."

According to Rabbi Sheer, 7,000 to 8,000 of the university's 18,000 students are Jewish.

The student groups under the foundation's umbrella are Ikar, a Reform group; The Jewish Free Press; Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry, which organizes rallies and programs; Kadimah, which sponsors Israel-oriented programs; Yavneh, a national Orthodox organization, and a Sabbath Meals Committee. Together, they make up the Council of Jewish Organizations. Representatives of the groups, each of which organizes its own program, meet Monday night in the chaplain's office.

Complicating the situation at Columbia is the presence of Rabbi R. Bruce Goldman, who was active as chaplain in leading activists during the 1968 confrontations. He still regards himself as a chaplain and has an office across the hall from Rabbi Sheer.

Rabbi Goldman, who is adviser to the Radical Jewish Union, a Columbia group, concedes that the university administration regards Rabbi Sheer as the chaplain and says, "We are essentially attempting to reach alienated and disaffected Jews."

Rabbi Sheer, who has found that the students have a considerable interest in courses in Yiddish, thinks these students are trying to recapture a vanishing aspect of Jewish life.

The rabbi, a native New Yorker, is a graduate of Yeshiva University and was ordained at the university's Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary. He was associate rabbi to Rabbi Irving Greenberg at the Riverdale Jewish Center in the Bronx. He is married and has two children.

The foundation, in stressing the need for continuance of its program, said in a flier on its aims:

"At a time when young are searching people for values, the insights and wisdom of Jewish tradition should be made available via mature, sensitive Jewish programming on our campuses."

Editor's Mailbox

Says That The End Justifies Means

I was amused by your editorial last week concerning the unholy alliance between Rabbi Kahane and Mr. Joseph Colombo. Once again, the Herald has shown that it does not understand politics or the struggle for Jewish survival. The JDL is the only group to ally itself both with the Italian-Americans and a Black group called NEGRO in the struggle for Soviet Jews. The Brussels Conference for Soviet Jewry ended with an appeal to world morality to save the Jews in Russia. Never has world morality helped the Jews, nor will it in the future. There is no morality in politics. Only a Don Quixote thinks that there is. There is no morality in the struggle for liberation except the struggle itself, and it is that struggle which makes the methods moral.

We Jews must learn a very difficult lesson. You take your help from whence it comes. The Radical Zionist Alliance has announced that their struggle for Soviet Jews will not include anti-Communist baiting. This is the type of thinking that has led to the Jews' destruction. You take your help from whence it comes. One may be a left-wing socialist, but if it takes the help of right-wing anti-Communists to free the Soviet Jews, so be it. We do not have that many friends that we can afford to turn from those who offer assistance.

It is obvious to me that you are using this alliance as just another way to condemn Rabbi Kahane and the JDL. I think back to the 40s when the late great Ben Hecht along with Mickey Cohen (an underworld figure) raised with the help of 500 other underworld figures $300,000 to further the struggle of the Irgun. I do not recall seeing any negative editorials about that. One last point in behalf of Mr. Colombo. He went to the Washington demonstration for Soviet Jews March 21. How many Rabbis and leaders of the Jewish Federation went on the 21. Why no editorial about their indifference to the cause. You take your help from whence it comes.

Shavuos
Celebration Of Holiday Begins Sunday, May 30
SHAVUOS ("weeks," "Pentecost," "the fiftieth day") celebrated on the sixth of Sivan (and also on the seventh outside of Israel) occurs this year on May 30. It is one of the three pilgrim festivals created to mark the end of the barley and beginning of the wheat harvest. It is stated in Leviticus: "From the day after the Sabbath, the day that you bring the sheaf of wave-offering you shall count (until) seven full weeks have elapsed; you shall count fifty days, until the day after the seventh day; then you shall bring an offering of new grain to the Lord" (Lev. 23:15-16 and to 21).
Since the sheaf was waved on the day after the Sabbath on the festival of Passover, Shavuos falls 50 days after this day. Shavuos was also associated with the bringing of the bikkurim (the first ripe fruits) to the Sanctuary.
In rabbinic times a remarkable transformation of the festival took place and it became the anniversary of the giving of the Torah at Sinai. This was in accord with a process to be observed in the Bible in which the ancient agricultural feasts were transformed into festivals marking the anniversary of significant historical events in the life of the people. Since Passover and Sukkos are connected with the Exodus, it was natural to link Shavuos with this event. When this transformation took place is not exactly clear but the earliest clear references to Shavuos as the anniversary of the giving of the Torah are from the third century.
CUSTOMS
In the synagogue it is customary to read the Book of Ruth on Shavuos since the events recorded in Ruth took place at harvest time; Ruth was the ancestor of David who traditionally died on Shavuos; Ruth's "conversion" is appropriate reading for the festival which commemorates the giving of the Torah; and Ruth's loyalty is symbolic of Israel's loyalty to the Torah.
It is customary to adorn the synagogue with plants and flowers on Shavuos because tradition has it that Sinai was a green mountain; trees symbolize Shavuos as judgment day for the fruit of the tree.
It is a home custom to eat dairy products on Shavuos because the Torah is compared to milk and because the law of the first fruits is placed in juxtaposition to a law concerning milk.
From Volume 17, one of the 25,000 entries of "Encyclopaedia Judaica," to be published in 15 volumes in fall of 1971 by Keter Publishing House, Ltd., Jerusalem.

