

Painting, Travel, Reading Make Retirement Enjoyable

By Celia Zuckerberg

A person "should retire into something," says Max Alexander, and he can speak with authority. He has been retired from his 40 years of work at the Jewish Home for the Aged for almost a year now.

He prepared for his own retirement by taking courses and by planning what he would do when the time came. Although he has been painting since 1953, he took other courses shortly before he left the Home, and now has filled his new home with paintings of all kinds.

The violin, which he hadn't touched for 20 years, has also been receiving his attention lately. However, he says he must harden his fingers which are still tender after all the years of being away from the instrument.

Always interested in photography, he now takes color photographs of any scenes which he enjoys, and from the slide makes his own arrangements, and paints the scene in the comfort of his basement studio.

The home in which Mr. and Mrs. Alexander live is in the center of Cranston, close to a shopping center, but with all the space and quiet of a home in the country. Hodsell Street is off the major thoroughfare of Pontiac Avenue, but just a short way down the street, the lovely one-story home makes them feel they are away from the city.

Mrs. Alexander, who says she has always enjoyed gardening, found herself confronted, during her first year at her new home, with that enemy of the gardener —

Reform Commission Starts Campaign To Defeat Becker-Sponsored Measure

NEW YORK — American Reform Judaism's Commission on Social Action started a campaign this week to defeat a measure in Congress designed to override Supreme Court decisions against Bible-reading and prayers in public schools.

The legislation, sponsored mainly by Representative Frank J. Becker, Republican of Long Island, seeks to amend the Constitution's First Amendment, on which the court based its decision.

The court, in an 8-to-1 ruling on June 17, 1963, decided that no state or locality may require recitation of the Lord's Prayer or Bible verses in public schools, holding that government must be neutral in religious matters.

The commission will send literature to 657 member congregations with more than 1.5 million worshippers, calling for the defeat of the bill. The commission is a joint body of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and the Central Conference of American Rabbis, two major components of American Reform Judaism.

Discharge Petition
To prevent his bill from being tied up in Judiciary Committee hearings, Representative Becker has circulated a discharge petition to force the bill to the House floor. The petition has been signed by 161 Representatives of the 218 required.

The reform group in a memorandum accompanying its appeal to the congregations, asserted that Reform Judaism was committed to the "separation of church and state." It said: "We regard the Supreme Court decisions as vital contributions to religious liberty and the integrity of religion."

The memorandum was signed by Irving Jay Fain, chairman of the commission, and Marvin Braiterman, chairman of a subcommittee on church-state relations.

The congregations are urged to write to their Representatives and Senators and to Representative Emanuel Celler, Brooklyn Democrat and chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

They also asked Christian clergymen and other community leaders to take similar action.

The commission is urging rabbis to devote sermons to the subject.

The Becker legislation is opposed by the National Council of Churches of Christ, the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, the Lutheran Church in America, the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs and other religious groups.

In addition, opposition has been voiced by the National Community Relations Advisory Council, which embraces many Jewish groups, and the Synagogue Council of America.

Others nominated for office include, Benjamin F. Ruttenberg, Dr. Herman B. Marks, and Kenneth Logowitz, vice-presidents; Raymond G. Franks, treasurer, and Mrs. Robert Hochberg, secretary.

A buffet supper and reception in honor of new members will precede the business meeting and

Rabbi Hails 'Will To Live' Of American Jews

GROSSINGER, N.Y. — The view that American Jews will ultimately lose their identity as a community because of intermarriage and other factors was strongly rejected here last week by a leader of American Conservative Judaism.

Rabbi Max J. Routtenberg, vice president of the Rabbinical Assembly, said that by this sociological yardstick "we should long have disappeared from the stage of history." He spoke at the annual convention of the assembly at Grossinger's Hotel.

He told an audience of 500 Conservative rabbis that such sociological conclusions did not take into account "the force and the extent of the 'will to live' in the American Jew."

Rabbi Routtenberg, spiritual leader of Beth Shalom, Rockville Centre, N.Y., was particularly critical of an article in Look magazine, "The Vanishing American Jew." Thomas B. Morgan, the writer, quoted sociologists who cited the increasing rate of intermarriage as a strong contributing factor in a decline of the Jewish community.

Mr. Morgan reported data on intermarriage involving Jews, based on studies in Washington, San Francisco, midtown Manhattan and Iowa. Outside these findings, there are no definitive figures on intermarriage in the United States because there is no official religious census.

