Abbie Lynn Segel, the first Jewish baby born in Rhode Island in 1954, was inadvertently left out of the feature story last week about the Herald's first babies of the New Year.

The daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Maurice A. Segel of 73 East Bel Air Road, Cranston, Abbie is a fifth grader at Eden Park School. She attends Hebrew School at Temple Sinai.

Congregation Defends Rabbi Self-Proclaimed As Atheist

DETROIT — The 140-member Reform congregation of the Birmingham Temple in suburban Detroit came to the defense recently of its rabbi who has proclaimed himself from the pulpit to be an atheist. Rabbi Sherman T. Wine has also challenged a number of traditional Jewish positions in his sermons. No issue of revoking his ordination for alleged heresy has been raised because Reform Judaism has no such procedures. The congregation is not affiliated with the Union of American Hebrew Congregations or any other Jewish religious grouping.

At a recent "godless" Chanukah Sabbath service, Rabbi Wine, who is 36, declared that Judah Maccabee was not as great a figure as he is portrayed in Jewish history. He said it was "absurd" to believe that "all Greeks were adulterers and murderers and all Jews were good." He also said that the premise that there would be no morality in the world if it were not for the Jewish-Christian tradition "is for the birds." He also expressed the belief that the Hellenist or Greek Jews of the Maccabean period were "the Reform Jews of their day."

Mr. Suzanne Velick, Temple secretary, issued the congregation's statement in support of Rabbi Wine which asserted that all religions have concerned themselves with the problem of human destiny and have tried to help man understand and control his future. To solve this problem, the statement said, "man needs to know the truth about himself and the world in which he lives. He can best do this through use of the common sense or empirical method."

"Commonsensible people invite every idea to be tested by the evidence of human experience," the congregation statement continued. "If the idea passes this test, it is worthy of belief. We at Birmingham Temple are committed to the use of this empirical method in the discovery of essential truth. Like the men of science, our school hours, with baton lessons (she wants to be a majorette), ice skating, junior Girl Scouts, oil painting, playing the piano, and occasionally beating her father at chess. She also enjoys chemistry, sketching, clay modeling, swimming and diving.

All three Segel children have special birthdays. Harlan was born in 1955 on the first day of summer, Bonnie in 1958 on Rhode Island Independence Day and Abbie on New Year's Day, 1954.

minds are open. There is no belief we are unwilling to alter if the evidence proves us wrong." The statement emphasized that the congregation "will also use all customs and ceremonies that can effectively symbolize the values we hold sacred. We want to preserve whatever in Judaism is both rational and humanistic," it declared.

U.S. Won't Urge Bonn To Extend Statute Date

WASHINGTON — The State Department considers it "unnecessary and undesirable" for the United States to intervene through diplomatic channels to urge West Germany to extend the statute of limitations for trial of Nazi war criminals beyond its present expiration date of May 8.

Robert E. Lee, acting Assistant Secretary of State for Congressional Relations, made known the Department's views in a letter written on behalf of Secretary of State Dean Rusk. It was addressed to Rep. Leonard Farbstein, New York Democrat, who had urged the Department to use its good offices at Bonn on the Nazi criminal question.

Mr. Lee said, "It seems unnecessary and undesirable to interfere with the German Government's effort to work its way through to a solution satisfactory in both legal and policy terms."

He pointed out that "Since sovereignty was returned to the German Government in May, 1955, we have on a number of occasions made known to the Federal Republic our strong belief that these trials should be pursued."

According to Lee "the German Federal Government is acutely aware of the deep moral debt of Germany to its past, and it has made a conscientious effort to find, try, and convict Nazi criminals."

American Jewish Congress Charges Misuse Of Federal Anti-Poverty Funds

NEW YORK — The American Jewish Congress charged recently that Federal funds allocated under the Administration's anti-poverty program are being channeled to parochial schools in violation of the First Amendment. Shad Poller of New York, chairman of the National Governing Council of the Congress, made the charge in a report to the Congress.

More than $4,000,000 in grants has already been made by the Office of Economic Opportunity, to church-operated schools, Mr. Poller stated.

He said the funds were granted to local "community action groups" and earmarked for parochial schools and pre-school centers.

Thirty more applications by church-related schools for anti-poverty funds are now awaiting action in Washington, he asserted.

"Unless the present policy is changed, hundreds of millions of dollars of Federal funds appropriated to fight poverty in America will, instead, be siphoned off to support religious organizations and their sectarian-oriented private schools.

"Such use of public monies would make a mockery of the Administration's anti-poverty program. At the same time, it directly contravenes the U.S. Constitution and its guarantee of church-state separation."

Mr. Poller said the Congress would seek support of other religious and civic groups "in demanding a prompt halt to the direct or indirect use of Federal funds, under the guise of the anti-poverty program, to support church schools."

In his report, he noted that the funds had been granted under Title II of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 dealing with "Community Action Programs."

Under the Act, no funds may be used for general educational purposes, Mr. Poller said. But he noted that an amendment to Title II of the measure, added while the bill was on the floor of Congress just before final passage, approved the use of anti-poverty funds for instruction in

Use Of Technology Threatens U. S. Liberty, Says Rickover

NEW YORK — Vice Admiral Hyman G. Rickover recently characterized "organizational gigantism" as being in every respect the obverse of a free society. Speaking at the Publishers' Lunch Club here, the non-conformist admiral said that working for a large, bureaucratically-administered organization is not good training for American citizenship, though most Americans do work for such bureaucracies.