Podgorny Warmly Received In Egypt
CAIRO — President Nikolai V. Podgorny of the Soviet Union was received with smiles, a warm embrace and kisses by President Anwar el-Sadat as he arrived for crucial talks on the state of Soviet-Egyptian relations.
Mr. Podgorny was also smiling broadly as he emerged from an Ilyushin-62 airliner under a blazing sun and in 100-degree heat. The good cheer continued through 15 minutes of ceremony, including a review of elite Republican Guard troops, handshakes with officials, officers, foreign diplomats and a line-up of Soviet representatives and their wives.
Although the visit of President Podgorny has been termed unofficial, a 21-gun salute boomed over the airport. A thousand or so Egyptians cheered from the airport's observation platform and waved portraits of Mr. Podgorny and Mr. Sadat.
The enthusiastic welcome reflected an Egyptian effort not to allow the recent political shake-up to damage Soviet-Egyptian relations and, in particular, Soviet military, economic and political support.
As a result of a challenge to Mr. Sadat's leadership, some of the Soviet Union's closest supporters and ideological sympathizers have been deposed from high posts and imprisoned, including the former Vice President, Aly Sabry, and a number of leading officials in the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's only political organization.
The Arab Socialist Union, which the Russians had hoped to see emerge ultimately as a political party, has fallen under a dark cloud of distrust and has been put under a caretaker leadership pending new elections and complete reorganization.
Nonetheless, a large red banner hung from the airport observation platform today proclaiming, "The Arab Socialist Union Welcomes President Podgorny."
The political issues were put aside at the airport, however, to be taken up later when Mr. Podgorny, Mr. Sadat and high-level delegations from both sides began talks in Kubbeh Republican Palace, where Mr. Podgorny will stay during his visit.
During the drive from the airport to Kubbeh Palace, Mr. Sadat's Cadillac, the two Presidents stopped briefly at the Gamel Abdel Nasser Mosque to visit the tomb of the late Egyptian leader.
A wide-ranging review of issues was indicated by the membership of the Soviet delegation which includes Boris N. Ponomarev, Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, Gen. Ivan G. Pavlovsky, First Deputy Defense Minister, and Semyon A. Skachkov, chairman of the State Committee for Foreign Economic Relations.
Mr. Skachkov has been in Egypt for several days to discuss implementation of Soviet assistance for economic-development projects.
On the Egyptian side, those taking part in the talks, besides President Sadat, will be Premier Mahmoud Fawzi, Dr. Aziz Sidky, a Deputy Premier and Minister of Industry; Hafez Badawy, Speaker of the National Assembly; Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad, the Minister of War, Gen. Mohammed Sadek; and Mohammed Ahmed, Minister of State for Presidential Affairs.
There is much for the two sides to review. The Soviet Union is the predominant source of military equipment for the Egyptian armed forces and also is providing air defense for vital targets in the Nile Valley and Delta.
The Russians also have undertaken new aid commitments totaling several hundred million dollars for industrial, agricultural development and rural electrification projects.
In the international arena, Moscow has gone down the line supporting Egyptian terms for a settlement of the conflict with Israel.
'Rafael,' Israeli Secret Weapon Keeps Army Confident
JERUSALEM — Not a little of the Israeli Army's confidence that it can face up to and defeat any new Egyptian military initiative is due to "Rafael" — the acronym for Rashut Leptuah Emtsey Lehima, the Armament Development Authority of the Defense Ministry.
A small corner of the veil of secrecy in which this organization is normally tightly wrapped was lifted by its 44-year-old Israeli-born director, Dr. Zeev Benon, in a recent interview with the Technion magazine.
Dr. Benon rears appears in public print. The last time his name came up was in 1970, when he received the Israel Defense Prize on behalf of himself and a six-member team of scientists.
Even then, the citation referred only to the development of what was described as "weaponry for the Air Force."
Dr. Benon listed for the Technion magazine the kind of development projects on which Rafael is engaged: aircraft armaments, computers, electronic systems, specialized communication systems, rocket propellents, explosives, fuses and

Nahum Goldmann

Brilliantly Irreverent All His Life

By Terry Coleman

LONDON — Nahum Goldmann has been brilliantly irreverent all his life. As a little boy living in a Lithuanian stetl he rode into the synagogue one Sabbath morning on the back of a St. Bernard dog, and got away with it. At the age of four he took exception to the biblical description of angels "ascending and descending," objecting that since they were already in heaven they ought first to descend. As a lawyer in Germany, he was declared by the Gestapo to be Public Enemy No. 1. Nowadays, at the age of 75, having for many years been president of the World Jewish Congress, a sort of president of the Diaspora, he continues to make proposals, full of irreverent sense, that do not commend themselves to the Government of Israel.

He has been a Zionist all his life. But he has said that Israel must in the end come to terms with the Arabs; that Israelis should think twice before scoffing at the Arab character, because it is not so different from their own; and that it is senseless for Israel to keep on saying to the Jews of the Diaspora that they must stand by Israel, come what may, but that they can have no say in Israel's affairs.

Dr. Goldmann travels about seven months of the year, and a few days ago he was in London.

Now, four Jews live outside Israel to every one who lives there. Does he foresee any change in this proportion? "I see changes. But I don't foresee a situation — at least we don't know what will happen when the Messiah comes — where the majority of Jews, or the large majority, will live in their own country." Then he came out with his proposal that Israel should be neutralized, and become the spiritual centre of the Jewish people.

But how could Israel pride tolerate neutrality, and how could it be done anyway? By the guarantee of all other countries, he said. As soon as the Arabs realized that they could not defeat Israel, then it became in their interest to have Israel out of world politics.

Dr. Goldmann said Arabs could be very brutal but also very generous, and it would be a tremendous appeal to their pride to be asked to help to guarantee the existence of Israel. "Arabs have a feeling of inferiority. They are 80 millions. They are defeated three times by this lousy small people. If Israel would turn to them — naturally it can't be done tonight — say, 'Look here, we have suffered; we lost six million in Nazi gas chambers. We appeal to you. In our history you were not bad; the Moslem-Jewish relations were much better than the Christian-Jewish relations. We want you to be the guarantors, with others, of our existence.' I could imagine that's not impossible."

But how could Israel bring herself to ask? Dr. Goldmann said that was the real difficulty. He did not say it could be done in two or three years, but it was a much less utopian idea than the idea of a Jewish state had been 50 years ago. And was this idea of neutrality something he would have discussed with President Nasser last year, if the Israeli Government had not prevented the meeting? It might have been.

As a statesman of nearly 40 years' experience, Dr. Goldmann is much respected, and so he might be. In the thirties he asked Mussolini to intercede with Hitler for the Jews of the Saar, and the Saar Jews were allowed to leave. In the early 1950s he negotiated with Chancellor Adenauer for reparations to be paid for the millions of Jews murdered by the Nazis, and West Germany paid reparations. But he thinks that if a plebiscite had been held, most Israelis would have disapproved of his treating with Germany at all. Many Israelis certainly disapproved of his willingness to treat with Nasser at all.

So I asked Dr. Goldmann if it would be fair to say that most Israelis, for reasons of their own, could not stand him. He thought that was exaggerated. The Israeli demagogic press hated him, but he had support in the universities and among the young.

But Israelis are apt to be hawks. And he is a dove? — "Sure. Always a dove. No secret." He once told Ben-Gurion, "You think you can force the Arabs to accept you. I only think we can persuade. . . . The difference of our method is — you rape, and I seduce."

Dr. Goldmann is not himself a religious man, but he sees the importance of religion in keeping the Jewish people together, and to this end, as I understand him, would like to see the demands of religion made less rigid. He thinks that in Israel the Jewish religion is too frozen, and that the Roman Catholic Church, for instance, is much more flexible. He says, "On the Sabbath, the only day in Israel a Jewish boy can rest, he cannot ride in buses. So he begins to hate religion. To say, 'What in hell, this kind of religion.'"

Dr. Goldmann has also been direct enough and tactless enough to point out that both Jews and Arabs are of the Semitic race. There is, he insists, a lot of affinity; a family struggle is always a bitter one, and the Semitic race has a tremendous memory, never forgetting and rarely forgiving.

Why, when he had been offered the job of Foreign Minister of Israel when the State was first established, and when he had been offered posts later on, had he always declined? He thought, among other things, that he was not sure he would have succeeded in Israel, where the mood of the people was "more Ben-Gurionish than mine — fanatic, rigid, not ready to compromise." Secondly, he was a nineteenth-century liberal, not a party man, and Israel had one of the most rigid party systems in the world. He was a lone wolf. He did once join a party, but after three days was expected to vote against his beliefs, and said goodbye.

