

Named Brandeis Fellow; To Be Hooded Saturday

By Cella Zuckerberg
Mrs. Julius Irving of Providence will be hooded as a newly-elected Fellow of Brandeis University tomorrow evening at the Convocation Banquet. Present will be her two brothers, Maurice B. and Samuel B. Graubart, and a nephew, Dr. Irwin Graubart who will be representing his father (a third brother) Myer M. Graubart, who will be unable to attend, as well as her niece, Doris Graubart, who lives with Mrs. Irving and works with her.

This is the climax for 'Mal' Irving of many years of philanthropy, of many years of hard day-after-day work in education and in communal activities.

In his letter to Mrs. Irving, Dr. Abram Sachar, president of Brandeis, says:

"I perform a very happy function when I transmit to you the desire of our Board of Trustees for you to become a Fellow of the University. You must know that for quite some time I had hoped to bring you into this group. Asuredly you are not looking for new assignments for you have a very active and involved life in business and philanthropy. Yet I hope you will accept this invitation because of your interest in the concept and program of Brandeis . . ."

Since the death of her husband, Dr. Julius Irving, in 1951, she has devoted herself to work . . . in business, in organizations, in education. She has placed memorials for her husband in many places.

There are the four mosaic panels at the entrance of Temple Beth El, which were executed by Walter Feldman, Brown University professor and well-known artist; here is the lobby of Meehan Auditorium at Brown University which was donated in memory of her husband; and there is the Julius and Matilda Irving Presidential Enclave at Brandeis University.

An article in the local Brandeis Bulletin of the Women's Committee, published in 1956, speaks of this Enclave:

"Not everyone is fortunate enough to see, enjoy and taste the fruits of her giving, but one of the lucky ones is Mrs. Julius Irving of Providence. 'I'd like you to meet my landlord,' says Dr. Abram Sachar . . . when introducing Mal Irving. Because of her generous $100,000 contribution, the Julius and Matilda Irving Executive Center will be the home of the offices of the President and his staff.

"The fact that Mal Irving came to Brandeis completely unsolicited to find out what she could do to memorialize her late husband, is a never ceasing wonder to Dr. Sachar. Her enthusiasm is so intense and so sincere that she is practically a one woman crusade to make friends for Brandeis. . . . When Dr. Irving was alive, the couple travelled extensively and made friends all over the world. Mrs. Irving has recently resumed her travels and is busy making all these people Brandeis-minded.

"When asked how she happened to choose Brandeis for her generosity, Mrs. Irving replied, 'It was the sort of thing my husband would have liked. He loved learning and was deeply devoted to culture and the arts. I can think of nothing that would have made him happier than to know that a great liberal seat of learning is being

HIAS Aids Cuban Jews

NEW YORK — Murray I. Gurfeln, president of United HIAS Service, said that the agency is "making every effort to implement the Government's program of assisting Cuban refugees to come to the United States."

"In accordance with our Government's policy to give first priority to family reunion and to political prisoners who may be released by the Cuban Government," he said, "we have already submitted to the Cuban Refugee Center, in Miami, the names of all parents of unaccompanied Cuban Jewish children and separated spouses. We are working hard to reunite these families."

He pointed out that United HIAS Service is in daily contact with the United States State Department, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service

Leo Gordon Commended For Saving Aircraft

Leo Gordon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Zelick Gordon of 15 Sparrow Street, was recently commended by his commanding officer for meritorious performance of duty, and promoted to Aviation Ordnanceman Third Class, USN. Serving on the USS Forrestal, he was assigned duties as plane captain in Fighter Squadron 74 on the flight deck of the aircraft carrier.

"The ship was operating in high winds and heavy seas when a sudden roll and heave of the deck caused the tiedown chains" on a $3,000,000 airplane to break. The aircraft rolled free, a danger to people and to other planes. Despite his personal danger, Mr. Gordon opened the canopy and tried to reach the plane's emergency brake. He was thrown from the aircraft and broke a wrist, but by opening the canopy he made it possible for a shipmate to brake the plane.

The letter, from Squadron Commander H. B. Baumann, said, "Your unhesitating reaction in a situation of obvious personal danger was directly responsible for preventing the loss of a first-line fighter aircraft. You are commended for your unquestioning response to a situation demanding initiative and courage."

Mr. Gordon attended Hope and Classical High Schools, but entered the service before graduation. He has been in the Navy for two and a half years, and is on his second tour of duty overseas.

GJC's Grossman Says $604,992 Pledged

The 1965 campaign total of the General Jewish Committee has climbed over the $600,000 mark.

Stanley Grossman, general chairman, announced today that the total now stands at $604,992, a substantial increase over last year's figure.

He said that the final result of the annual fund-raising drive depends upon the thorough coverage of cards currently in the hands of GJC workers. He urged all workers to cover their assigned cards before the next report meeting on Nov. 18 at noon at GJC headquarters.

TO BE INSTALLED — Rabbi Howard R. Greenstein, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Greenstein, will be installed today as rabbi of Temple Beth Shalom, Peabody, Mass., by his cousin, Rabbi Jerome S. Gurland of Temple Sinai, Cranston. Rabbi Greenstein is a graduate of Classical High School, Cornell University and Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion. He was cantor of an Ohio temple while in college, and has given concerts of Jewish music.

MORE AUTOS

TEL AVIV — When the State of Israel was born 17 years ago, it had only 13,000 automobiles. Now some 180,000 automobiles clog the roads of the country, and observers foresee that in five years the number of cars will soar to a quarter of a million, the Zionist Information Service says.

LBJ Backs Israel On Desalination

JERUSALEM — President Johnson has promised Premier Eshkol that the United States Government will take part in the financing and implementation of construction of the multi-million dollar Israel nuclear desalination project, it was learned here.

Myer Feldman, who served the late President Kennedy as White House advisor on Jewish Affairs, met with Premier Eshkol and reportedly delivered to the Premier the President's pledge.

It was assumed that Premier Eshkol would ask Mr. Feldman to deliver a personal reply to the President and that after that intensive negotiations would begin in Washington on steps for implementation.

Construction of the nuclear desalination plant—a joint American-Israeli undertaking—is expected to start next year after study and planning phases are finished in the next few months.

The United States took part in the initial exploratory phases of the pioneering project through a joint United States-Israel Committee which was set up after Mr. Eshkol met with the President in Washington in 1964.

While it had been widely expected that the United States would also participate in construction of the plant, the President's message was the first clear indication that it would do so.

HIGH COST OF FIRES
NEW YORK — The dollar value of property damaged or destroyed by fire in the United States rose from $78 million in 1875 to almost $1.37 billion in 1964, reports the Insurance Information Institute.

D-DAY LEADERS — D-Day co-chairmen and captains met last Sunday at the Wayland Manor to plan the one-day solicitation for the General Jewish Committee campaign. D-Day — the one-day house-to-house canvass — will be held Sunday, Nov. 21, with headquarters at Johnson's Hummocks. Milton M. Dubinsky, D-Day chairman, announced additional captains for the drive: Edward Appel, Ernest K. Chernick, Charles Coken, Emiel Freedman, Harold Gerstein, Norman Gordon, Leroy Haft, Jacob Licht, Isadore Nachbar, David E. Penn, Philip Rosenfield, Max Runstein, Morris Satloff, Leo B. Schretter, Joseph Schuster, Harvey Green, Larry Alkins and Dr. Sidney Goldstein.

U.S. Official Observes Anti-Semitism

WASHINGTON — Some Negro businessmen appear to have developed an anti-Semitic attitude because Jewish merchants are "aggressive competitors and abound in the ghettos," according to Eugene P. Foley, Assistant Secretary of Commerce and director of the U.S. Economic Development Administration, as quoted by the Washington Post.