He also criticized current attitudes toward technology and some uses of it which, he said, are encroaching on individual liberties.

"Powerful forces are driving us toward a pattern of life in which technology rather than man will be central to the purpose of society," said the admiral. "How to make technology most useful to ourselves and our society, yet prevent it from controlling our lives — that is the problem.

"There is a marked propensity to regard technology as an end in itself, when actually it is no more than a means to ends that man determines. There is a tacit assumption, whenever technology contravenes human desires, that man must adapt himself to technology."

Admiral Rickover said the problem is aggravated by the bureaucratization of American life, which he sees as largely the result of technology. Since technology is mostly in the hands of organizations that fight any legislation which might prevent their using it as they please, generally only a catastrophe causing public indignation will get any action. He

Rocket Experts Fear Israeli Secret Agents

CAIRO — Only in the United Arab Republic can German rocket scientists working for Nasser feel safe, said one of them recently. They live in terror of Israeli secret agents, go nowhere without a bodyguard, keep their home addresses and telephone numbers secret. Their mail is examined for explosives and their homes are guarded.

They consider themselves scientists doing a job, which they would do for any country willing to pay them, but they have been caught up in the tension and friction of German, Israeli and Arab differences.

"We are not anti-Semites or old Nazis," said Professor Wolfgang Pilz, a wartime colleague in Germany of Werner von Braun, who is now a United States rocket scientist. "We would leave Egypt immediately if the Israelis would give us guarantees to abandon their hunt for us."

There is little likelihood of this, after the Germans have spent four years building rockets which President Gamal Abdel Nasser says can hit Israel.

Israelis demand withdrawal of the scientists. The West German government, which wants to be on good terms with Egyptians and Israelis, says the scientists are private citizens and by the German constitution can work where they please. Professor Pilz and his colleagues are caught in a vise.

Accompanied as usual by his bodyguard, the professor recounted some of the incidents he attributes to the Israeli secret service.

In 1962, one of his assistants, Dr. Heinz Krug, disappeared in Munich while on a visit from Cairo. "I believe he was kidnapped and is dead," Professor Pilz said.

Another assistant, Hans Kleinwächter, escaped a pistol attack by two men while visiting his home in Lorrach, Germany, in 1962.

Late that same year a letter sent to Professor Pilz contained an explosive that injured his secretary. Another package received at the rocket factory in Heliopolis where he and his assistants work killed five Egyptian technicians and injured six.

"I am still ready to leave, and so are my colleagues," said Professor Pilz, "but we cannot go until Israel fulfills three conditions:

"First, that our personal safety is guaranteed in the future. I do not want to go home and then be murdered in the streets of Bonn.

"Second, Israel must admit — on some sort of official level — its responsibility for past incidents and express its regrets, because this is necessary for the third step. This should be appropriate compensation for the injuries sustained by my colleagues."

In Jerusalem, an Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman rejected this proposal, saying: "Our discussion partner must be the Bonn Government, not Professor Pilz." The Israeli spokesman disclaimed having any knowledge that Israeli agents were behind the incidents reported by the German.

Professor Pilz and his associates have been described by Premier Levi Eshkol of Israel as "conscienceless and unscrupulous." The Israeli press has called them unrepentant Nazis and anti-Semites.

"Nonsense," said Professor Pilz. "If one would take the effort to check my papers, one would see how baseless the contention is that I am an old Nazi. I worked for years in French rocket research stations alongside Israeli scientists and I have nothing against the Jews. I am merely a scientist and I have nothing to do with politics."

He said his group of German workers at the Heliopolis rocket factory is made up of 18 men, three of them experienced and the others young researchers.

Cairo Government quarters contend they are not dependent upon the German research men since there are also rocket experts in the Eastern bloc. They indicated that they have negotiated with East Germans, covering themselves in the event the West Germans leave.

Both Israel and the United Arab Republic have tested rockets, starting in 1961. Aside from skirmishes, opposing military strength in the Middle East has not been shown afield since 1956, when Israeli forces pushed Egyptian troops to the Suez Canal.

American military experts expressed the belief last spring that Israel's armed forces were strong enough to fend off attack by any combination of the Arab nations.

Charges Misuse Of Anti-Poverty Funds

"remedial and other noncurricular subjects."

Regulations of Grants

Under this provision, the Office of Economic Opportunity prepared a statement of "special conditions applicable to the use of OEO grant funds in church-related schools or school systems."

While prohibiting any religious instruction, proselytization or worship in conjunction with the anti-poverty program, the OEO regulations did not bar the use of church or parochial school facilities, Mr. Poller said.

He also noted that the conditions for use of anti-poverty funds in church schools did not limit such programs to after-school hours "when the doors could be thrown open to children of all races and religions." Therefore, "parochial school pupils, attending their regular classrooms during regular school hours, are being taught with funds provided by the Federal government under the guise of the war on poverty."

Catholics Seek Funds

Mr. Poller noted that Catholic church groups had been particularly active in seeking funds under the Administration's war-on-poverty program.

He said a "National Catholic Coordinating Committee on Economic Opportunity" had been formed to provide information on how church bodies could cooperate with the program. It listed these educational programs as qualifying for anti-poverty funds: Tutoring, supervised study hall, speech therapy, remedial reading, remedial arithmetic, remedial writing, health and safety training, orientation for employment, counseling, psychological testing, music, art, typing and shorthand. "There is neither good sense nor good faith in putting the word 'remedial' in front of reading, writing or arithmetic in order to make legal what is expressly forbidden in the law," Mr. Poller said.