Why had he not accepted the Israeli ambassadorship in London, which he was also offered? Because he could not stand the idea of the formal visits and cocktail parties. He called himself a bit of a Bohemian, and then he went through the various nationalities, or at least passports, he has held in his lifetime.

He was born a Russian. In the 1914-18 war he held a Spanish passport of convenience. After the war his native village had become Lithuanian and he was handed a Lithuanian passport where his name was written, according to the Lithuanian custom, as Doctoras Nahumas Goldmann. To have his name spelled that way was not for him so he gave it back. Then his village became Polish, and he had a Polish passport, but they had pogroms in Poland so he thought to ehll with being Polish. He claimed German nationality, but then the Nazis denaturalized him for high treason.

Then he was told he could have French citizenship after three years, but declined this, saying that in two or three years there would be war, that France mobilized everyone up to the age of 55, that though he liked France he had no desire to go to war for her, and that as chairman of the World Jewish Congress he could not afford to be a deserter. So he was advised to become Honduran consul at Geneva with a Honduras passport, and did. In the war he emigrated to the United States. Later he became an Israeli, and a few years ago also a Swiss, for tax reasons, and also because it is convenient for him sometimes to travel on a neutral passport. He is now both Israeli and Swiss, and has flats in Paris, London, and New York.

I said that a good Jewish novelist I had met two days before had expressed a strong belief in a Jewish destiny. Did Dr. Goldmann have such a belief? He replied that if I meant something ordained by God, he did not. After the Six-day War, a religious leader he respected had got up and said that the victory had naturally been brought about by God. "So I got up and I said, 'Now look here, if God is responsible for everything, he's

Says Release Of Jews From Russia Will Not Cause Problem In Israel

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State William P. Rogers does not see that the release of Jews in large numbers from the Soviet Union or settlement in Israel constitutes "a problem for the immediate future."

In a television interview in London, Rogers was asked whether the United States "accepts the full implications of the Zionist doctrine that all Jews in the world have the right to settle in that part of the Middle East." Rogers responded that "we don't ask ourselves that question." But his interviewer, Robert Kee of Thames TV, interrupted the Secretary at that point and remarked that that was "of course the question" that the Arabs are always asking themselves and "that is why they are so worried at what they call Israeli expansion."

Rogers pointed out that both the Arabs and Israelis were concerned about guarantees for their borders. Egypt, he added, has "accepted the proposition" that if the conditions it has "laid down are satisfied" the Cairo government has agreed, among other things, that "it will not interfere with the internal affairs of Israel." The transcript gives the following questions and answers account:

Kee: "But still, if the large number of Jews who are at present in Russia and agitating to be let out are let out, it would severely aggravate the whole problem in the Middle East, wouldn't it?"

Rogers: "Well, I am not sure how many persons Israel can accommodate in the present territory, but they say they can accommodate a great deal more.

I don't believe that is a problem for the immediate future."

Kee: "You see, that is exactly the Arab problem, because you said in their immediate territory, and the Arab fear seems to be that the Israelis might need more territory."

Rogers: "Yes, but if the agreement provides guarantees against that from the Arab standpoint, and if Israel is guaranteed, satisfactorily, that the present territory of Israel is not going to be invaded, then you would have stability in the area."

DENIES BOYCOTT

NEW YORK — Japan Air Lines has for the second time denied that it is participating in a boycott of Israel. A spokesman for the airline said "it in fact enjoys normal airline relations with El Al Airlines." And for the second time the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations has rejected the JAL statement as false. Arnold Forster, general counsel to the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and head of the Conference of Presidents' anti-boycott committee, called the JAL statement "a flat lie."

FREE 'PANTHERS'

JERUSALEM — The last 20 of the more than 100 Israelis in a group called the "Black Panthers" were released this morning. The "Panthers," from Oriental Jewish communities, mainly from Morocco, were detained here after rioting. They contend there is discrimination against them and delays in dealing with poverty among the oriental communities.

Dr. Goldmann seems to like the English. Why?

He said because political life was decent. You could be a man's political opponent and personal friend. And the English were on the whole decent, though it was true you did not build a world empire with only saintliness. He remembered that he had once told an Australian audience. Look at the English; in our generation they had lost perhaps the biggest empire the world had known, but they got over it and were quite happy. Imagine, he said, that the Jews had lost an empire. For 2,000 years they would have had days of sorrow. Because the temple was destroyed 2,000 years ago, every year the Jews had a day of mourning, and fasted the whole day. If they had lost an empire, said Dr. Goldmann, every week they would have a fast day.

Turkish Police, Troops Search For Consul's Killers

ISTANBUL —All available troops and policemen are being used in a search here for the killers of Israel's consul general in Istanbul, Ephraim Elrom, whose body was found in an apartment building here early Sunday.

Mr. Elrom was lying on a couch with his hands tied behind his back. He had been shot three times behind the left ear.

A police doctor estimated the death had occurred at 5 P.M. to 7 P.M. Saturday, a few hours before the start of a 15-hour curfew that was imposed so that a thorough search of this city of three million could be made.

The kidnapers, who had seized the diplomat in daylight from his home a week ago Monday, apparently carried out their threat to execute him unless jailed members of the banned Turkish People's Liberation Army were freed.

The Premier, Nihat Erim, had said on last Friday that the Government had information that the envoy was still alive, a day after the original deadline for his killing had passed. Mr. Elrom, who was 58 years old, was a former Israeli police official. He was German-born, and took part in the investigation that led to the sentencing and hanging of Adolf Eichmann.

Mr. Elrom's body was found in the back room of an apartment in a select residential area, half a mile from his house and only 500 yards from the Israeli Consulate General. The apartment had been rented by the woman owner six weeks ago to two young men who said they were an engineer and an architect. Late on Saturday night five young men left the apartment after telling the janitor to keep quiet or be killed.

The Premier was on a visit to eastern Anatolia, where an earthquake had struck, when he was notified that the envoy's body had been found. He said that two calamities had struck Turkey, the earthquake and Mr. Elrom's killing, and added: "I could hardly believe my ears when I was told about his death. The people who did this can neither be Turks nor idealists. They and people like them will be dealt with most severely. My Government is determined that Turkey will not become a country ruled by anarchists and terrorists."

The Premier has sent telegrams of sympathy to Mrs. Elrom and the Israeli Premier, Mrs. Golda Meir. Mrs. Elrom is being cared for under sedation by friends with whom she has been staying since the kidnapping.

The Elroms lost their only son in a flying accident some years ago, and Mrs. Elrom referred to that in an appeal to the kidnapers last week, saying that without her husband her life had no further meaning. Her husband's body was to be flown to Tel Aviv, accompanied by senior officials of the Turkish Foreign Ministry. Earlier, a brief ceremony for him was held here.

Istanbul, one of the world's noisiest cities, was eerily silent as troops methodically combed its houses and apartment blocks for the killers. Only the whine of a circling helicopter and the noise of army and emergency service vehicles broke the calm. Tourists had to spend the day in their hotels. Guests at the Istanbul Hilton watched as army officers and troops, armed with submachine guns and rifles, made a quick search of one of the floors after a tip that two wanted men had been seen in the hotel.