Foley, former administrator of the Small Business Administration, made available to the Washington newspaper his comments on handicaps of Negro-owned businesses. Commenting on what appeared to him to be an anti-Semitic attitude among some Negroes, Mr. Foley ascribed it "to the fact that Jewish merchants are 'aggressive competitors and abound in the ghettos.'" He noted, for example, that "in Harlem and in other largely Negro areas, Jews own more stores than any other ethnic group."

Foley went on to cite statistics purporting to show mercantile tendencies that distinguished Jews from the "general pattern" of America's laborers and farmers. He said that "in their native countries, most Jews were engaged in trading, manufacturing, or mechanical pursuits. For example, the first Russian census of 1897 showed that one third of the Russian Jews were tradesmen, another third were engaged in manufacturing and mechanical pursuits, one fourth were unskilled laborers and five percent were professionals."

"The Jews, therefore, had an advantage over other immigrants in America's business culture," according to Mr. Foley.

Foley was quoted as stating that because of the proximity of Jewish merchants to Negroes, the latter's anti-white feelings are expressed in the form of anti-Semitism. But Jewish merchants, he pointed out, abound in most sections of every city. This, he says, is because the great majority of German and Eastern European Jews who came to this country during the 19th century had business and commercial backgrounds.

1/2 teaspoon vanilla

To make pancakes: Beat eggs lightly, add oil and milk. Add flour and salt carefully. Beat until smooth. Chill 1/2 hour. Melt butter in a 7-inch skillet. Pour 1 tablespoon batter into the pan. Tip pan so batter spreads and covers the bottom. Brown on one side only. Stack blintzes until all batter is used, adding additional butter to the pan as needed. Meanwhile make filling by combining all the ingredients into a smooth mixture. Place 1 tablespoon of the cheese mixture on the browned side of each pancake. Fold in two opposite ends. Roll up. Fry blintzes in butter in a large skillet until golden brown on all sides. Serve with sour cream, sugar and cinnamon. Yield: 8 blintzes.

NOTE: Blintzes may be prepared ahead of time and set in the refrigerator to be fried just before serving time. A large quantity may be prepared for parties by setting blintzes in baking pans, dotting with butter and finishing in a moderate oven, about 25 minutes, or until golden brown.

No Collective Guilt

Among the decrees proclaimed on October 28 by Pope Paul VI, the one that has created the greatest interest and the bitterest debates has been the declaration expressing the Roman Catholic Church's attitude toward Judaism and the Jewish people. Although the text has been weakened a little from its original form, the basic purpose which Pope John XXIII had in mind from the beginning has been preserved. Under the new decree it is forbidden to teach, and it is wrong to believe, that the Jewish people then or now had any collective guilt for the action of the leaders who delivered Jesus to the Romans for crucifixion.

The condemnation of the Jews as guilty of deicide and forever cursed as a race never had any basis in logic, reason, legality or humanity. As the new decree points out, it is Catholic dogma that "Christ underwent his passion and death freely." However, the act of Jewish leaders in bringing about the crucifixion has, until now, been applied on a theological or mystical plane. In the terrible sentence of St. Matthew — the only one of the four evangelists who gives it — the Jews who clamored for Jesus's life said: "His blood be upon us and upon our children."

So it has been, on the authority of the Bible, for a great many centuries until today. Naturally, the words now proclaimed must be transformed into actions and — what is much more difficult — into feelings.

Yet Vatican II has made a breakthrough whose great importance is more than religious or historic. One of the major bases for anti-Semitism through the ages has been the Biblical curse of deicide. Whether the Roman Catholic Church condemns, deplors or decries — the word finally used — "displays of anti-Semitism" is a matter of semantics, and the debate over the choice of word will quickly fade from memory. The important thing is that the Catholic Church has denounced "as foreign to the mind of Christ any action against men or harassment of them because of their race, color, condition in life or religion."

In this declaration "on the relation of the Church to non-Christian religions" it can be said, despite minor disappointments over wording, that the ecumenical spirit and purpose of Pope John have been fulfilled.

The N. Y. Times frontpaged the story I'd broken the day before — the story of the Metropolitan Museum of Art buying at auction, for $225, a sculpture worth $500,000. It was from the collection of Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice, whose late husband was quite a figure here. He once invited a N. Dr. Rice kept his word. The actress came to tea and found 20

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

The Lullaby

By Beryl Segal

The young man sat on the stage of Temple Beth El and weaved magic on his violin. It was Itzhak Perlman opening the Artists' Series for the season.

He played and I saw myself in a village somewhere in Israel. Gentle hills surround the village. In the distance is Mount Hermon, and in the valley flows peacefully the Jordan River.

An idyllic place. A young mother sings a lullaby to her child, her only child. The Lullaby by Ben Haim.

"Peace to you, my child. Sleep in peace.

The world is in need of peace. We look to the East, and ask: Will peace come from the East.

We look to the West. Is peace there? Sleep, my child, in peace.

The North and South. No peace in them.

A hostile world looks down on us from North and South. We look to the mountains. And peace is not there either. Sleep my child in peace.

Your father followed the plough.

He turned up a black furrow at the foot of the hills. The furrow made him happy.

He fed his young goats up on the hills.

Young goats that knew no limits to their pleasure in the hills.

Sleep my child in peace. Like the young goats of your father,

You do not know the boundaries of man.

You do not know of 'mine' and 'thine.'

Like the young goats you play at the foot of the beautiful hills.

You know no danger. Peace to you, my child.

Your father followed the furrow And ran with young goats up the hill.

He was cut down. Cut down by a bolt from the hill.

He does not bring back the young goats any more. Sleep my child in peace.

Another man will pick up the plough, Another man will follow the furrow.

Your mother will watch the young goats on the hill. And we will look for peace.

From the East? From the West? Perhaps from the North and South?

We will lift up our eyes to the skies. The blue skies, the peaceful skies. Will peace come from them? Sleep my child. Sleep in peace."

Itzhak Perlman weaves his magic on his violin, and a thousand souls are enthralled. May be they see what I saw in the Lullaby by Ben Haim of Israel?

Maybe they hear the echo of their own childhood in the music played by Itzhak Perlman of Israel?

But all of us hear for the first time the music of Israel.

We have heard songs of Israel before. We have heard them in public gatherings, at banquets, and at evenings of music.

The songs are usually boisterous, hilarious, as sung with abandon by Israeli youth. Songs of the Hora. The Hora danced by young people on the streets.

Or we hear sentimental songs of Israel.

Songs by the Sea of Kinneret. The beautiful nights in Israel. The silence of the fields in Israel. Awesome are the Mountains of Judea. Beautiful are the girls in Dimona.

Now we have heard music that stirs your heart. Haunting tunes that do not let you sleep. A melody that is both soothing and disturbing.

The Lullaby by Ben Haim, an Israeli composer, played by Itzhak Perlman, an Israeli virtuoso. Why doesn't Perlman play more music by Israeli composers?

Let him bring the music of Israel to the ears and hearts of America.

America is waiting for that music.

Save Taxes By Year-end Planning

HOW TO SWITCH INCOME

How do you switch your income and expenses between 1965 and 1966? The vast majority of us, who are "cash basis" taxpayers, generally owe tax on income in the year in which we are paid. For instance, if you do a job for which you are paid in 1965, you report that income on your 1965 return. If you don't get paid for the work until 1966, this income is taxed in your 1966, not your 1965, return — except that you still would be taxed in 1965 if you were entitled to payment in 1965 but asked your employer not to pay you until 1966.