"Neither does the word 'remedial' make constitutional what is forbidden under the Constitution, or make palatable what most Americans will regard as an infringement of religious liberty and church-state separation."

The American Jewish Congress leader concluded:

"The anti-poverty program is too crucial an aspect of the Administration's program for a great society — and too vital an issue in the lives of millions of American citizens — to be administered in violation of the Constitution. We call on Mr. Shriver, as head of the anti-poverty project, to issue firm instructions prohibiting any further grants — direct or indirect — to sectarian institutions whose primary function is educational, regardless of the purpose for which the institution proposes to use those funds."

Syria's President Asks Anti-Israel Arab Action

BEIRUT, Lebanon — President Amin el-Hafez of Syria recently denounced the heads of 13 other Arab states for talking but not acting against Israel.

"At the last summit meeting I told them, 'If you look in the mirror, you will see shame written on your foreheads,'" he declared at a news conference.

If the Israelis attack Syria, he threatened, "they will have not just one Wailing Wall but another stretching all the way from Damascus to Tel Aviv."

In an apparent allusion to oil-rich states, the President said that if the weight of Arab wealth were brought into play, "Israel would be eliminated in a matter of weeks."

He disclosed that President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic had offered to mediate the conflict between Syria and Iraq but that Syria had insisted on two preliminary conditions: the release of imprisoned members of the Baath party in Iraq and re-establishment of the party's position there.

Jewish Businessman To Build Convent

CHANDLER, Ariz. — A Jewish businessman has agreed to donate a $50,000 convent for the Sisters of Charity in St. Mary's parish here because of his friendship with a Roman Catholic layman who is helping construction of a parochial school where the nuns will teach.

Last summer Adolph Weinberg, president of a California grain company with dairy interests in Chandler, offered to help Eddie Basha Jr., head of a super-market chain, build the parochial school.

Mr. Basha replied that his family wanted to be solely financially responsible for the school since it was to be named in memory of an uncle, the late A. N. Basha. He suggested the convent instead.

Expected at first to cost only $15,000, the convent was to include quarters for 16 nuns, offices, a chapel and a sewing room. However, after architects finished their planning, it was found that the total construction costs would reach $50,000. Mr. Weinberg still agreed to pay for it.

Center, Youth Directors Finish Training Course

GRENOBLE, France — An 18-month training course in Israel and France for directors of Jewish community and youth centers in Europe ended earlier this month with ceremonies honoring the seven graduates of the course.

The ceremonies were conducted by the commission on Jewish centers and vocation camps of the Standing Conference on European Jewish Community Services, which sponsored the course. The seven graduates will take up posts as directors of centers in France, Belgium and Yugoslavia.

Such centers are a comparatively new feature of the Jewish scene in Europe, the first two in Paris and Rome having been opened in 1954.

Under the impetus of funds from the Conference of Jewish Claims Against Germany, supplemented and administered by the Joint Distribution Committee since 1954, the movement has increased to 82 centers.

Prof. Chaim Perelman of Brussels, president of the commission, said the "great growth" of the community center movement was "a positive manifestation" of Jewish youths' "will to identify with a community whose members are solidly united not through their biological or racial constitutions but as members of a culture linked through a common history and common tradition."

He added that the greatest danger facing the center movement in Europe was a lack of directors and other trained workers and that providing such leadership was a primary obligation of his commission.

cited the thalidomide babies as an example of this.

The admiral, generally regarded as the father of the nuclear submarine, pointed out that a huge organization is "customarily run not by the people who do the productive work but by a special category of career men whose particular meter is to rule large-scale enterprises — the pure administrators.

"So great is their power and influence," he continued, "that normally the interests of these organizations in continuing harmful but profitable practices outweigh the interests of the sovereign people in getting protective laws enacted and enforced."

Admiral Rickover spoke at the Yale Club to approximately 100 book-publishing executives.

Britain Eyes Progress Of Compensation Laws
 LONDON — A British Government spokesman said in the House of Commons recently that Britain was watching the progress of new compensation legislation in West Germany which would provide compensation for refugees persecuted by the Nazi regime on grounds of nationality.
 The statement was made by George Thompson, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, in reply to a question by Sir Tufon Beamish, Conservative Member of Parliament.
 Sir Tufon had asked the Minister to make representations to the West German Government on the matter.
 The deputy said the legislation did not adequately fulfill the obligations accepted by the Bonn Government in the convention signed at Bonn in May, 1952, in settlement of matters arising out of the war and the occupation.
 The Minister, in his written reply, said that draft legislation on that question and related matters was now under consideration by the restitution committee of West Germany's lower House.
 He said Britain has "subjected this draft legislation to careful examination and its progress will be followed with close attention."
 He added that the Government felt that representations would not be "appropriate" at the present time.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

THREE INAUGURATIONS
 When I arrived in Washington on this day in January 1957, to cover President Eisenhower's inauguration, the over-riding question I discussed with his top economic policymakers was — how to prevent the business recession then clearly in the making from hitting the U.S.

When I came to Washington on this same day in January 1961 to cover President Kennedy's inauguration, the over-riding question I discussed with Kennedy's economic brain-trust was — how to end the business recession which had begun in early 1960.