Since the kidnapping nearly 1,000 people, including university professors, writers, and other intellectuals, have been held for questioning, but many have since been released.

Reports Resurgence Of Anti-Jewish Action

BUENOS AIRES —Nehemias Resnitzky, general secretary of the DAIA, the representative organization of Argentine Jewry reported a resurgence of Arab-inspired anti-Jewish action, abetted in part by the worsening general economic situation and social tensions.

Resnitzky, reporting to the DAIA's monthly plenary session, stated that El Fatah's campaign in Argentina was growing bolder. He said the Palestinian terrorist group holds open meetings and places advertisements in newspapers in an effort to recruit the support of Argentine political and church figures.

Workers Ask Governor Not To Support Bill

NEW YORK —Two hundred prominent New Yorkers have sent an open letter to Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller in what was described as "an urgent 11th hour appeal" not to support legislation that would give tax dollars to "private religious institutions" at a time of severe budget cuts in public services. The letter, already delivered to the governor, was made public by the Committee for Public Education and Religious Liberty (PEARL). According to its executive co-chairman, William Haddad, a copy of the letter was on the desk of every state legislator.

The letter was made public as the State Legislature, reportedly near adjournment, prepared to act on a program of upwards of $60 million in aid to non-public schools. The signers included congressmen and other elected officials, parent leaders and officers of civil liberties groups. The letter declared: "Recognizing that if any legislation to support non-public education is passed it could not be without your support and approval, we want you to know that all of us listed below are opposed to any state aid going to private and parochial education."

Dayan, Arabs Argue About Price Of Fish

GAZA —Israel's Defense Minister, Moshe Dayan, stood ankle-deep in sand this week and argued with Arabs about the price of fish.

Mr. Dayan and the representatives of Gaza's Arab fishermen argued whether half an Israeli pound —about 14 cents —was too little for a kilogram, or 2.21 pounds, of fish.

Mr. Dayan asked questions in Arabic. The subject is important because the goodwill of the Arabs of Gaza is important.

The Gaza Strip, seized during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, gives Israel more trouble than any other occupied area. The Strip and the northern Sinai Peninsula have about 380,000 people. Of these 205,000 are refugees of whom 179,000 live in camps.

The Arabs find work where they can but they are poorly paid.

"Terrorism is part economics," an Israeli said. "A refugee makes a pound for a day's work in the field. Someone offers him five pounds to throw a grenade. He takes it and throws the grenade."

The Peoples Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a guerrilla organization is active in Gaza. Since 1967 there have been nearly 1,300 incidents in the Strip and more than 250 deaths. Most of those killed have been Arabs.

Mr. Dayan promised the fishermen that something would be done to help them.

If people really want to work, he told newsmen present, "we'll try to provide work." There are 8,000 to 10,000 people unemployed in the area now, but "probably in a year or so there will be no one unemployed here," Mr. Dayan said.

The fishermen's numbers have fallen. There are 8,500 fishing off that coast now, 30 per cent less than there were when the strip was occupied by Egypt in the 1948 war with Israel.

The fishermen asked Mr. Dayan's permission to fish farther out into the sea. "We can't allow the fishermen to go beyond present limits," he said, gesturing toward the calm blue Mediterranean. "If we let them go as far as Port Said," in Egypt, "dirty work would be forced on them by the Egyptians."

The conversation went on with Mr. Dayan asking question after question: "how many boats? how many owners? where were the markets?"

Afterward a newsmen asked the Defense Minister if Israel would keep the Gaza Strip. "I hope we will," he said.

But he said that he couldn't "see a peace treaty yet." From a military standpoint, he said, this is "the best time" Israel has known because "on a day-to-day basis, everything is quiet."

Four Jews On Trial In Riga For Subversive Activities

MOSCOW —Witnesses at the trial in Riga of four Zionist Jews were reported to have testified that the defendants had reprinted and distributed Israeli pamphlets and publications judged by the Soviet authorities to be subversive.

Tass, the Soviet press agency, said that 22 witnesses who testified on the second day of the trial included several Jews already sentenced in Leningrad on charges of planning to hijack an airliner and of spreading anti-Soviet propaganda.

The four in Riga, the capital of Soviet Latvia, have not been linked to any hijacking plans and are being tried on charges of having circulated "slanderous materials for subversive purposes." They face sentences of up to seven years.

According to Tass, the Leningrad defendants testified that they "first regularly received subversive publications" from those on trial in Riga and later were induced to duplicate and further disseminate these materials. Their precise content has not been made public.

Two of the defendants in the present proceedings, Boris Maffter, who is 24 years old, and Arkady Shpilberg, 33, both engineers were said to have provided the funds for reprinting and photographic reproduction.

Tass indicated that Mr. Shpilberg had pleaded not guilty of the charges against him.

Vladimir Mogilever, one of those sentenced in the second Leningrad trial was quoted by Tass as having testified that Mr. Shpilberg had joined in "organizing in 1966 the group for whose illegal activities I have been convicted."

Silva Zalmanson, who was a defendant in the first Leningrad trial in December, was reported to have testified: "I delivered to Shpilberg at his home dozens of anti-Soviet books for distribution."

The Tass report, which was distributed on the service limited to foreign news organizations, quoted another witness, Itzhok Itsekson of Riga, as having said that the defendants in the present trial represented "exceptions among Soviet Jews."

Draws Repeated Applause

Rep. Gerald R. Ford Accuses Muskie, Fulbright Of Weakening Bipartisan Support Of Israel

WASHINGTON — Before a gathering of Jewish leaders, Representative Gerald R. Ford, the House Republican leader, accused Senator Edmund S. Muskie and Senator J. W. Fulbright of undermining American support of Israel.

By their statements, Mr. Ford said, the two Democratic Senators have weakened bipartisan support of Israel and have "facilitated" the "anti-Israel pressures" of the Soviet Union.

As the basis for his attack, Mr. Ford used statements that he said Senator Muskie had made to the Soviet Premier, Alexsei N. Kosygin, in Moscow earlier this year as well as a recent speech by Senator Fulbright in which he said Ford was resorting to "Communist-baiting humbuggers," in seeking United States support.

Senator Muskie replied that Mr. Ford was distorting his statements and indulging in "complete untruths."

Mr. Ford spoke before some 150 House members and 250 Jewish leaders gathered for a luncheon meeting in the Rayburn Office Building by the American-Israel Public Affairs Committee. A similar meeting will be held tomorrow in the Senate Office Building by the committee, which frequently serves as an intermediary between the Israeli Embassy and Congress.

One apparent purpose of the Congressional luncheons, held in conjunction with the committee's annual policy conference, was to demonstrate Congressional support for Israel at a time when Israeli policy on a Middle East peace settlement has come into increasing conflict with that of the United States.