So one way to shift income from 1965 to 1966 is to postpone year-end jobs, if possible, until the start of 1966. Another way is to hold off billing for year-end work until it is so late your client or customer can't pay you until 1966.

If you sell property in the remaining weeks of 1965 at a profit, try to qualify the sale for instalment reporting by not taking more than 30 per cent of the sales price in 1965. Then you will have to include in your 1965 income only that proportion of your total profit represented by the 1965 instalment payments.

Specifically, if you take only 5 per cent of the total price in 1965, you include only 5 per cent of your total profit in your 1965 tax return.

You also can control your income by shifting deductible expenses between 1965 and 1966, because you raise the income of the year from which you switch the expense and lower the income of the year to which you switch it. For "cash basis" taxpayers, the expense generally is deductible in the year of payment.

Thus, if your year-end tax strategy calls for cutting down on 1965 income and increasing 1966 income, make sure you pay all deductible expenses for which you are billed in 1965. In addition, you might spend money for certain deductible purposes in 1965 which you previously had intended to put off until 1966. And you might prepay in 1965 interest and state and local taxes for 1966, if possible. Your prepayment of 1966 interest in 1965 in order to deduct this on your 1965 return depends on whether your lender will, or is required, to accept your prepayment in 1965. Similarly, prepayment of 1966 state and local taxes in 1965 depends on whether your taxing authorities will accept such prepayments.

Caution: The Treasury will allow 1965 deductions for 1965 prepayments of 1966 interest and taxes, but generally not for any other types of prepaid 1966 expenses (such as prepayment in 1965 for a dental or medical expense to be incurred in 1966.)

If you are a business or professional man and are planning to buy equipment or machinery in the near future, try to buy and put the equipment or machinery into use by the end of 1965 — instead of delaying until 1966. By doing this in 1965, you will be able to cut your 1965 tax bills with important tax benefits, but if you delay your purchase until January or later, you will hold off your tax benefits for a full year. The two breaks you get when buying equipment and machinery are the investment credit and the 20 per cent first year depreciation. The investment credit can be as high as 7 per cent of your purchase price if the asset has a useful life of eight years or more. First-year depreciation is a depreciation deduction equal to 20 per cent of the price (up to $10,000 of purchases within a year, or $20,000 in a married persons-joint return) if the asset has a useful life of six years or more. Both of these tax breaks are generally available no matter how late in 1965 you buy and put the property into use.

For instance, say you're a doctor and you buy and put into use in the final week of 1965 a $3,000 piece of medical equipment with a useful life of eight years.

In addition to regular depreciation, you will get a 7 per cent investment credit, or $210, by which you cut your 1965 tax, plus a $600 first-year depreciation deduction which will reduce your 1965 taxable income. If you delay your purchase until January, you'll put off both tax breaks until you file your 1966 return in 1967.

PARENTS AND ESTIMATED TAX

If you help support your parents who are 65 or over, year-end tax planning on their medical expenses can hold the key to tax saving. The medical expenses you pay for

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

Card reading is an art used properly by too few players. Frank T. Westcott, my partner in today's hand, is one of the best card readers anywhere. He was South. The bidding:

N	E	S	W
P	P	1H	2D
DbL	P	2S	3D
P	P	3S	End

An explanation of the bidding is necessary here for it is by no means normal. North's double after the 2 Diamond bid is the "Negative Double" which is not for penalties as it would seem to be but rather paints a very clear picture of his hand. It says, in so many words, "Partner, I have little support for your suit and am not particularly strong in the over-caller's. I am really not quite strong enough to bid freely at the 2 level but I do have a fair hand of between 8 and 11 points with the other 2 suits." After that bid, with such an accurate description, the partner is supposed to set the final contract.

South now disregarded his 6 card Heart suit and bid 2 Spades, knowing full well he would find partner with that suit. The 2Spade bid showed a minimum for had he been stronger he would have bid 3 or 4. His next bid of 3 Spades after West had rebid his Diamonds was just to compete as he felt the opponents could probably make 3 Diamonds and he was willing to go down 1 if necessary.

After West had led the Ace and another Heart South now paused to figure his best way to play the hand. He had already lost a Heart, had 2 possible losers in both Spades and Clubs. What could he do about it? After playing the Diamond Ace he could discard a Club on the King if he could get back over to the dummy and here is where the card reading came in. By West's lead South was quite certain West had no more Hearts and by leading a Heart he had a sure entry no matter what West did.

All South had to do was trump his Heart and take his discard. He now had to lose the 2 trump tricks and 1 Club but made his contract. Many players would try to lead to the Spade Queen for the entry but that is a doubtful entry, trumping the Heart a sure one.

Today's moral: After the opening lead, stop to consider what your opponent had led from and why. Plan your attack at this time for the whole hand, not from trick to trick.

Watch Dedication Of New School In Israel

JERUSALEM — Groundbreaking ceremonies for new schools in Israel are not particularly unusual, but there was one recently in the immigrant Katamon section of Jerusalem that was a bit special.

It was for the dedication of a million-dollar comprehensive high school and cultural complex paid for by Americans and honoring the Danish people for saving their Jewish community from the Nazis in 1943.

A scroll recalling the "courage of the people of Denmark," who rowed almost all of the nation's 800 Jews to neutral Sweden under cover of darkness, was sealed in cement as a cornerstone for the planned hilltop structure.

Ten American donors, seven of whom were present, contributed the funds for the structure, a project of the Israel Education Fund of the United Jewish Appeal.

The purpose of the fund is to assist in the absorption of Jewish immigrants from North African and Asian nations.

Today's ceremony, witnessed by a few hundred of the Moroccans, Iraqis and other "orientals" whose children will be using the school, represented something of a new chapter for the fund-raising activities of the United Jewish Appeal.

As speaker after speaker pointed out, the immigrants brought to Israel by the U.J.A. and other agencies now need to be absorbed. The threat of two Israels — one of European and the other of non-European origin — is one of the Government's principal concerns.

The U.J.A. has been taking a "study mission" through Israel to illustrate the problems. The mission consists of 250 of the largest American contributors to Jewish appeals. Seventy per cent had never been to Israel.

The scope of the educational challenge was illustrated earlier in the day to a group of about 20 Americans who were taken through Bet Shemesh.

They learned, for example, that their own tradition of learning was lacking in the Jewish communities of North Africa. A Moroccan family tends to keep its daughters at home or sends its sons to work.

One American woman, who was being told of the opportunities for vocational training in the town of 15,000, asked bluntly: "Why aren't these children in school?"

The guide said it was the day after the Succoth holiday and the children tagging along might be taking an extra day.

French Nobel Prize Winner Is Jewish

PARIS — Prof. Francois Jacob, one of the three Frenchmen awarded the Nobel Prize in medicine, confirmed here that he is a Jew and that one of his brothers is a prominent member of the Jewish Consistory in their home city of Nancy. The second of the three new French laureates is the son of a Jew who, while he was converted to Christianity as a child, takes pride in his Jewish past. All three prize winners acknowledged that their respective assistants are Jews.

Prof. Jacob was born in Nancy, fought with Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Free French forces during World War II, suffered 90 percent disability during the war, and was decorated later with the French Legion of Honor and with four army citations for bravery in action.

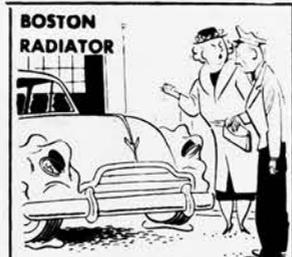

The second of the three scientists, Prof. Andre Lwoff, speaks of his father's "Jewish past," pointing out that his parent, a practicing French physician, was baptized in Russia while he was still a child. The three assistants to the laureates, all Jews, are Dr. F. Gros, Dr. E. Wollmann and Dr. M. Cohen.

assisted in its forward drive with our help."