Intermarriage has become a paramount subject of concern among Jewish spiritual leaders. Rabbis have frequently called on colleagues not to perform such marriages.

JCC Nominating Committee Announces Slate Of Officers

The nominating committee of the Jewish Community Center has announced its proposed slate of officers which will be presented for election at the 1964 annual meeting on Wednesday, May 27.

The proposed president is Sidney Meyer, chairman of the Center's health and physical education committee for many years.

Proposed board members for the 1964-67 term are Dr. Bernard Bernstein, Dr. Joslin Berry, Rabbi Eli Bohnen, Arthur Eisenstein, Archie Finkelstein, Samuel Friedman, Merrill Hassenfeld, Larry Hopfenberg, Dr. Stanley Leobenberg, David Meyers, Thomas Pearlman, Edwin S. Soforenko and Melvin Zurier.

Mrs. Peter Bardach is a candidate for continuation to 1966 as a board member and Irwin Hamlin and Mrs. Louis Sod are board candidates to continue to 1965.

SIDNEY MEYER

The nominating committee is composed of Maurice S. Share, chairman; Peter Bardach, Bertram Bernhardt, Dr. Joslin Berry, Charles J. Fox, Sidney Meyer, David Meyers and Mrs. Max Leach.

Providence Hebrew Day School

The Ladies Association of the Providence Hebrew Day School is about to start its annual drive for donors to support its scholarship fund. We believe this is something more than a private matter between the school, its alumni, parents, and friends.

To be sure, the primary responsibility falls on the school's immediate family — those who know it best and love it as a part of their own experience. But beyond that the entire community has a stake in the project which forward looking Jews would do well to bear in mind.

Though in operation only 17 years, the school has demonstrated its ability to build wholesome character and leadership qualities. Many of its graduates have made enviable records at their high schools as all around leaders in scholarship, sports, and extra curricular activities.

Their achievements in the colleges have been even more remarkable. Among its graduates are several who have achieved distinction in graduate work in the fields of mathematics, science, and engineering. Their names are on the honor rolls and dean's lists at M.I.T., Harvard, Brown, Dartmouth, Columbia, and other Ivy League schools as well as at Yeshiva University and Stern College. They are participants and managers of their college sports teams and serve as class officers.

One graduate teaches mentally disturbed children. One attends the University of New Hampshire on a government grant in training for service at the Portsmouth Naval Base. Several are at Law Schools. One is studying at Oxford under a Churchill foundation award and will soon enter Harvard Medical School.

In these youngsters is reflected the important contribution of the Day School to the renaissance of Jewish values.

An overwhelming proportion of this new young leadership, trained at our Day School, will probably remain in the Providence area. This means that the Hebrew Day School is one of the important training grounds for those who will guide the destinies of Providence Jewry in the future. Its students have learned and practice Jewish ethics and morality. Science and knowledge without such basic values can be a horrible catastrophe: Witness Germany! If the Day School is not supported, a major renaissance in Judaism will be lost, and 25 years from now Judaism will be carried as a curse instead of a proud heritage.

To carry on the important work of the Providence Hebrew Day School the entire Jewish community must lend a hand to see that all who desire to attend the school are afforded an equal opportunity to do so to enable them to achieve that position in life which will reflect credit on the entire Jewish community.

RESISTOR HONORED

TURIN, Italy — Some of Italy's most renowned resistance fighters attended services here last week commemorating the anniversary of the death of a 19-year-old Jewish hero of the resistance, Emanuel Artom. The boy, betrayed to the nazis in 1944, was executed because of his participation in the resistance movement.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

An Evening With Professor Raphael Loewe

By Beryl Segal

Raphael Loewe is visiting Professor of Jewish Studies at Brown University. He comes from England where he is professor of Hebrew Studies at the Leo Beck College, in Cambridge. The son of a great father, Herbert Loewe, of the Rabbinic Anthology fame, and representative of Intellectual Judaism in England, Raphael Loewe grew up in an atmosphere of Jewish learning. That atmosphere he carries with him wherever he goes. Raphael Loewe cannot talk of getting up in the morning, shining his shoes, eating his breakfast, and drinking his coffee without a reference to learning, Jewish learning. He starts with Jewish learning and ends with the same subjects on his lips.

Of him it can be said:
 "Thou shalt talk of it when thou sittest in thy house, when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down and when thou risest up."