When I arrive in Washington on this January 18, 1965, to cover President Johnson's inauguration, the over-riding question I'm already scheduled to discuss in my talks with Johnson's economic advisers is — how to sustain the pace of today's unprecedentedly prolonged peacetime prosperity.

What a switch in emphasis — from preventing a developing recession in 1957 to ending a current recession in 1961 to sustaining prosperity in 1965! To remind you how it was and how it now is...

In 1957 Eisenhower's policymakers had a deeply built-in bias in favor of budgets balanced automatically each calendar year. Eisenhower wanted to ask for a tax cut to encourage spending by industry and consumers, but he didn't dare in the face of the budget red ink. He wanted to curb federal spending, but he was frustrated by the then explosive crisis in the Middle East. The Federal Reserve System wanted to ease its squeeze on credit to spur business expansion, but it didn't dare because it feared inflation even more than deflation.

So the threatened recession became actuality in July 1957. And the combination of rising government spending and a lower tax take resulting from depressed profits and paychecks created the largest peacetime budget deficit in our history — $12.4 billion — between mid-1958 and mid-1959.

In 1961 Kennedy's brain-trust still felt the country wasn't ready to accept the idea of tax cuts when the budget was in the red — even though his economists were convinced tax reduction was our greatest single anti-recession weapon. They didn't dare propose bold, new money policies because they were afraid these might frighten our foreign creditors, start another run on our gold reserve.

To end the 1960-61 recession, therefore, the Kennedy administration continued moves begun in the final months of Eisenhower's term — acceleration of defense and highway spending, speeding up of payments to veterans, extension of jobless benefits, easier credit.

The 1960-61 recession did end within weeks after Kennedy formally assumed office, but it wasn't because of anything special that the White House did. In fact, it wasn't until 1963 that Kennedy finally came out fighting for massive tax cuts. It wasn't until 1964 that the tax cuts were voted to add fuel to our business upturn. Now it's 1965 and Johnson's leading economic advisers are concentrating on how to sustain a business upswing which will be four years old next month. Recession is not the worry; maintaining the pace of the expansion is.

There will be more tax cuts — this time in excise taxes — to stimulate consumer buying directly and there will be higher federal government spending for the Great Society's program too.

Assuming there is no inflationary run-up, the Federal Reserve System will keep credit available so businessmen will have ample funds to finance desirable projects.

Aggressive steps will be taken to make sure the whole world knows we will defend the U.S. dollar — and if the policies are painful to many foreigners, well, so be it.

What a tribute this shift in emphasis is to the fundamental power of the U.S. economy and to the increasing economic-financial sophistication of America's leaders, both in public and private life!

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

Esse (Mrs. Irv) Kupcnet of Chicago writes: "You have been most kind to us and our late beloved Karyn. We are still beside ourselves with loneliness and have much difficulty accepting this horrible situation that took our darling. You were right when you said in your column that it's incredible her murder still remains unsolved by the Los Angeles Police Department."

Former footballer Sld Luckman is chairman of the recently formed Karyn Kupcnet Gallery of the Francis W. Parker School, Chicago. Friends of Esse and Irv and their son Jerry have joined to erect the gallery at the Parker School where Karyn spent many formative and happy years.

The Gallery would be the school's focal point for art exhibits and social gatherings with a plaque listing the names of donors.

Beautiful, charming and talented, Karyn Kupcnet was one of the nicest young ladies I've ever had the pleasure of interviewing in Hollywood. We met on many occasions and never failed to stop and chat about our respective families.

Karyn had earned many credits for her excellent work in television and motion pictures when her promising career was cut short by a fiendish stranger in her Hollywood apartment.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

Snow

By Beryl Segal

Chances are that by the time this article is read the accumulation of snow will have gone, the sun will shine again innocently, and people will smile again when they meet in the streets and say: "Isn't this a beautiful day?" "Yes, it is, just beautiful, for this time of the year."

But now in a mid-January day, when this is written the streets are blanketed with snow and we are under an involuntary house arrest. In fact the whole of New England states and a goodly part of the northern part of the country are snow bound.

The radio is open all morning and we listen to the announcer reading off cancellations of meetings and of events of the day. We also listen to the weather forecasts:

Temperature in downtown Providence seven degrees and still snowing.

Accumulation ten inches of snow and still the snow is falling.

Road conditions are bad, visibility is less than half a mile, and the snow is falling.

Barometer is down and still the snow keeps on blowing.

At the window we look out with fascination at the snow flakes making fanciful designs on the glass panes. The flakes keep coming and as they near the earth, they rise again as if not willing to fall down.

See how the wind plays with the snow flakes before they are finally deposited on the ground. They are brought low and raised up in midair again. They are tossed from right to left until they are finally wafted down to the earth.

Not so the rain. When the rain comes down in torrents, the uninterrupted stream pours directly to the ground. Sheets of water coming down. The sight of such a rain is depressing. People walk behind their umbrellas and don't even pay attention to the people they meet who are also hiding behind umbrellas. People are displeased with someone, complaining why they are punished with this rain. They could do without this rain.

But snow lifts up the spirits, even when we are confined to the house. We sit at the window and never get tired at the sight. We are raring to go outside and try our hands at shoveling the snow. Youngsters appear with their sleighs and stand at the rise in the street, ready for a scoot down the incline. They drag the sleighs up again for a ride that lasts only a twinkling of an eye. But they are in high spirits. Children are making snow men and throwing snow balls at one another. There is a special fascination about snow. It is pliable. We can do things with it. We can mold it as we please. Watch the children in the snow. They make tunnels. They make castles. They make igloos. They shout. They like to hear their voices reverberate in the snow filled air. The air itself is crisp and invigorating. Older people look at them with envy. O, how they would like to go out and do something with snow.