"I can't say no," says Mrs. Irving, and when one looks at the list of organizations for which she has worked (and she doesn't believe in belonging to an organization unless she is going to work for it) it is obvious that she can't say no. The miracle is how she finds time for all she does. "I get a great deal of joy . . . of inner satisfaction," from the work, she remarks.

Over the years, first with her husband, and later with her niece, Mrs. Irving has traveled around the world three times, and has been practically everywhere there is to visit throughout the world . . .

But for five years now she has not had the time to do any traveling. "I ache to get on a boat . . . I'm just waiting."

Among the many organizations to which she belongs are the President's Council of Brandeis; Women's Communal Service of the CJFWF; Joint Distribution Committee; National Appeal Finance Cabinet of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith of which Dore Schary is national chairman; Women's Division Board of the UJA; Brown University Development Council; past president of the Women's Division of the GJC; President's Advisory Council of the Miriam Hospital; Bureau of Jewish Education, etc.

But with a smile and with a great deal of energy, Mal Irving continues on with her work . . . If she ever stopped working, she would undoubtedly never know what to do with herself. And because of Mrs. Irving's constant efforts, many people have gained, but perhaps she has gained most through the "inner satisfaction" which she feels when she helps others.

Running Away From Home No Answer

are responsible for you. This is the way things happen to be—and the way things should be.

If you find some nearby state where you can marry without your parents consent, you will make a very serious mistake if you carry through with such a plan. It is a mistake that you will probably regret for the rest of your life. You need your family, and they need you. This will remain true even after you reach "legal" age and begin to make a life of your own. Wherever you go, whatever you do, there should always be a place in your life — and your heart — for your parents. You may not realize it at the moment, but it is a simple fact of life that your parents will come to mean more to you, and you will come to understand them more and more as years go by.

OUR REPLY: In Kentucky, consent of parents is required for marriage until the age of 21. This writer has no knowledge of what the requirements are in other states.

Running off to get married, or just running off, is no way to solve any problem. You are responsible to your parents; they

Soviet Artist Creates Album About Auschwitz

LONDON — A Soviet Jewish artist, Zinoviy Tolkachev, has published an album of lithographs called "Auschwitz" depicting the horror of that concentration camp, according to information reaching here today from Moscow. The introduction to the book, by a Soviet poet, Leonid Pervomanski, called the prints "evidence for the prosecution."

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glezor

HOLLYWOOD — In a Las Vegas hotel lounge, RCA Victor's recording artist Si Zentner stands on stage for 35 minutes while other acts perform. "The trick," said the popular orchestra leader, "is not to stand around with hands dangling but to keep moving like an Avis-Rent-a-Car, constantly doing something." That's Si Zentner, always swinging for motivation.

When Mel Torme finished his vocals, Zentner leaned over and whispered the supreme compliment for any singer. "He's a great musician."

The two Jewish personalities are close friends.

Torme followed with a drum solo. It sounded perfect, great. Asked, "Professionally speaking, how does Torme work at the drums?" Zentner replied, "He's one of our best. This is no hobby. He played with the major bands, you know." We confessed we didn't.

When the Velvet Frog and the Swinging Eye teamed, it proved a dream mating of the drums and trombone.

Said Zentner, "Big band drumming is a lost art. There's a big difference between playing for the big band and the trio. In a big band, the drummer is always subservient to the man sitting alongside. He holds the right to play a solo only after he has learned how to be subservient."

"First, he has to play the notes with his eyes. Next, the most important stage with a big band is to start playing with the ears." "Would you hire Torme today as your band drummer?" "Right now," replied Zentner.

"What is exactly the purpose of the big band leader?" Said Zentner, "The leader is the catalyst who gives the band individuality and concept and makes it identifiable. When radio listeners recognize a band after hearing a couple of bars, that's good."

LIBERACE'S mother, Frances Liberace, 73, sat in the lobby of the Riviera Hotel in Las Vegas. At the moment, her son stood onstage in the nearby Versailles Room entertaining the customers with his flamboyant act. One of Lee's jackets was so wild it made NBC-TV's peacock look like a plucked chicken.

Momma Liberace sat there at peace with the world. That is, all but for one complaint. "Eddie Fisher hugged me tonight," she said. "He killed my beautiful corsage."

BACK TO SI ZENTNER, he told the story about a woman who boarded a bus, dropped a dime in the box and asked in Jewish, "Emetza ret Yiddish doo?" "Does anyone speak Jewish here?" A man in the rear of the bus raised his hand and said in Jewish, "Otodu oh. Vost vlist doo?" ("I do. What do you want to know?") The woman then asked in perfect English, "What time is it?"

Si brought up the subject of oyngedepts (gedehmte flaysh, roast meat). "I learned something odd about oyngedepts," said the band-leader. "Gentiles can't make it but Negro chefs can. I've never been able to understand that."

Added Frances, Si's charming wife, "If oyngedepts aren't in your blood stream, you can take all the ingredients and forget it." For an American boy, born and raised in America, Si Zentner is a rarity. When he speaks Yiddish, many say of him, "Ehr shtinkt noch foon ship" (He still smells from the ship.) His wife calls him a "goldenah nshooma" (gold soul, not a bad bone in his body).

Si loves the story about the man who dropped into a Union Square (N.Y.) cafeteria and asked for a glass of milk with a drop. "A drop of what?" asked the counter man. "A drop of coffee" said the customer. "Just for the taste."

Torah Scrolls Sent To Israel

LEAVENWORTH, Kan. — The decline of the once-flourishing Jewish community of Leavenworth has prompted two of the few remaining Jews there to turn over three Sifrei Torah to Israeli authorities for needy synagogues in Israel.

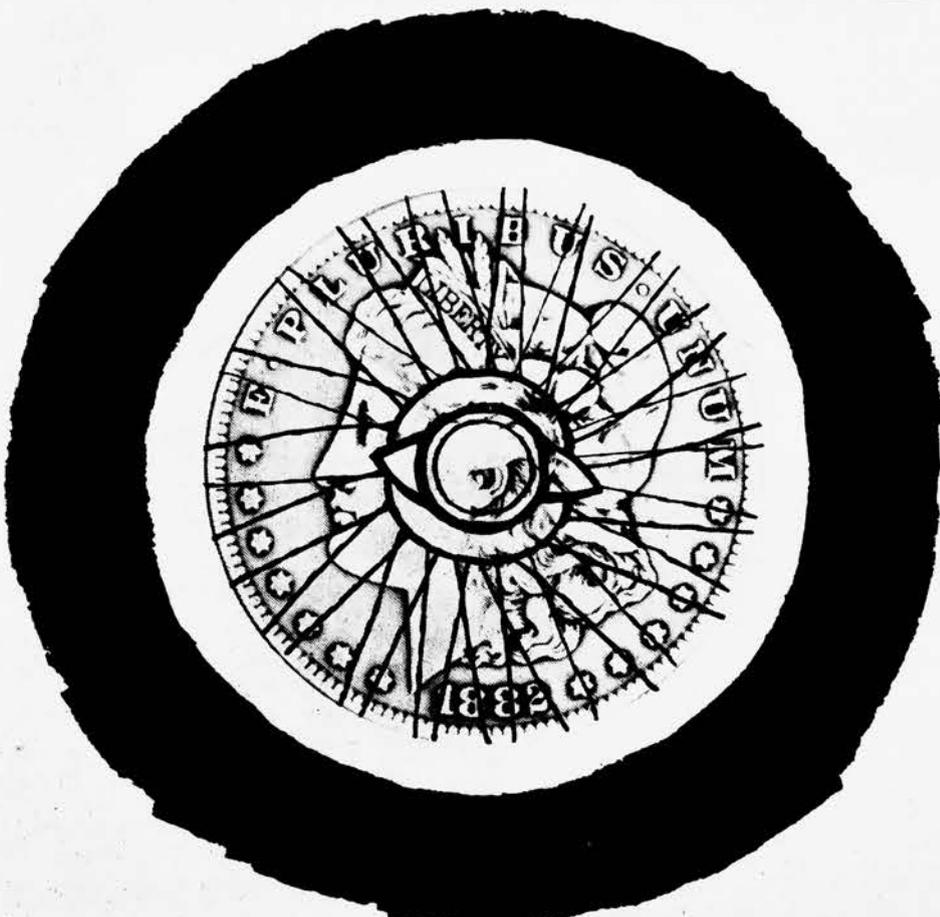

Leavenworth is the site of the first synagogue in Kansas, erected in 1864. Mount Zion Cemetery is the oldest Jewish burial ground in Kansas, containing tombstones dating back to 1857.