In a policy statement given to the House members who attended the luncheon, the committee criticized the Administration for having accepted "the Egyptian position" on Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab areas and called on the Administration to reconsider its position on Middle East territorial issues so that "Israel might negotiate freely and establish agreed and secure boundaries."

The same theme was taken up in a speech to the Congressional gathering by Itzhak Rabin, the Israeli Ambassador to the United States.

Mr. Ford went beyond the pro-Israeli generalities, which he noted are usually uttered at such gatherings, for a pointed, personal attack on Senator Muskie, of Maine, a leading contender for the Democratic Presidential nomination next year, and Senator Fulbright, of Arkansas, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Indirectly he also criticized the negotiating proposals of Secretary of State William P. Rogers by implying that Mr. Rogers was not giving sufficient weight to the Soviet threat in the Middle East.

In the opinion of some Democrats attending the luncheon, one of Mr. Ford's purposes in so attacking the prominent Democratic Senators was to attempt to draw Jewish contributors away from the liberal Democrats, particularly those who have been identified with the peace movement in Vietnam. Attending the luncheon were Jewish leaders from across the country, many of whom have been identified with liberal Democratic causes and as contributors to Democratic candidates.

In a speech prepared for delivery this evening before a dinner sponsored by the American-Israel Public Affairs Society and the Jewish Community Council of Greater Washington, Senator George McGovern, of South Dakota, an announced candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination and a leader in the peace movement, drew a "vital distinction" between opposition to the Vietnam war and American support for the security of Israel.

Senator McGovern expressed concern over the "ever increasing possibility that the American people, who have come together from all sides in the peace movement, will allow their revulsion for the war in our judgment and render us unable to carry out our responsibility for acting in support of peace in the world."

"I believe," he said, "that it is the obligation of those who have led the peace movement in this country to educate our constituents to the vital distinction between preventing war in the Mideast by placing the American guaranty behind Israel's right to survive and perpetuating the war in Indochina."

Contending that the United States has a "binding international commitment" to the survival of Israel, Senator McGovern broadly defined his Middle East policy in these terms:

"Basically I favor the maintenance of a balance of power in the quantity and sophistication of conventional arms, which I believe must include the maintenance of Israel's control of the air, the assurance of secure, defensible boundaries, international insistence on a directly negotiated settlement of the dispute between Israel and its neighbors, and the deterrence of Soviet intervention in the area through firm American guaranty that a Soviet threat to Israel is intolerable."

Mr. Ford drew repeated applause as he accused Senator Fulbright of weakening the bipartisan foreign policy of the United States, deplored Moscow's discrimination against Soviet Jews and revived the "captured nations" issue.

On that issue, he suggested that Senator Muskie should have told Premier Kosygin that if the Soviet Union was so insistent upon Israel withdrawal from occupied areas, then it should set an example by withdrawing from Lithuania, Estonia, and Latvia.

Without mentioning Mr. Muskie by name, Mr. Ford said he was "dismayed that such a well-informed Senator could visit Israel and Egypt, where he actually witnessed the ongoing Soviet military build-up and still find it possible to go to Moscow and tell Kosygin that there was disunity between him and President Nixon on United States military spending that relates to Israel's security."

Such a statement, Mr. Ford said, "tended to undermine the credibility of American deterrence of the growing Soviet military involvement against Israel."

In support of his charge against Senator Muskie, Mr. Ford contended that the Senator had told Mr. Kosygin that there was a strong body of opinion in the United States "opposed to U.S. defense appropriations linked to our foreign commitments including the Middle East."

Senator Muskie in an interview accused Mr. Ford of distorting his comments and said it was "a complete untruth" that he had ever told Mr. Kosygin that there was disunity between him and President Nixon on United States policy toward Israel.

"In Egypt and the Soviet Union I made clear my commitment to the survival of Israel and in Moscow I pressed the view that Israel's security included secure and recognized boundaries, and that included boundary adjustments," Senator Muskie said. "And that is more than Mr. Nixon has told them."

Senator Muskie said his comment on the "body of opinion" in the United States was made not in the context of the Middle East but rather in the context of the desire within the United States to stabilize the arms race and resolve some of the major issues dividing the United States and the Soviet Union.

Alluding to Senator Fulbright only as "the chairman of a prestigious committee," Mr. Ford took issue with the speech in which Mr. Fulbright said Israel was resorting to "Communist-baiting humbugbery."

To the accompaniment of some hisses at this allusion to Senator Fulbright, Mr. Ford said: "It is tragic that such a self-proclaimed peace advocate has undermined prospects of a real Arab-Israeli settlement by tacitly encouraging the Soviet Union and Arab extremists to desist from a genuine peace and to continue a great military escalation in the hopes of forcing their will upon Israel."

Noting that Egypt, Libya and Syria are moving toward a new union against Israel, Mr. Ford said: "I fervently hope that our Secretary of State assesses this new development and carefully evaluates the latest Soviet military moves and other developments."

Israel Appoints First Arab Deputy Minister

TEL AVIV — The Government recently appointed the first Arab Deputy Minister in Israel's 23-year history.

Abdul Aziz el-Zuabi, who is 45 years old, was named deputy to Health Minister Victor Shemtov. He thus attained the highest political office ever reached by an Israeli Arab.

As Deputy Minister, Mr. Zuabi will not participate in Cabinet meetings but will be able to appear on behalf of the Minister in the Knesset.

Mr. Shemtov and Mr. Zuabi belong to the left-wing Mapam party, which has played a leading role in advancing the participation of Arabs in Israeli political life.

Hitherto the highest political position held by an Arab was Deputy Speaker of the Knesset. The post has been held by Seif ed-Din el-Zuabi, a cousin of the new deputy minister and a political foe. Seif ed-Din el-Zuabi the Labor party. Mapam had in fact wanted to make its Mr. Zuabi a deputy minister early last year but the appointment was blocked by the Labor party's Mr. Zuabi. He insisted that if there was to be an Arab Deputy Minister he should be the man. The difficulty was overcome by an agreement two months ago to appoint Seif ed-Din el-Zuabi Mayor of Nazareth.

The new Deputy Minister of Health, a Moslem, is a graduate of the Arab College in Jerusalem. During the British mandate in Palestine, he worked in the District Commissioner's office. Under the Israelis, he became director of the Office of the Custodian of Absentee Property in Nazareth. He served for various periods as Deputy Mayor of Nazareth and had been a member of the Knesset since 1965. His wife is Jewish. They were married at a civil ceremony in Cyprus.

American Jewish Conference To Mobilize World Opinion

NEW YORK — With another Leningrad trial of "anti-Soviet" Jews opening, the American Jewish Conference on Soviet Jewry resolved to mobilize governmental and public opinion against the proceedings as it did last December. The rallying cry, the Conference decided, will be: "Release the prisoners. No more trials." The Conference plans a telephone and telegram campaign to spark Jewish community organizations and individual Jews into action, as well as to impress the urgency of the cause upon President Nixon, the State Department, United Nations Ambassador George Bush, district attorneys and the media.