Snow is the perennial wonder of the world. Where snow is unknown people are craving to see it, to feel it, to wash their faces in it. They learn about snow in the text books, they understand how it is formed, but that is not the same as seeing it, or holding it in your hands, or feeling the softness of snow under foot. Children, especially, greedily take to the snow when they see it fall for the first time. I remember a child who came from South America, where it never snows, standing outside and holding up the hands above the head, collecting a handful of snow flakes, smelling them, taking them in the mouth, and the face expressing wonder and amazement.

Sleigh bells in the snow in the perpetual Russian fairy tale. The romance of Russian young people going on a snow ride in the endless field. The poetry of the Russian soul. The sleigh was taken out of the barn with the first snow fall and was not returned till March, Legends and fantastic stories and large treasures of Folk - lore have grown up around the horse-and-sleigh rides.

On our street all traffic stopped. The automobile cannot cope with the snow. But a sleigh and a horse and a tinkling bell could laugh at the snow.

In the meantime the snow weaves its fairy wonderland on the city streets.

The lobsters were on the British singer's doorstep the next morning. . . .

The kitchen built in his Bel Air home cost eight times as much as he paid for the house originally. It contains all the gourmet's delights, imported from everywhere. His library includes a special edition of the collected works of George Bernard Shaw. The first volume is inscribed by GBS "to Alma Hitchcock (Alfred Hitchcock is her husband)."

On the walls are paintings bought years ago for a fraction of their present worth — including Klee, Vlaminck, Van Gogh, Rouault, Utrillo. One abstract painting hangs near the entrance, and Hitchcock asks each guest to try to identify the artist. It's by his 3-year-old grandchild.

When a brush fire menaced their house, the Hitchcocks left on the walls the paintings by artists who still are alive, and whose works therefore could be replaced. The paintings by artists who are dead were moved into the huge, walk-in freezer. He has more paintings and another huge freezer in his home at Santa Cruz.

He invited his MCA-Universal associates to a weekend party at Santa Cruz, and had to solve a problem in logistics; MCA's rule is that no two top executives shall fly in the same plane. Hitchcock

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

HOLLYWOOD: Alfred Hitchcock, the most enduring movie-maker still active, has devised more murders than the entire Cosa Nostra. The press reports on his honorary degree from Santa Clara University were headed "Cited for Homicide" and "Hitch Slays 'Em." Dali's painting is inscribed to Hitchcock as "Le Chevalier de la Mort."

It's difficult, he said, to think of a new way of killing people. He never could film his perfect-murder plot, because it involved cannibalism: The murderer chops up and cooks the victim's body, and the detectives unwittingly eat up the evidence. "We could never show that," he shuddered. Nor could he film a Cary Grant chase scene at Mt. Rushmore.

He did fulfill his 15-year dream of staging a chase across the sculptures of the presidents there: "But I wanted to show Cary sliding down Lincoln's nose and hiding in the nostril. And then he gets a sneezing fit — Cary, not Lincoln." And his idea for inducing a tear from Washington's eye really was censorable.

As a naturalized citizen he has all the zeal of the convert. At a party in Vienna recently he heard a British singer criticize Maine lobsters. Hitchcock said they were incomparable. The singer disagreed. Hitchcock phoned his N. Y. office to have four Maine lobsters placed, on

Menzies Remarks Debt Owed Israel By West

CANBERRA, Australia — Prime Minister Robert Menzies said recently that too many people consider Israel purely as a political entity, ignoring the fact that Western civilization was indebted to its great history, culture and literature.

Sir Robert made the comment at the Menzies Library at the Australian National University after presentation of a set of books by Israel Ambassador David Teshler to mark Sir Robert's 70th birthday.

The books comprised 30 works in 37 volumes ranging from a Hebrew translation of Shakespeare to art and warfare in Biblical lands.

Plaque, 'Monument To Russian Jews,' Dedicated Opposite Soviet U. N. Mission

NEW YORK — Needing the Russians may not accomplish anything, but a synagogue across the street from the Soviet Mission to the United Nations has found a way to remind them all the time of the plight of Soviet Jews. Last Sunday Congregation Zichron Ephraim of 163 East 67th Street dedicated a 5-by-2 foot bronze plaque fixed to the temple wall which faces the Soviet Mission.

In bold, big letters the plaque says, "Hear the Cry of the Oppressed—The Jewish Community in the Soviet Union."

It will be continuously illuminated by shafts of light.

Rabbi Arthur Schneier, spiritual leader of the congregation, said that the plaque would serve as a "living monument to the three million suffering Jews in Russia."

As the plaque was unveiled, a dozen or more members of the Mission snapped photographs through the opened slats of white Venetian blinds.

A rabbi who asked that his name not be used said that protests had been registered by the Russians with both Mayor Wagner and Adlai E. Stevenson, United States representative to the United Nations.

The Mayor, in effect, replied by addressing the nearly 1,000 persons who filled the synagogue just before the unveiling. "Dramatic Witness"

He described the event as a dramatic witness against attacks on our fellow human beings" and called for "unceasing protests against man's inhumanity to man."

Senator Jacob K. Javits was scheduled to appear, but was ill with influenza and running a high fever at his apartment here.