In recent years, the town has become one almost without Jews, most of the Jewish families having moved to other cities and few new ones settling there. The Jewish personnel at Fort Leavenworth come and go.

For this reason, Meyer Garfinkel and Joe Kram became concerned over the eventual fate of the three Torahs in the Ark of their largely-unused Leavenworth synagogue. They conferred with Rabbi Maurice D. Solomon of Kenilth Israel Synagogue in Kansas City, who suggested that the Scrolls be sent to Israel.

Israel Asks Aid, Egypt Gets Food

WASHINGTON — Israel has opened discussions with the United States on the renewal of sales to Israel involving an estimated 40 to 50 million dollars in surplus commodities.

Israel Ambassador Avraham Harman met last weekend on this topic with Orville Freeman, U. S. Secretary of Agriculture. No details have yet been specified on the categories involved.

The United States Embassy in Cairo announced this week that Egypt will definitely receive surplus food, to be distributed by American charitable agencies during the coming nine months.

Food shipments will be made by CARE — the Committee on American Relief Everywhere — and the National Catholic Welfare Conference relief services.

These shipments are not affected by a Congressional amendment to the new foreign aid bill that blocked further aid to President Nasser unless President Johnson determines it is in the national interest.

This is the first new U. S. assistance to Egypt since the three-year-old aid agreement expired last June. Cairo has asked the U. S. to provide most of the $250 million in food it needs next year.

AUTO SAFETY BELTS
 NEW YORK — Experts estimate that more than 5,000 lives would be saved each year in the United States and that injuries would be reduced by one-third if everyone used auto seat belts, says the Insurance Information Institute.

Orthodox Jews Establish Commission To Cope With College Intermarriage

NEW YORK — A special commission to cope with "the alarming proportion" of intermarriage on college campuses has been established by the Union of Orthodox Jewish Organizations of America. It was announced last week by Moses I. Feuerstein, president.

The problem, he declared, "constitutes a grave challenge to the continuity of the Jewish community and a serious menace to the very survival of traditional Judaism."

The action to establish the commission was taken by the union's national board of directors at its annual conference at 84 Fifth Avenue.

The commission, to be composed of scholars, educators, academicians and rabbis, will undertake a program of "study in depth," Mr. Feuerstein said, "to ascertain the fundamental motivations which determine why young collegiates tend to abandon traditional Judaism in the realm of marriage and other social areas."

The commission will also examine the social, psychological and religious factors "which play significant roles in shaping the behavior and outlook of young Jewish students" and will mobilize Jewish community resources "to combat the inducements to intermarriage."

In this connection, lay and spiritual Orthodox leaders will hold seminars and lectures on campuses that will deal with every phase of Jewish religious and cultural life.

Mr. Feuerstein said that "a thorough religious and Jewish education is the most effective tool in the process of halting this dangerous intermarriage phenomenon on the American university campus and elsewhere."

Mr. Feuerstein pointed to recent findings of Prof. Erich Rosenthal, a sociologist of Queens College.

Professor Rosenthal found that in Washington, D. C., with a population of more than 100,000 Jews, 17.9 per cent of offspring of American-born Jewish parents marry outside the fold of Judaism. Higher rates of intermarriage, in some cases reaching 40 per cent, were found in Iowa and Indiana.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

CHECK YOUR PRIDE AT 65 —
 IT WILL BE CHANGING SOON

When you retire you begin moving almost immediately into a life that is separated, as if by a wall, from the life you have always known. The process is a slow one, but it is very real.

In five years or so you look back over the wall and find it difficult to believe that the old life, or you — or something — has changed so much.

Arthur W. Russell, a businessman who retired three years ago, urges everybody of retirement age to learn this lesson. "Because even if you keep your physical body where it is," he says, "your mind, your interests, your spirit, move. The life and people surrounding your old job start closing the books on you. And you start closing the books on them, but the trouble is that you don't know you're doing it."

"You'll have a better retirement if you can make yourself know it."

Mr. Russell says your weaning from the old job may take two years, may take five. He concedes that a few people, usually men, are never fully weaned and hang around moping over their old job until they die.

"To tell most men and women at retirement time that in five years they will look back at their old job-life and wonder how it ever worried them, how they ever loved it, how they ever hated it — not one of them would believe you. But this is what will happen. And if only they can realize this at the time they retire they can get a head start on the blessings that lie before them."

Mr. Russell points out that he knew three men, who were retiring about the time he was, who had opportunities to move into fine retirement jobs. All turned them down. "The jobs were not quite up to status . . . and all the men had the idea that the old job-life was looking at them over the wall — and cared. Well, the old life wasn't looking. It was busy. And it didn't care, though it no doubt hoped the men were finding a happy life.

"This is ego stuff, of course," Mr. Russell continues. "And the vanity of man being what it is, a little of it is all right. But the essential point here is that the men miscalculated themselves — in a little while they wouldn't care if the old life cared. They wouldn't be looking back to see if the old life looked.

"In two years, or at most in five, they would have set up their emotions in their other world. And retirement courses they could have pursued at the time they retired — but couldn't pursue later — would now be comfortable and good. What anybody in the old life thought just wouldn't matter.

Mr. Russell believes that a proud $15,000-a-year executive, who naturally would like to pattern his retirement in the image of his old job, could be comfortable working in a brickyard at $75 a week five years later. "It's the wonderful and unending adjustment factor of the human being. People at 65 ought to have more faith in it. And pattern their future on how they'll be regarding things in 1970 instead of right now."

Walter Ulbricht Keeps Many Skeletons In His Closet

BONN — The way East Germany's highly skilled propagandists put it, Hitler was strictly a West German problem. East Germany has no embarrassing past to live down, all the blood being on West German hands.

There are, however, plenty of skeletons in Walter Ulbricht's closets, and, contrary to the claims of East German agitators, West Germany does not have a monopoly on former nazis who today play influential roles in public life.

Occasionally someone comes along to point this out and set the record straight, as occurred recently when West Berlin's Committee of Free Jurists published a list of more than 240 one-time nazis who now hold important posts in East Germany's communist hierarchy.

F-104 Starfighter from the United States to modernize her air force. The United States reportedly broke off negotiations to prevent regional escalation.

But, when Jordan considered purchasing Soviet MIG-21 supersonic jets, "unimpeachable Jordanian sources" revealed that the United States secretly agreed to underwrite the purchase of jets by Jordan from Western Europe.

Jordan is expected to contract for 24 to 28 of the ultra-modern French fighter-bombers, said the report. The total cost is about $42,000,000. The United States confirmed today supplying Jordan with tanks and other American weapons. But a spokesman said the United States had made no arrangements to "sell more modern fighters to Jordan." He added that "we have no agreement to finance French aircraft for Jordan."