He is, by the way, the only visiting professor under the Gottesman Foundation grant at Brown, who besides his teaching and lecturing, also seeks out small groups of people and joins with them in search of Jewish knowledge.

One such a group met at the home of the Albert Schalers, he himself a scholar and she a musician of quality, with Raphael Loewe as the guest.

The evening was the kind that we all dream about but cannot always attain. It was devoid entirely of small talk, the kind of talk we resort to when we want to fill out the empty time that weighs heavy on our hands. Instead we plunged right into the meaning of the term Jew.

Someone suggested that the term Jew is misleading. Everyone is called a Jew, the religious as well as the atheistic person, the Orthodox as well as the Reform, the Conservative as well as the members of the Kibbutz in Israel where there is no Shul at all. Perhaps we ought to have another term? One for Jews who observe, and one for the Jews who are non-observant of the Jewish religious practices.

To that Raphael Loewe replied that he would suggest that we had three terms to designate a Jew. And what he said in explanation of that remark is extremely interesting. I would like to repeat it, if I may.

Judaism, according to Loewe, is the term to be applied to Jews who go to Shul, who observe the Sabbath, who are careful of the dietary laws, who want to introduce the spirit of the faith in everything they do. Of course, they believe with all their hearts and with all their might in the existence of God. They live and practice Judaism.

Jewishness, on the other hand, is applied to the Jew who is not particular about matters of religion. He does believe, and he does not believe. It does not matter anyway, does it? Oh, he is a Jew, that man will tell you. He likes Jewish foods. He enjoys a Jewish joke. He gives to charity. He contributes to Israel. He will even go to see a Jewish theater or a Jewish concert. He sends his children to Jewish camps, and he will fight tooth and nail against his children marrying out of their faith. But as for himself, coming to Temple on the High Holidays is quite enough, unless there is a ball game on the second day of Rosh Hashanah, when this takes precedence over the Temple services.

That man is a Jew. No one can deny him that. But it is a Jewishness that can be easily shelved when personal convenience, or business expediency, or professional conflict, or any other matter comes up. He certainly does not adhere to Judaism.

Judaicity, Mr. Loewe defines, as the quality of the Jewish ethical and moral teachings present in a person. That person may deny his belonging to the community of Jews. He never enters a Shul. He does not share any memories with other Jews. He is an American in America. An Englishman in England. An Australian in Australia. But he is against Apartheid in Africa, and he is a member of the Core (Congress of Racial Equality) in America, and he is a Laborite in England, and he stands for everything that is just and ethical in every land. This is where the Judaicity of that person comes to the surface, whether he knows it or not. He has the quality of a Jew.

Thus went the whole evening. Sometimes we jumped up in opposition to what Raphael Loewe had to say. Some of you may be angry at what you have just read. But it was stimulating, and we left feeling satisfied intellectually. So will you, I hope, reading about it.

And that is the best thing we can expect of any gathering.

CONSUMER SWINDLES — MIRACLE PLANTS

In coming weeks the millions of us who are gardening enthusiasts will be deluged with newspaper ads and direct mail promotions pitching fabulous new "products of scientific plant research." In light of recent, real genetic breakthroughs, the offers will sound persuasively plausible.

But if you look behind the long Latin names and the extravagant claims, you will find your purchase can be a giant disappointment. For instance:

Ad: Robinia tree: "Sensational Blooming Show Tree!!!"
 "Grows roof-high in just one single year!" . . . "Jewel-like flowers . . . jasmine like fragrance." . . . "Drenches your garden in color all four seasons of the year!"

Fact: Far from being a gardener's dream, the Robinia tree is commonly known as the Black Locust or Thorn Locust — usually a junk tree such as you've probably been weeding out. It is noted for its thorns, its often sparse growth, its susceptibility to borers and the fact that it takes five-eight years to flower (if diseases don't overtake it first).

You can pick up the "Robinia" in the woods or fence rows — if you want it. The experts call it a "weed tree."
 Ad: Ailanthus — or "Tree of Heaven."
 "Super-growing" shade tree . . . "Grows higher than a full-grown red maple tree — in one single season." . . . "Breath-taking umbrella of beauty" . . . "Most incredible shade tree on this planet" . . . "Superhardy showpiece."