His speech was read by John Trubini, the Senator's law partner.

Senator Robert F. Kennedy was the last of the speakers to arrive at the synagogue. He was escorted down the aisle to standing applause.

Grinning widely, he fumbled a bit as he attempted to put a black yamulke, or skull cap, on his head.

More applause echoed through the temple when Senator Kennedy said, "Your cause is my cause."

He described the persecution of Jews in Russia as a "sorry story" and assured the audience that the Russians were "listening to what goes on here."

"They may deny any persecution," he said, "but they cannot defy the conscience of an outraged world. This plaque will bear silent witness, day and night, until it is no longer needed."

Rabbi Schneier called upon all Protestant and Roman Catholic leaders in the United States to "join in setting up a united front with the Jewish community for the purpose of appealing to the Soviet Government to restore religious liberty and freedom of cultural expression to the three million Jews of that country." Telegrams of support were read from Governor Rockefeller and Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey.

Other participants included Benjamin Gassman, president of the congregation, Label A. Katz, president of B'nai B'rith, Stanley Lowell, chairman of the City Commission on Human Rights, and Theodore Bikel, folk singer and actor.

On Thursday more than a score of religious and civic leaders issued an Appeal of Conscience urging the Soviet Union to restore "full and unfettered religious liberty to their three million Jewish citizens."

Signers of the appeal, sponsored by Congregation Zichron Ephraim, included the Rev. Reinhold Niebuhr, professor emeritus at Union Theological Seminary; the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, minister emeritus of Riverside Church; the Rev. C.J. McNaspy, an associate editor of America, the Jesuit weekly, and the Rev. David H. C. Read, minister of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Rabbi Schneier, in commenting further on the plight of Jews in Russia, said: "They have been persecuted to the degree that Jewish folklore has been denied the freedom and the opportunity to perpetuate itself." He also said that the Soviet Union has never allowed a printing of a Hebrew Bible, and that "Soviet leaders have candidly acknowledged that they set employment quotas for Jews."

Justice Minister Concedes Possibility Of Legal Extension Of Limitations Statute

BONN — The statute of limitations on Nazi crimes could be extended without violating the West German Constitution, according to a report of remarks by Justice Minister Ewald Bucher last Monday. This is the first indication by the Bonn Government that it might be legally possible to extend the statute cut-off date of May 8, 1965.

Morris B. Abram, president of the American Jewish Committee, called on Dr. Bucher to urge elimination of the present cut-off date for starting new proceedings against suspected Nazi criminals.

Trials involving 7,000 accused persons are now on West German dockets. Most of the 700 trials will be held after May 8. But West German law, as now interpreted, forbids any new indictments after that date.

Mr. Abram told the Justice Minister the cut-off date could be extended to 1975 without violating Bonn's Constitutional provision regarding the statute of limitations.

"Minister Bucher agreed that under German law one might reasonably consider some later date than May 8, 1945 as a starting point for the 20-year statute of limitations and that his office would consider the possibility of extension in this light," Mr. Abram said after his interview.

Meanwhile, the west German Government announced that it had handed back a Soviet note as "insulting." The note was in reply to a West German appeal for any new evidence on Nazi crimes so that current investigations could be completed by May 8.

The Soviet reply called this appeal "an inappropriate attempt to cover up the amnesty of Fascist murderers." It warned that Soviet authorities would continue their efforts to uncover such crimes "independent of any deadlines."

A Soviet correspondent, who sought at a Government news conference to expound a legal opinion on the statute, was told by the Government spokesman, Karl-Gunther von Hase, that West Germany could interpret its own law.

In a weekend speech Dr. Bucher spoke out sharply against "foreign interference." Referring to demonstrations in Israel and in the United States in favor of extending the statute of limitations, he said in Augsburg: "It is out of the question that the federal republic will allow itself to be put under pressure by Israel or any other country."

He said West Germany must stick to the letter of the law "even if it means living with some murderers among us."

Although he conceded a legal point to the American Jewish leader, Dr. Bucher is not expected to abandon his opposition to changing the cut-off date. The issue will be resolved by Parliament, which will receive a report from Dr. Bucher in March on the state of current investigations of Nazi crimes.

West Germany's chief investigator, Dr. Erwin Schule, told a committee of Parliament last week that all the evidence could hardly be sifted by May 8.

Blue Cross Urges
Members Apply
For Medicare

Blue Cross and Physicians Service members who are eligible for the State Medicare Program are able to drop their coverage and have it held in reserve while they are protected under the new State Medicare Program, Arthur F. Hanley, Blue Cross executive director, announced last week.

"Many of our aged members have been hesitant to drop our protection and sign up under Medicare for fear they may someday become ineligible for the State Program and then be without health protection," Mr. Hanley said.

He urged all eligible subscribers to take advantage of the State Medicare Program. He called it "a fine program of health care... superior in benefits to what many of our members now have."

Mr. Hanley said this new policy means that present members of the health plans who discontinue their protection once they are certified eligible for Medicare, can have it back for the asking should they ever become ineligible for the State Program. Former membership will be renewed without a waiting period for benefits.

Conference Planned For Social Workers

NEW YORK — The executive committee of the National Conference of Jewish Communal Service has approved preliminary plans for the first international conference of Jewish social workers, to be held in Israel in the summer of 1967.

The conference is expected to consider Jewish demography, Israeli-Diaspora relations, problems of integration in Jewish communal life and the problems involved in family services, homes for the aged and Jewish community centers.