To judge by the list, far from the Ulbricht regime's being as virtuous as it pretends to be, East German's proportion of nazis in public office appears to be increasing while West Germany's has dwindled to next to nothing.

There are, for example, almost twice as many ex-nazis in the East German Volkskammer (Parliament) nowadays as there were eight years ago.

The 400-member house had 29 former nazis during the 1954-1958 legislative session. Following the 1958 election the number of ex-nazis increased to 49 and now, after the 1963 election, the number is 53.

Even the central committee of Ulbricht's Socialist Unity Party (SED), which claims to be an ideological vanguard against "West German fascism," is not pure of former National Socialists.

Twelve of its 120 members held nazi party cards before they entered East German communism's most exclusive body.

The East German Government's cabinet has five ministers and deputy ministers with nazi pasts and Dr. Heinrich Homann, one of the six Vice-Chairmen of the State Council, East Germany's highest executive body, joined the nazis in 1933.

Kurt Blecha, the regime's top press spokesman, was a Nazi Party member. He joined in 1941, or to put it more accurately, as soon as he was old enough.

Dr. Guenter Kertzsch, the assistant editor-in-chief of Neues Deutschland, organ of the SED and the government, also had an NSDAP card. The paper devotes columns weekly accusing Bonn of being a haven for ex-nazis.

East German propagandists gloated gleefully when Chancellor Ludwig Erhard's chief of bodyguards was arrested on suspicion of war crimes; but Ulbricht's own chief of bodyguards, Franz Gold, a major-general in the state security service, was a dues paying member of the NSDAP, according to the Free Jurists list.

The proportion of ex-nazis in the academic community is especially high. The list begins with Prof. Werner Hartke, the long-time president of the East German Academy of Sciences who is also chancellor of East Berlin's Humboldt University. Prof. Hans Fruehauf, the academy's vice-president, was also a nazi.

The purpose in publishing the list, according to the West Berlin group, "is not to accuse the persons named for their former activities, but to pose the question whether East Germany is morally justified in setting itself up as judge of conditions in West Germany."

And judging — primarily for the propaganda mileage that it pays — is something of which East Germany had done plenty.

While they judge, agitate and propagandize, the East German leaders arrogate to themselves the legacy and mantle of "the good Germany."

While West Germany is still struggling to overcome its past, East Germany has simply rejected it, though it is, after all, a common past.

West Germany was defeated and occupied in 1945, but East Germany was "liberated."

Hitler and nazism were not, so the argument goes, German phenomena arising from a common German history, but the product of "monopolism, capitalism and imperialism" which are still rampant in West Germany today, a condition which compels the Bonn Government to follow in Hitler's footsteps.

Because these three evils were wiped out by the "glorious Soviet liberators and Comrade Ulbricht," fascism is not a factor in East Germany.

Though the logic is hardly sound, it does not have to be. As the quintessence of the East German propaganda line, it sticks.

Exposures of East Germany's skeletons will not, of course, change the Ulbricht regime's propaganda line.

But perhaps the new dossier will help set the record straight by demonstrating that there is a case of a pot at least as black as the kettle.

Washington Denies Aid Was Given

WASHINGTON — The State Department denied reports that the United States secretly agreed to help Jordan pay for a large portion of the cost of two squadrons of France Mirage-3-E fighter bombers, supersonic jets that fly at twice the speed of sound.

A report from Amman said Jordan had sought the Lockheed

Film producer Marty Ransohoff is bidding high for the movie rights to "Royal Hunt of the Sun"... Alan King, star of "The Impossible Years," will produce "Henry II," starring Robert Preston and Rosemary Harris.

One scene for CBS-News' TV Special, "National Citizenship Test," was filmed on a Sunday in Teaneck, N. J. The scene showed a pair of thugs pistol-whipping an old cobbler — played by Albert M. Oppenheimer, who was Doc in "West Side Story." A Teaneck matron watched the filmings and asked producer Av Weston: "Who's the star?" He said "Rock Hudson." The matron looked with renewed interest at the small, mustached, gray-haired character lying on the sidewalk. "Rock Hudson," she repeated. "My, what a makeup."

Study Finds Upsurge Of Orthodox Among U.S. Jews

NEW YORK — One of every six American Jews considers himself Orthodox and Orthodox Judaism today represents "the only remaining vestige of Jewish passion" in the United States, according to the lead article in the 66th annual edition of the American Jewish Year Book, published here recently.

This positive report on Orthodox Judaism, most comprehensive ever to appear in a publication in this country, contradicts earlier predictions of the demise of Orthodoxy and parallels the notable recent rise in religious feeling found in other faith groups in the U.S. It was written by Charles S. Liebman, assistant professor of Political Science at Yeshiva University.

Referring to the upsurge of Orthodoxy, the article states: "Its inner core is growing in numbers and financial strength. It is experiencing a greater sense of confidence and purpose." The article does add, though: "But its ultimate direction and form are still undetermined."

The current edition of the Year Book is a 652-page compendium of events and trends in American and world Jewish population data, civil rights and political issues, communal affairs, adult education and Jewish affairs throughout the world.

Prepared by the American Jewish Committee, the Year Book is published jointly by the Committee and the Jewish Publication Society of America. The Year Book editors are Morris Fine and Milton Himmelfarb.

Acknowledging that his figures on Orthodox Judaism are estimates, Professor Liebman concludes that a total of 205,640 men are affiliated with the 1,603 Orthodox synagogues in the U.S. and that as many as a third of the Jews who consider themselves Orthodox are not affiliated with any congregation.

He gives no figures on the total numbers in Orthodox families although he cites a 3.3 figure for all Jewish families and adds that Reform Jewish families are estimated at 3.5 individuals and Conservative Jewish families at 4.5 individuals. The total Jewish population of the U.S. is currently estimated at 5,660,000. Since Orthodox families traditionally are larger than those of other segments of Judaism, probably as many as 1,000,000 Americans now constitute the Orthodox segment.

Another touchstone of the way in which Orthodox Judaism in America, once moribund is now growing is found in a listing of known yeshivoth providing post-high school Talmudic study. Of the 31 yeshivoth listed, Yeshiva University, founded in 1896, was the first and only such institution in existence up to 1921. The past 25 years mark the great growth of yeshivoth, with 12 founded in the '40s, 6 in the '50s and 4 thus far in the '60s.

Professor Liebman also reports a definitive tendency among Orthodoxy toward concern with the rest of the community. In this context, he cites especially the growth of Yeshiva University "as prominently identified with modern Orthodoxy." In fact, he says, "the very growth of the University bespeaks the increasing concern of Orthodoxy with problems of the non-Orthodox community, both Jewish and non-Jewish."

Professor Liebman finds that the entire Orthodox community has become more rigid in its observance of the strict Orthodox prescriptions. "Mixed dancing," he says, "once practiced among Agudath Israel youth, is a thing of the past in most committed groups. The formalistic requirements of feminine modesty, such as covering the hair, are stressed far more than ever before."

In underscoring the "passion" of Orthodoxy, Professor Liebman asserts that the Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry, which he says is the only spontaneous youth movement concerned with Soviet Jewry, is directed by Orthodox youth, as is Yavneh, which he calls "the only other college group recently to show signs of dynamic movement and growth."

While he acknowledges that the non-Orthodox intellectual in the American Jewish world is not yet ready to embrace the tenets of Orthodoxy, Professor Liebman sees two major recent changes: 1. Old antagonisms to the world of Orthodoxy are gone from many intellectuals further removed from Orthodox life; 2. "There is a recognition and admiration for Orthodoxy as the only group which today contains within it a strength and will to live that may yet nourish all the Jewish world."