The organizations represented in the AJCSJ took part in a rally sponsored by the Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry. The participants marched from the Soviet Mission to UN headquarters, almost two miles. The women's organizations mobilizing their members for action too. Mrs. Rivka Aleksandrovitch, the mother of Riga prisoner Ruth Aleksandrovich, is on her way to the United States — from Israel by way of London — to personalize the issue. Former Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg has agreed to telephone Soviet Prosecutor General Roman A. Rudenko in Moscow, but arrangements for this move have not yet been completed.

Firms In Austria Do Brisk Trade In Nazi Emblems, Swastikas, Etc.

NEW YORK — Although Nazi Germany went out of business 25 years ago, four firms in Austria are doing a brisk trade turning out Nazi emblems — swastikas, death heads and campaign ribbons — United Press International has reported from Vienna.

One of the firms, Carl Sleder Company, has been producing them since 1938, when its biggest customers were the Nazi legions occupying Austria. West German and Austrian laws passed after the war forbid the wearing of Nazi uniforms and emblems, but it is not illegal to manufacture and sell them, the UPI report pointed out.

Most of the production of the Austrian firms is for export.

Presents $1 Million To Found Memorial

NEW YORK — A $1-million gift was presented to the American Jewish Committee last week by Dr. Morton K. Blaustein of Baltimore for the establishment of an institute devoted to the advancement of human rights.

Dr. Blaustein, a botanist, said the institute would be a memorial to his father, Jacob Blaustein, the Baltimore industrialist, who had served as president and then honorary president of the committee. He died last November at the age of 78.

The institute, among other programs, will conduct activities to advance Jewish-Christian relations, assist Jewish communities in various parts of the world, and try to "build understanding and support for Israel within the framework of American interests." It will operate from the Committee's headquarters at 165 East 56th Street.

Guns Have Been Silent

Tensions Within Israeli Society
Are Now Breaking Into The Open

JERUSALEM —The guns on the borders have been silent for 10 months, and tensions within Israeli society long muffled by the threat of war are breaking into the open.

"There is a poison of divisiveness in Israel at this moment," Premier Golda Meir said the other day. Mayor Teddy Kollek tells meetings that the No. 1 problem of Jerusalem is not the clash of Arabs and Jews, but the clash of rich and poor.

For five hours last week, downtown Jerusalem was the scene of the latest, and most spectacular, street demonstrations by a core of young Israeli activists calling themselves "Black Panthers." Their aim is to force Government attention to social problems that festered with little notice as national efforts were directed to meeting the war threats of hostile neighbors.

There were broken windows on Jerusalem's main shopping streets, charges and countercharges of police brutality and provocations by angry youths. "My God, is this now happening here?" said an earnest Israeli girl the next day. She has read all about those things in American cities, "but this is Jerusalem," she said, "and this is Israel."

The problems of poverty and prejudice, common to most advanced societies, are compounded here by the overlap with two other deep-rooted issues on which the state of Israel is most vulnerable. There is the old cultural conflict of Oriental and Western Jews, and the inequity of living conditions between the immigrants of today and those who arrived two decades ago —two of the most vexing social problems of the nation.

The Panthers themselves are a loosely organized band of city youths, mostly unemployed and ill-educated, but with a keen sense of political activism. They are unapologetic about their use of public-relations devices —including their name. There is no connection between them and the militant black organization in the United States.

The Panthers first appeared in January. From the start it seemed clear that social workers of the payroll of the city government sympathized with their organizational efforts, apparently despairing of freeing funds for social welfare by any means other than public agitation.

Even the Minister of Welfare, Michael Hazani, conceded that "years of frustration and neglect" had led to serious problems of juvenile delinquency.

But there was more to it than that. The Panthers caught on, not as much of a force in their own right, but as the focus of a whole series of grievances felt by large groups of Israelis who had little or nothing to do with the Jerusalem street gangs.

A man such as Elie Eliachar, a retired politician, from an old and aristocratic Sephardic family, supports the Panthers. "I am all for what these young people are doing —for too long we Oriental Jews have lived for promises that never materialized."

As head of the lobbying Council of the Sephardi Community, Mr. Eliachar looks at the problem as another outbreak of the tug-of-war between the Oriental Jews —mainly those who immigrated from North African or Middle Eastern countries —and the Ashkenazi Jews of European origin who have long dominated the power structure of Israel and the Zionist movement. The Sephardim now constitutes 60 per cent of the Jewish population of Israel.

To many of the Panthers and other concerned persons, Mr. Eliachar's approach is jaded and irrelevant. They feel that the age-old cultural division is not the basic issue at all.

Yitzhak Ben-Aharon, secretary-general of the Histadrut, the country's powerful labor federation, sees the current agitation in economic terms.

"For years, we had a good name because our income differential was among the lowest in the world," he said. "Now this has all been eroded. Our social problem is that of rich and poor living side by side, and it is absolute hypocrisy not to admit it."

From ordinary families in the poorer districts of Jerusalem, came rumbles of annoyance at, for instance, the Government hue and cry about the plight of (Ashkenazi) Soviet Jews, with their large proportion of educated professional men. Government spokesmen quickly responded by scheduling demonstrations and statements of protest about the ordeals of (Sephardi) Jews in the Arab countries, less educated and primitive by comparison.

"Look at the Russian Jews —they come here and get good new apartments," said one garage worker in Katamon, a Jerusalem suburb. "I've been waiting here for 20 years hoping for better living space."

As all these intertwining resentments were coming to the surface in the last few months, the National Insurance Institute completed a sociological survey that puts into figures the extent of the poverty problem in Israel.

About 20 per cent of the population was said to be living at or below the designated poverty level. In Tel Aviv one family out of four lives in what the municipality terms slum dwellings.

Anyone walking the streets of urban residential sections can see that in the more affluent neighborhoods people of light,

European features are dominant, and that in the poorer streets the people are of swarthy, Eastern appearance.

Statistics of education show up the gap even more ominously, for it is through the level of schooling that early inequities are perpetuated. The Sephardim start at a lower educational level —many were illiterate when they came to Israel, while the Jews of European origin had far higher standards to begin with.

Now, 60 per cent of children entering compulsory primary schools are Sephardim, a fair proportion of the population. The trouble starts at the secondary level, where the Oriental children make up no more than 25 per cent of enrollments, and at the university level, where their share falls to about 10 per cent.

Finally, a sorry coincidence in the timing of immigration patterns to Israel has multiplied the conflicts of economics and differing heritage that would have troubled the society anyway.

In the first years after independence in 1948, the waves of immigrants were largely from the poorer middle Eastern and North African countries, Jewish families seeing the chance at last for a better life. They came when the new country's economy was scarcely solvent, and began life here under conditions of austerity.

By now the country can afford to house new immigrants more comfortably —but most immigrants now are from affluent European and American societies.

To many Israelis, the mere awareness of the long unpublicized social conflicts is a hopeful sign, the necessary first step toward solutions. But to the outspoken Sephardic spokesman, Mr. Eliachar, the future is bleak.