PRISONERS
JERUSALEM — An Israeli freed from Egyptian captivity has reported that more than a score of his countrymen are held in a special detention camp outside Cairo.

Zvi Buegeleisen of Haifa, told "Davar," the Histadrut daily, that the Egyptians released him because he had submitted to pressure and broadcast against Israel.

He said all prisoners were tortured, but once a week they were fed and clothed well and taken on sightseeing tours.

Mrs. Richard Smith

Miss Libby Gross of 118 Eaton Street, daughter of Martin Gross and Mrs. Fania Gross, became the bride of Richard Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Smith of 17 Rhode Island Avenue, Newport, at a 6:30 P.M. ceremony at Temple Beth El on Dec. 26. Rabbi William G. Braude performed the ceremony. A reception followed at the temple.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a sheath gown of pure silk with a sabrina neckline, elbow-length sleeves and an empire waistline, highlighted by self-braid and seed pearls and with a full court train. She carried a prayer book cascaded with stephanotis and white carnations centered with a white orchid.

Miss Bernice Gross was her sister's maid of honor. The bridegroom's niece, Miss Cindy Smith, was flower girl.

Cultural Foundation Plans Anniversary

The America-Israel Cultural Foundation will hold its 25th anniversary dinner-concert benefit in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria on Jan. 24.

Goddard Lieberman is chairman for the event, at which the America-Israel Cultural Award will be presented to Igor Stravinsky, the composer; Jacques Lipchitz, the sculptor, and Israeli actress Hanna Rovina.

Leonard Bernstein will conduct a Jerome Robbins production of Stravinsky's "The Soldier's Tale" with direction and choreography by Anna Sokolow.

Honorary sponsors for the benefit include Mayor Wagner, Avraham Harman, Israel's Ambassador to the United States; Michael Comay, Israel's chief delegate to the United Nations; Senator Jacob K. Javits, City Controller Abraham D. Beame and Brooklyn Borough President Abe Stark.

Mrs. Isaac Stern, chairman of membership, heads a group of committee members, among them Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, Mrs. Bertram S. Nayfack, Mrs. Isidore M. Cohen, Mrs. Arnold Grant, Mrs. Oscar Kolin, Mrs. Henry Margolis, Mrs. Isidore Morgenstern and Mrs. Jacob L. Rosenthal.

Mr. Stern, the violinist, is president of the foundation, which supports some 50 projects in cultural institutions in Israel, fosters a cultural exchange with Israel and maintains a scholarship program that enables gifted Israeli youngsters to study at home, in Europe or in this country.

Mr. Lipchitz has recently presented the original molds of his lifetime output of sculpture to the Foundation for one of the Foundation's beneficiaries, the Israel Museum in Jerusalem. Mr. Stravinsky composed and conducted "Abraham and Isaac" for the 1964 Israel Music Festival. At its world premiere, the 82-year-old conductor stipulated that the composition must always be sung in Hebrew.

Miss Rovina, a founder of the famous Habimah Theater, is known to American audiences for her spirited performance in "The Dybbuk."

The report stated that the Arab League's Central Boycott Office in Damascus, Syria, now explicitly permits foreign cruise ships carrying tourists to sail directly from an Israeli port to an Arab port. Under a previous ruling, such ships were forced to stop at some "neutral" port before proceeding from an Israeli port to an Arab harbor.

Hot Pool Found Below Red Sea

LONDON — A mile-wide pool of hot and excessively salty water has been found at the bottom of the Red Sea, according to a report in Nature, British science weekly. Scientists on the British research ship Discovery, who found the hot pool, think that the depression may have been trapping, for hundreds of thousands of years, some of the heat escaping from the center of the earth.

The hot brine was found when the ship was cruising toward Suez from the Indian Ocean.

Dr. John C. Swallow of the National Institute of Oceanography who was aboard the Discovery, explained:

"The Red Sea interests us because part of it is cut by the northern extension of the Great East African Rift Valley and other investigations have reported that the deep water thereabouts is distinctly abnormal.

"At a point approximately midway between Jidda and Port Sudan on the opposite shore we echoed two fairly deep depressions and collected water samples from one of them at a depth of 7,200 feet."

The investigators found the water was 44 degrees centigrade (111 degrees Fahrenheit) and eight times more salty (270 parts a thousand) than usual. The degree of salinity, Dr. Swallow explained, is close to the saturation point and is the highest recorded for any oceanic water.

His explanation is that earthquakes or large-scale mountain-cracking movements, perhaps connected with the great East African Rift of half a million years ago, split open part of the Red Sea floor and exposed vast beds of salt of the kind now found in Iran and elsewhere.

Dr. Swallow believes that the dissolved salt (the depression is a mile-and-a-half wide) acts as a baffle or blanket, holding in the heat that usually escapes from the center of the earth in the form of upward and outward convection currents.

Arson Attempt On Club Lands Neo-Nazi In Jail

SANTIAGO, Chile — Franz Heinz Pfeiffer, a 26-year-old leader of a Chilean neo-Nazi movement, has been sentenced to three years in jail for an attempt in 1958 to set fire to a Jewish club here.

Pfeiffer, who last summer announced that he would lead "a battle against Jews," had also been indicted for having tried to dynamite a synagogue in Santiago in 1958 at about the same time three other synagogues were vandalized.