The extensive article on Orthodoxy in American Jewish Life deals with demographic aspects, the early Orthodox community, the modern Orthodox institutions and trends, its leadership, directions and tendencies.

Your Money's Worth

your 65-or-older parent are deductible in full by you without being cut down by the 3 per cent medical expense wastage rules as long as you contribute more than half of your parent's support (or claim your parent as a dependent under a multiple support agreement). To get this medical expense deduction, it isn't even necessary for your parent to qualify as your dependent by having less than $600 of taxable income.

With these basic rules in mind, here are two situations in which many of you can work out a tax saving by proper action in the next 60 days.

First, you may be contributing more than half of your 65-or-older parent's support and letting him pay his medical bills with the money you give him. This entitles him, not you, to his medical expense deduction. But he's probably in a much lower tax bracket than you, or not taxable at all, so the deduction gives him little or no tax savings whatsoever.

From now on, you should pay his medical and dental bills yourself instead of giving him the money to pay them. As long as you contribute more than half his support for the year — including the medical bills which you pay directly — you can deduct those medical payments for him as medical expenses on your own tax return, without the 3 per cent and 1 per cent wastage rules. Just by re-arranging the way you pay your parent's support and without spending one penny more, you can create tax-saving deductions to use on your own return.

Second, you already may be paying medical bills directly for your 65-or-older parent without knowing whether you will have contributed more than half of your parent's support for the full year 1965. For instance, suppose you paid $950 for an emergency operation for your 65-year-old father early in 1965. Suppose also that your father will spend a total of $1,000 of his own earnings for his living expenses in 1965. If you do nothing more about this, neither you nor your father will get one dollar of medical expense deduction for the $950 in medical bills you paid.

But if, as Leon Gold, chief tax expert of the Research Institute of America, points out, you give him just another $51 for his support before the end of 1965, you will have contributed more than half of his total support for the year ($1,001 against his $1,000) and this entitles you to deduct the $950 in medical expenses you paid for your father in 1965. "For only $51 more contributed to his father," says Gold, "the taxpayer gets the tax savings from a $950 deduction."

Ask your employer to increase the amount he withholds from your salary between now and the end of the year. The Treasury will consider this extra withheld tax as though it had been paid proportionately over the past installment periods.

This will make it possible for you to wipe out your past deficiencies retroactively.

Providence Children Learn Tearless Hebrew By Hear-Speak-Read Method In 6 Schools

How best to teach foreign languages is a problem that has exercised tempers since the Tower of Babel.

The scholar's method, with grammar and dictionary, is not the way a child should learn, according to Dr. Aaron Soviv, director of the Bureau of Jewish Education of Greater Providence. Six Bureau-affiliated schools have this fall forsaken the scholarly way, and are teaching children to hear, then to speak and finally to read Hebrew by the natural, audio-lingual method. Dr. Soviv, who developed a syllabus for teachers, meets with the teachers monthly and visits their classrooms frequently.

The new method involved a change in orientation for them, he said, and long hours of preparation, but after two months of this kind of teaching, all the classes are ready for reading, by the whole-word method. Hebrew, a phonetic language, lends itself more easily than English to the hear-speak-read method.

Having the children learn to speak Hebrew is not new in Providence — Mrs. Aaron Klein taught them to at Temple Emanu-El, Mrs. Fania Gross at Temple Beth Am, and Mrs. Abraham Chill at Congregation Sons of Abraham, but Dr. Soviv said it is now being done systematically in a number of schools, including also those of Temple Beth Shalom, Cranston Jewish Center and Temple Beth Israel.

This is a return to the methods used by the early pioneers of Hebrew Revival, said Dr. Soviv. The spokesmen of "Hebrew Reborn" brought this method to America, and elsewhere around the world, but here it was forsaken, partly for "American" ways geared to teaching adults to read a foreign language, and partly because the Depression closed so many schools. After the Conservative movement "splintered," it took a generation to build them up again, and by then the direct method had been forgotten.

When foreign languages were declared a critical area during the second World War, crash courses were devised to teach other tongues rapidly and thoroughly. With new psychological and anthropological insights, new knowledge of the makeup of language and of the way it is learned, methods were developed similar to those used by the Hebrew Revival Movement more than half a century earlier.

Now, in American elementary schools, children are beginning to learn foreign languages. The mimicry-memorization method involves listening, group responses led by the teacher, and finally, individual responses as the children feel ready to make them. No pressure is used on the children, who build up a mass of passive vocabulary during the listening period. Within a period of months, rather than years, they are ready to use this passive vocabulary.

Behind the change was the idea that children cannot read with comprehension a language they do not speak. If Hebrew is 'part and parcel of the 'essence' of Judaism and not merely a 'vehicle' for sublime religious ideas," as Dr. Soviv believes, then an effective program of Hebrew studies must start with listening comprehension. This is followed by speaking ability and then come reading and writing. Reading is postponed until a certain level of familiarity with spoken Hebrew has been acquired.

"It is very tiresome for the teachers," said Dr. Soviv, formerly educational consultant for the Jewish Education Association of Essex County, N. J. In Essex County children taught by the audio-lingual method not only conversed readily in Hebrew but understood and could discuss the classic Hebrew texts.

Such understanding of Hebrew is vital to sufficient knowledge of the scriptures of Judaism, he indicated, and lack of this Hebrew-studies background may be traced in those college students whose Jewish identification becomes, when they become "really educated," so faint as to fade often into nonexistence.

In an amusing interchange between exponents of the traditional method of teaching Hebrew and the newer method, Dr. Soviv and Rabbi Benjamin H. Englander of Temple B'nai Israel, Irvington, N.J., battled it out in "Women's League Outlook." The rabbi argued that only in a large well-equipped school, with the best-trained teachers and an "extremely competent educator" as director, can Hebrew be taught, as Dr. Soviv advocates, "without tears."

In a rebuttal, "Can Tears Stimulate Learning?", the Bureau director pointed out that small as well as large schools have been successful in developing a good program using the audio-lingual method. "The problem is not the size of the school but the conviction and professional know-how of the people responsible for its program," he wrote. He added that it is doubtful if a school program concerned mainly with teaching "reading that is practically meaningless to the child" is the best instrument for acquiring meaningful Jewish attitudes and values.

In an illuminating pamphlet written as a teacher's guide to the first-year textbook, Dr. Soviv writes: "Usually the child's experience with Hebrew during the first year determines his future success or failure as a Hebrew student. If he learned Hebrew properly during this initial stage of exposure to the new language, he has a chance to be able to learn adequately on the level of the second and the following grades. However, if . . . he did not master the material of the first year, he is incapable of acquiring the higher learnings of the second year, even if he wants it. During all the future years of school attendance . . . this student is doomed to failure. Hebrew, and later every subject connected with a Hebrew text, like Siddur and Humash, will become a drudgery to him . . . Some will even carry over their ill-feeling towards Hebrew into their adult years, and develop a philosophy of Jewish life marked by hostility to Hebrew and Jewishness."

If the converse is also true, Rhode Island may expect a coming generation of Hebrew-oriented men and women, with boundless enthusiasm for the Jewish way of life.

Asks U.S., USSR Aid For Peace In Israel

NEW YORK — Cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union in the United Nations to bring about peace and disarmament in the Middle East was urged here by Jacques Torczyner, president of the Zionist Organization of America.

Taking note of the observance of the 20th anniversary of the United Nations, Torczyner said that the observance of this momentous occasion "has been marred by the overwhelming defeat a few days ago of an amendment submitted by the United States and Brazil specifically condemning anti-Semitism as part of a draft U. N. Convention on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination."