"If we ever get peace in the Middle East," he said, "we will have civil war at home."

Nine Soviet Jews Found Guilty;
Sentenced For From 1 To 10 Years

MOSCOW —A Leningrad court last week found nine Soviet Jews guilty of organized anti-Soviet activity and sentenced them to prison-camp terms ranging from one to 10 years.

Announcing the results of the 10 day trial, Tass, the Soviet press agency, said the defendants had "maintained illegal ties with the Government and Zionist circles of Israel," and had sent to Israel "information containing vicious slander about the position of the Jews in the Soviet Union."

The most severe sentences were given Gilya I. Butman, a 39-year-old engineer, who was sentenced to 10 years, and Mikhail L. Korenblit, 34, a physician, who received seven years. Both were accused of having played leading roles in a plan to hijack a Soviet plane and to fly it to Sweden.

Twelve other persons —ten of them Jews —were convicted last winter on treason charges in connection with a plan to hijack a small plane.

Mr. Butman and Dr. Korenblit were apparently not involved in that attempt directly, but were convicted for helping plan an earlier hijacking that was never carried out.

Nine Jews in Kishinev and four in Riga are also awaiting trial on charges similar to those placed against the Leningrad nine.

The spectators in the courtroom stood for more than an hour while the sentences were read aloud by the presiding Judge, Mrs. Nina Isakova, Tass said. The prison terms given were virtually the same as those asked by the prosecutor.

"There was general approval of the sentences," Tass noted.

Jews in Leningrad had earlier protested that seats in the courtroom were reserved primarily for those hostile to the defendants. Only a few close relatives were permitted to attend, they said.

No foreign correspondents were permitted to cover the trial. Most of the information has been provided in Tass dispatches that from the start seemed aimed at justifying the state's case against the defendants.

All nine are acknowledged Zionists who sought in vain to get to Israel. They were active in sending complaints abroad about the difficulties encountered by Jews trying to lead a "Jewish life" in the Soviet Union or seeking to leave the country for Israel.

The verdicts were less serious than was the case in the trials of last winter. In the trial of 11 in December —the 12th defendant was accused later —two of the accused received death sentences. After a worldwide outcry, however, their sentences were commuted to 15 years in prison camps.

All the defendants in the present case pleaded guilty to at least some of the charges against them, and, according to Tass, expressed varying degrees of repentance.

Tass said that Mr. Butman had been found guilty "of being one of the initiators in forming the criminal group and an active participant of a particularly grave crime against the state." It said that Dr. Korenblit had been charged with "participation in preparations to hijack a passenger plane."

In addition, Mr. Butman and Dr. Korenblit were charged with spreading anti-Soviet propaganda and with participating in an anti-Soviet organization. The seven other defendants were also charged with those offenses and all but Viktor N. Boguslavsky were implicated in the hijacking plan "in one way or other," Tass said.

The group was also charged with having stolen a duplicating machine "to print and distribute slanderous material against the Soviet Union," Tass said. Jewish sources said that at the trial the defendants had testified that the machine was never used and had been intended for reproducing Hebrew texts unavailable here.

Soon after disclosing the results of the trial, Tass distributed a commentary attacking Zionist groups abroad for "raising a noise about the Jewish question in the USSR that they themselves had thought up."

The other sentences were: Lassa S. Kaminsky, 41, engineer, five years; Lev N. Yagman, 31, engineer, five years; Vladimir O. Mogilever, 31, engineer, four years; Solomon G. Drezner, 39, engineer, three years; Lev L. Korenblit (Mikhail's brother), 49, three years; Viktor N. Boguslavsky, engineer, 31, three years, and Viktor Shtilbans, 30, physician, one year.

Tass said that Mr. Drezner, Mr. Korenblit and Mr. Mogilever had received lesser penalties because of their "sincere repentance and the fact that they helped uncover the crime at the stage of preliminary investigation."

ARCHITECT'S DESIGN of the first Jewish Cadet Chapel to be built at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. The Chapel will symbolize in a striking way the position of the Jewish community in America, since it marks the first time in Jewish history that Jews have been accorded this unique place of equality in such a prominent setting. It will contain a museum of American Jewish history. The distinguished architectural firm of Harrison and Abramovitz was engaged to design the Chapel and its ancillary facilities. Estimated cost of building is $1,800,000. Construction is scheduled to begin before the end of the year. Rabbi Avraham Soltes is the Jewish chaplain at West Point.

Feels American Conference
Has Forgotten Its Purpose

Isn't it amazing that the American Conference on Soviet Jewry, which has so strongly condemned in the past the harassment of Soviet diplomats by the Jewish Defense League, has not even spoken out in protest against the harassment of American fishing vessels by Russian trollers.(sic) The Conference, which finds the harassment of Soviet diplomats

"repugnant" is not nearly so disgusted by the harassment of American fishing vessels. It is a pity that the gentlemen of the Conference have become so used to condemning their fellow Jews that they have clearly forgotten the original purpose for the creation of their organization.

Rabbi Meir Kahane 'Breaks Bread' With Negro Leader, Dr. Matthew

NEW YORK —Rabbi Meir Kahane, head of the Jewish Defense League, ceremonially broke bread last week with Dr. Thomas Matthew, head of a black self-help group, in the latter group's Harlem factory, and the two men pledged a "brotherhood relationship" between their organizations.

Dr. Matthew had invited Rabbi Kahane to come to Harlem.

The invitation came a week after the militant Jewish leader formed an alliance with Joseph A. Colombo Sr., the reputed Mafia figure who founded the Italian-American Civil Rights League.

The invitation was prompted, Matthew said, by fighting between black and white students —the latter members of the J.D.L.—at Brooklyn College on May 4. Rabbi Kahane spoke at a rally just before the fight broke out.

The meeting last week —in a clothing factory of the National Economic Growth and Reconstruction Organization, at 123d Street and St. Nicholas Avenue —was billed as a "peace conference" and focused on plans to minimize black-Jewish tensions. The Brooklyn incident, which led to the barring of the rabbi from the campus, was not discussed, Dr. Matthew said.

"At this point," he declared, "we've got to reach something that transcends that, and that is the entire meaningful attitude between black and Jew. And this, I think, is a far more important thing rather than rehash things which have happened. What has happened has happened. The purpose of this meeting is to make sure that those things don't happen again."

Dr. Matthew's plan involved sending a commission from his organization to the Soviet Union to bring back a report "for the guidance of our own people in joining with the Jewish people throughout the world who are asking for the Jews to be able to go to Israel."

The group hopes to leave June 15, although permission from the Russians has not been obtained.

Dr. Matthew said he would ask the Soviet Union to allow Jews to leave and go to a neutral country, rather than Israel, for a two-year period, during which time, he hoped, the Arab-Israeli dispute would be settled.

Dr. Matthew said that he and Rabbi Kahane had discussed "the matter of policy" of the Jewish Defense League "towards black people," and had a "clearcut understanding that the J.D.L. is not antiblack."