A few months ago, Pfeiffer re-established the Chilean Nazi Workers Party which had flourished during World War II.

The Lyons Den

had a fleet of limousines at the airport to pick up the arrivals.

Because Hitchcock produces 39 TV programs and a feature film every year, he has an entire building for his staff in the Universal City complex. Not since the Barbary Coast days has California seen as many red lights as now are flashed at the sound stages. The red lights are warnings that filming is going on inside, and that the doors are locked.

The commissaries resemble those of the old Hollywood studios in their peak days — full of bustle, talk and stars visible at each table. Jack LaRue wandered in and table-hopped from Jimmy Stewart to Jack Benny, from Charlton Heston to Cary Grant.

Heston, wearing his 11th century suit of mail for "The War Lord," said: "Grant is the only actor other actors will do a double-take for, when he goes by." David Lipton, vice-president of the studio, said that at their sales conventions the speakers pushing next year's products always told the exhibitors: "And Cary Grant is reading the script."

If Grant, he added, were to read every script thus listed, he'd have time for nothing else. Jennings Lang said of the studio's TV projects: "We have more pilots than the Israeli Air Force."

Heston spoke of his eagerness to try a Broadway play again: "I'm in four unreleased films costing $42 million — all four, that is, not one, like 'Cleopatra.'" The four are "Agony and the Ecstasy," "Major Dundee," "Greatest Story Ever Told" and "The War Lord." He plays these period roles, he said, because "very few of us can wear chain mail."

The armor displayed in museums, said Heston, is of small size because it was made for children. These small suits survived. The larger ones, worn by men in battle, were chopped up in the fighting. "They had to be big men to wield such swords. The Battle of Hastings lasted 10 hours."

He mentioned his new TV series on President Roosevelt: "FDR had a tenor voice. I followed his speech patterns. They told me they didn't want me to do an impersonation; they could get a nightclub mimic for that. They wanted me to show how he felt, now how he sounded."

In the basement of the building is the most modern computer machine, but it didn't help in forestalling a whim of nature. "Chuck," a technician said to Heston, about their outdoor set, "the wind blew the clouds away — so instead of 11th century Holland, we see Burbank."

Israeli Pianist Lauded Despite Broken Strings

MOSCOW — Pianist David Barenboim, despite four broken piano strings in one of his two Moscow recitals, has met critical and popular acclaim so far in his two-week tour of the Soviet Union. The strings broke as the 22-year-old Israeli musician played the forte passage in Liszt's Piano Sonata.

The pianist, more than halfway through the piece, decided to play to the end although the piano sounded on occasion like a harpsichord.

The audience bore with him, although a twinge of pain flicked over many a face as the loose strings provided unusual accompaniment. After the Liszt work, the audience was particularly generous with applause and kept Mr. Barenboim on stage for four encores, which he played on a fresh piano.

After his debut in the Conservatory, for which Mr. Barenboim selected two Beethoven sonatas, the music critic of Tass, the Soviet press agency, wrote:

"The young musician interpreted these works in good tradition, displaying fine taste, a sense of style and confident technique."

by Revolve
played the nine and declarer won the trick with the jack.
Declarer played three rounds of spades, finishing in dummy. On the third round East had to find a discard and played a small heart. Declarer led a heart at trick 5 from dummy and played the ten from his own hand. West took the trick with the jack. West now had no more spades; he could hardly return a club, and a heart seemed even less attractive; he therefore led the two of diamonds. East won the trick with the ace and returned the five. Declarer finessed the jack without much risk and cashed the king of diamonds, the ace of clubs, and the two winning spades in dummy, producing a double squeeze for the remaining tricks. West had to discard the clubs or a heart and East could not hold on to the hearts and a diamond. He therefore made eleven tricks for a cold top.

Dr. Frischauer was born in Vienna. There he lived and practised as a well-known lawyer until 1938, when he was forced to leave the country because of the Hitler regime. He emigrated first to France and then to the United States, where he spent the rest of his life in California. He was a member of the famous pre-war Austrian bridge team.

The opening lead was the two of clubs to which declarer played small from dummy. East

Arab 'Storm Troops' Clash With Israelis

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A new and secret Arab fighting organization claimed today to have killed 12 Israelis and wounded 19.

The "General Command of Palestinian Storm Troops" announced that the casualties were inflicted by the "fourth group of our third wing" in a clash "north-west of Ben Jibrin."

It said that two Arabs had been wounded, and that one had fallen into Israeli hands.

Ben Jibrin is an Israeli settlement that does not show on maps available here but is believed near Acre.

This was the third announcement by the organization, about which little is known. The fact that the first favorable notice on it was printed in the Baathist Organ Al Ahrar, and the fact that most of its activity seems to be in northern Israel, suggest that the raiders are based in Syria.

The impression here is that it is an organization of Palestinians operating with the sanction and help of the Syrian Government, but not necessarily connected with the Baathist party.

Tabachnick, Fuchs Win 1964 Friedland Prize

NEW YORK — Avrohom Tabachnick, the Yiddish poet and essayist, and A. M. Fuchs, the Israeli Yiddish novelist, have been awarded the Friedland Literature Prize for 1964.

Tabachnick, a Yiddish editor at the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, was awarded the $200 prize for his essay on the late poet Moshe Leib Halprin which was published in the December issue of Zukumft, a Yiddish literary magazine.

Fuchs received the prize for his short story, Red Hersh, published in Di Golden Keit, an Israeli Yiddish literary magazine.