ALIYAH REPRESENTATIVE — Moshe Shadmi, representative of Israel Aliyah Center, Inc., will visit Providence on Wednesday, Nov. 10, to discuss opportunities in Israel with prospective immigrants. Those interested in learning about professional and non-professional employment opportunities, housing, Upan, economic prospects or retirement in Israel may telephone Mr. Shadmi, 421-4111, for an appointment.

ROWDYISM COSTLY HAIFA — Folk Henreis, 23, a West German sailor, who shouted "Hell Hitler" and sang a Nazi marching song here recently, was fined $666 by a magistrate's court. He pleaded guilty to charges of disturbing the peace. Three other West German seamen, who admitted joining with Henreis in his song, but who denied they also shouted "Hell Hitler," were fined $66 each.

Key Issues Face Leaders At General Assembly

MONTREAL — Dr. Abraham J. Heschel of the Jewish Theological Seminary, noted author, theologian and lecturer, will deliver the major address at the 34th General Assembly of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds here, November 10-14.

This was announced by Mrs. Joseph Cohen of New Orleans, CJFWF vice-president and chairman of the Program Committee.

Meeting for the first time in Montreal, more than 1,000 Jewish communal leaders — representing Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds throughout the United States and Canada — will attend next week's conference.

Dr. Heschel's speech on "Jewish Commitment and Identification" will be the fifth annual Herbert R. Abeles Memorial Address. Mr. Abeles was a former president of the Council.

At the Saturday night banquet session, Samuel Bronfman, honorary president of the Canadian Jewish Congress and the Allied Jewish Community Services of Montreal, will also address the delegates.

Dr. Heschel's major work in two volumes, "Man Is Not Alone" and "God In Search of Man," has been acclaimed for its profound and creative approach to religious philosophy. He is the author of many studies on Jewish philosophy and mysticism published in English, German, French, Hebrew, Yiddish, Spanish and Polish.

Other highlights of the banquet session will be presentation of the William J. Shroder Memorial Awards and the election and induction of the new CJFWF president. The Award honors the founder and first president of the CJFWF.

Bridgeport Temple Bombed In Second Act Of Vandalism

BRIDGEPORT, CONN. — Two Molotov cocktail bombs were tossed at the synagogue of Congregation Bikur Cholim, in the west end of Bridgeport, last week, in the second act of vandalism in a few weeks against the synagogue. On Oct. 7 the building was broken into, a swastika cut into the altar, and five holy scrolls slashed. Police were looking for an unidentified man who may have tossed the bombs.

In last week's incident, one of the two Molotov cocktails — bottles containing gasoline and a wick — was thrown through a basement window. It scorched the floor when it exploded.

A member of the congregation who was maintaining vigil in the synagogue extinguished the flames. The second bottle struck the building, but failed to explode.

"I thought behavior like that only existed under the Nazi occupation, of which I was a victim in Rumania during the war," Rabbi Alexander Schuck said sadly today.

"I even expected it during the 15 years I was the rabbi of Congregation B'nai Jehuda in Yorkville when I came to New York in 1948," he continued. "We had such incidents there. But I didn't think it could happen in a small city in Connecticut."

Rabbi Schuck said he did not know why his synagogue had been singled out. After the Oct. 7 vandalism the congregation, which has 150 members, received voluntary contributions from local Catholic and Protestant churches.

"Everybody expressed sympathy after the first incident," the rabbi said, "but I guess the community still needs a program to teach people the basic principles of democracy."

The police of Trumbull, a neighboring community, reported today that the word "Jew" had been painted on the walls of two homes in that community during the last weekend. An investigation is under way.

Weizmann Institute Governors Adopt Financial Plan

REHOVOTH, Israel — A five-year plan designed to stabilize the financial position of the Weizmann Institute of Science, now that its large-scale building and development program is on the verge of completion, was one of the main decisions adopted at the annual Board of Governors meeting just ended here.

Board Chairman Dewey D. Stone of Brockton, Mass., presided over the three-day sessions which brought together world-famed scientists, including two Nobel laureates in chemistry, and leading public figures from Israel and countries overseas.

The five-year financial program was featured in the report by Meyer W. Weisgal, chairman of the Executive Council, who said the development program begun in 1960 would be completed next year.

The Governors decided to maintain an "austerity" regime during the five-year financial consolidation period, secure an increase of income for the current operating budget, undertake a debt-funding operation and substantially increase the Endowment Fund. The Institute will proceed with the readjustment of its scientific research program to conform more with the country's development needs, without impinging upon fundamental research.

The strengthening of the structure and scope of the Graduate School and measures to streamline and implement the scientific and general business management of the Institute were among other resolutions.

In urging Board members to adopt a policy which would "build for a secure future," Mr. Weisgal set out his philosophy in regard to the Weizmann Institute in the following terms:

"Against the advice and even opposition of our most devoted friends, we set out 21 years ago to build this Institute without the necessary funds in hand. . . . Now, at this point of our development, I feel equally convinced that in order for us to advance and create conditions for the growth of the Institute on the highest scientific level, we must again be prepared to make great sacrifices. . . ."

Boston Convention For Histadrut

BOSTON — The 42nd Annual New England Israel Histadrut Conference will take place on Sunday, November 21, 1965 from 10:00 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock in the evening in the Somerset Hotel, Boston.

The Honorable Abraham Hachohen, Mayor of Safed, Israel and C. Bezalel Sherman, noted author and sociologist, will address the gathering on current topics of interest in Israel and the meaning of the Israel Histadrut to the Jewish State.

A luncheon has been arranged to take place in the same hotel between noon and 1:30 P.M. The public is invited to attend the all-day meeting and to make reservations for the lunch through the Israel Histadrut office in Boston.

Over 500 delegates from all over New England will participate in the Annual Conference.

'No Disrespect Intended' Tombstone Topplers Say

TORONTO — Two 16-year-old youths were sentenced here in a magistrate's court for overturning 103 tombstones in a Jewish cemetery after they admitted their "escape" to Magistrate James Rennick.

One, James Bootle, was sentenced to a year's definite imprisonment, plus a further indefinite term of three months. Police told the court he had a record of previous arrests. The second youth, Allan Sawin, was sentenced to six months in a reformatory. Bootle told the court the depredation had been committed when both were drunk, but that they intended "no disrespect for the Jewish people."

South African Jews Protest Political Ties

JOHANNESBURG — An appeal to all political parties to avoid dragging the Jewish community into the 1965 next general elections was issued last week by the South African Jewish Board of Deputies.

The appeal followed comment in some newspapers on the Jew in the political scene, particularly an article by Dirk Richard, editor of the pro-Government weekly "Dagbreek" who wrote that many Afrikaners were suspicious of where South African Jews stood politically and whether, if the need arose, they could be relied on to defend the country "to the last ditch."

The Board of Deputies statement deplored the revival of suspicions "which we had hoped had long since been laid to rest." The statement reaffirmed that the Jewish community "has never constituted a political entity." As to the implied slur on the loyalty of South African Jews, the Board said "as they have answered the country's call in times of need in the past, they will answer it in the future."

The Zionist Record said that Richards' comment has "evoked deep resentment in Jewish circles," calling into question their status as citizens "and their loyalty to the Republic and also basic democratic principles which South Africa has hitherto professed."

The South African Jewish Times noted that when Dr. D. P. Malan, the first Premier of the present Government, came to power, he affirmed that "Jews were full and equal citizens of South Africa," an assurance reaffirmed by J. G. Strijdom and Dr. H. F. Verwoerd when they became Premiers. The Jewish Times added that throughout South African history, including two World Wars, "there has never been any question that when there was need to defend the country, its Jewish citizens were in it