As for the Jewish organization's harassment of Soviet officials, Dr. Matthew said:

"We have made it clear to the J.D.L. that the Soviet citizens are guests in our homes —the United States of America —and they will not be harassed by anybody as individual citizens walking the streets."

He said the black organization would on request, provide "courtesy escorts" to any Soviet personnel —particularly women —who "wish to go to a store or anywhere."

Rabbi Kahane, who described the meeting as "a great turning point" in ethnic relations, said he was "willing to see what possibilities lie" in Dr. Matthew's plan. He was adamant however, on the harassment issue.

"We are not about to simply say for the sake of brotherhood that we are ready to give in on areas of principle," the rabbi said. "A Soviet diplomat is not our guest. He is not a mere tourist. A Soviet diplomat here, if we can help it, will not walk these streets no matter who is there, no matter who wants to help him."

The rabbi said he found it "reprehensible that South African diplomats are not given the same discourtesy by blacks."

Both men declined to say what would happen if J.D.L. members harassed Soviet officials here while they were being escorted by Dr. Matthew's people.

Orthodox Urge Ban On 'Kosher Style' Product Labeling

NEW YORK —Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller was called upon by Agudath Israel of America to sign a bill that would limit the use of the term "kosher style" to products that are actually kosher. In a letter to the Governor, Rabbi Moshe Sherer, executive president of the organization, urged that he sign the bill into law in order to "halt the deceptive practice of certain non-kosher establishments and food producers who have cleverly used the label of "kosher style" to misrepresent to the observant Jew their products as kosher.

The bill, sponsored by State Senator Paul E. Bookson and Assemblyman Louis De Salvo, was strongly supported by the Legislative Commission of Agudath Israel from its introduction as "a further step forward in the legislative gains of Orthodox Jewry."

ASK RELEASE
NEW YORK —Hadassah has resorted to a woman-to-woman approach to try to secure the release of Ruth Alexandrovich and other Jewish women imprisoned in the Soviet Union after applying for emigration visas. Mrs. Max Schenk, president of the Women's Zionist Organization of America, appealed to the top woman official in the Soviet Union to intervene.

Many Believe Struggle In Egypt Far From Settled

JERUSALEM —For the time being, President Gamal Abdel Nasser's chosen successor in Egypt's top post seemed to have the upper hand in the long-expected "war of succession," but although Israel refrained from making any official comment on the political crisis, observers privately expressed their belief that the power struggle is "far from settled."

The crisis occurred last week when President Sadat demanded the resignation of Deputy Premier Sharawai Gomas, Minister of the Interior. Five other cabinet ministers, including War Minister Mohammed Fawzi submitted their resignations in a move President Sadat said was calculated to create the impression his regime was collapsing, and three members of the ruling Higher Executive Committee of the Arab Socialist Union also resigned.

(Reliable sources in London reported that the Kremlin is concerned over the situation and is seeking reassurance from the Egyptian President of his continuing allegiance to the Soviet Union, since a number of those now under arrest had close ties with Moscow.)

New Cabinet ministers were promptly sworn in by President Sadat, who announced that he was ordering free elections for a complete reorganization of the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's only political party.

The Cairo upheaval followed the ouster of Aly Sabry, one of the nation's two vice presidents, by a little more than a week. Most foreign observers believe the immediate cause of the rift was Egypt's proposed federation with Libya and Syria, which Sabry strongly opposed.

Though events in Egypt were not believed to be directly related to the Israel-Egypt conflict or to Secretary of State William P. Rogers' visit to Cairo, and the possibility of an interim arrangement for the reopening of the Suez Canal, some Israeli observers believe the Rogers peace mission may have been crippled by the Cabinet shake-up in Cairo since a government in the midst of domestic crisis cannot undertake major policy decision.

According to the semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahras, 110 persons have been arrested and are under investigation. A number of them who were first placed under house arrest have now been transferred to detention centers, it was reported.

The arrest of several radio and television officials for allegedly conspiring "to declare a state of emergency" was ordered by the government early this week. Political sources said that security forces had launched a campaign to smash the hard-core secret organization opposing President Sadat's rule.

The President, already the nominal head of the armed forces, has further consolidated his position by taking over as head of Egypt's police force, it was reported. New arrests were expected in the government's drive to smash opponents of the regime.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

February up from $35,000 a year earlier. To meet the demand for low cost homes, innovative materials and methods are being used and conventional builders are cutting out extras.

If the more conservative 1.8 million estimate is met, this would represent a significant 23% incTrease for the industry this year. Under such expansive conditions, Masonite should fare well, since in last year's restrictive atmosphere, sales rose 3.6% and earnings gained 5.9%. For the current fiscal year to end August, sales should surpass $200 million and net reach at least $2.40 a share. Income from contract lumber sales and oil should contribute, over the next decade, 55c a share to earnings.

5.9%. For the current fiscal year to end August, sales should surpass $200 million and net reach at least $2.40 a share. Income from contract lumber sales and oil should contribute, over the next decade, 55 cents a share to earnings.

Masonite has moved up rapidly since mid-1970 yet remains attractive for retention. A split at around the 70 level would be in line with previous action.

Growing Energy Demands Benefit Pacific Pete

Q: I am thinking of investing in Pacific Petroleum for my children who will need the money in 6-10 years for college. Would appreciate your opinion. —H.H.

A: Pacific Petroleum, 48% owned by Phillips Petroleum, is an attractive means of participating in one of Canada's most important industries. Company boasts an impressive record of past performance combined with the potential for above-average future gains. Pacific Pete's sales and earnings have continued to grow uninterrupted since 1961, moving up a total of 397% and 1043%, respectively.

Although the firm is involved in every phase of the petroleum business, its key area is natural gas. In fact, Pacific Pete's gas reserves exceed those of any other Canadian controlled concern.

Aggressive exploratory activity, rapid development of known productive areas, plus the spiraling demand for energy in the U.S. and Canada augur well for continued progress. Shares have long-term growth appeal.

Q: I own shares of Teledyne bought at about $53. What is your advice? —S.M.

A: Teledyne is a leading conglomerate (fiscal '70 sales of $1.2 billion) possessing a strong fundamental picture. Operations are largely electronics-oriented, but recent acquisitions, its majority interest in Continental Motors plus entry into insurance, has broadened the industrial base.

Sales declined 6.1% in fiscal 1970. However, fully diluted earnings advanced 1.5% to $1.91 per share. A generally rising earnings pattern, anticipated for the balance of 1971, plus renewed investor interest in conglomerate issues should aid further recovery. Hold.

Q: I bought 500 shares of EG&G at $25. Should I buy, hold or stand pat? —J.W.

A: In view of the massive government cutbacks experienced by EG&G, the company managed to turn in a creditable performance in 1970, earning 22 cents a share (versus a 33 cent deficit in fiscal 1969) on sales of $112 million.

The improved earnings, coupled with an attractive technical position as well as the realization that EG&G is successfully entering commercial markets has buoyed up the stock substantially in the past few weeks. Shares have speculative appeal; hold, but do not add to.