Fact: This one is even worse than the "weed tree." Experts call the Ailanthus the "stink tree" because its blooms have a persistent foul odor. It is, according to horticulturists, suited best to soils where other trees won't grow. Its fast growth makes it brittle and liable to crack in winter storms. It is usually found in city alleys and railroad right-of-ways, if you want one cheap.
 Ad: Smashing Scarlet Roses!
 Now! An amazing Rose Discovery — 11,000 Giant Red Roses in one season — for just $1! . . . "After years of research, leading garden experts have finally developed this sensational variety of rose" . . . "Each flower up to five inches across!" . . . "Sweeps across walls like wildfire, actually grows in sub-freezing temperatures" . . . "Supplies strictly limited."

Fact: The rose is not new. It is the well-known climbing rose called Blaze which has been on the market for more than a decade. It does not bloom profusely in the first season and nowhere near as profusely as the ads claim in any season. Blooms are more likely to be three than five inches across. This is a "Number 2" — or second-grade quality rose. And supplies are endless, of course.
 Ad: Sure-Crop "Climbing Strawberry."
 "Baskets of lush red Super-sweet Sure-crop Strawberries from a single high climbing plant in one year." . . . "Blooms all summer long."

Fact: The ad is grossly exaggerated. This variety is a June bearer and does not climb. It does not produce "baskets of fruit" the first season. You pay a typical $2.95 for seven plants — which cost the shipper one penny apiece.

How do you check up on such "miracle" plants and avoid being stuck with a "stink tree" in place of the flood of blossoms you expected?
 (1) Deal only with established, well-known nurseries and compare the prices quoted in the reliable catalogs of reliable firms.
 (2) Beware of "miracle" plants of any sort. If the product seems too good to be true, it usually is too good to be true.
 (3) If you have any doubts, consult your county agricultural agent, botanical garden, dept. of parks or nearest Better Business Bureau. All are up-to-date on current plant frauds and have solid experience to help you spot the real from the phony thing.

The Lyons Den

Lisbon — Marc Connelly, McKeesport's gift to Broadway, is touring Portugal. He invited us up to his suite at the Avenida Palace on the second floor. "Come and see the vista. From here the people on the streets, look like enormous ants."

The clouds darkened, and on the hilltop the ancient castle of St. George, lit by the amber lights from the valley, seemed to be hanging in the sky, like an Iberian Brigadoon. "No, it will not rain tonight," said our Lisbon host, "although in Portugal we have a saying, 'April has a thousand waters. . .'" It did not rain.

From the Mundial's rooftop dining room, we could see the broad boulevards, framed by the mosaic sidewalks, and on the other side the narrow, winding lanes of Alfama, the 15th-century Moorish section. In the distance was the Tejo River, flowing down from Spain.

"We have a saying," said our host. "We share the river, but we got the better half."

The rivalry never has subsided between the two nations sharing the Iberian Peninsula, whose dictatorships — except for those of Moscow and Cook County, Ill. — are the oldest in the world. In other years a royal marriage would have solved it.

"But not now," said our host. "Another saying: 'From Spain neither a good wind nor a good marriage.'"

The exiled survivors of royal marriages have found a delightful haven Cascals, near Estoril, a half-hour from Lisbon along the local Riviera, the "Cote Soleil." Ex-King Umberto of Italy bought a home there, and so did the Count of Barcelona, the Spanish Pretender. Queen Helen of Romania lived here,

Mrs. Harman's election, unopposed and by acclamation, marked one of the rare instances in which an Israeli delegate has received the chairmanship of a United Nations body. The Arab states have traditionally voted against any Israeli nominee.

Bridge

by Revoke

Here is a good example of what happens to people when they try to trap; they trap themselves

It was rubber bridge, and my partner and I had scored so much above the line that we could not lose unless the opponents made a slam. My partner, sitting South, dealt with both sides vulnerable.

Bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	Pass	1H(!)
1S	Pass	Pass(!)	Double
2S	3H	3S	4H
Pass	Pass	4S	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

When I had to take the final decision over 4H, I looked at the score sheet. I could see that we could afford to go two down, and for amusement I bid 4S. The result was a great surprise for me, because after my partner had played two rounds of trumps he just calmly spread the hand and claimed game and rubber.

East looked foolish. Theoretically he could have passed 1S, but in practice it was impossible to do so on his holding. I suggested that he should have bid 3NT or 4H over 1S. With any picture in his partner's hand, he might well come to nine tricks at no trumps. Even if he had bid 4H over 1S, it would have been very difficult for either my partner or myself to bid 4S; neither could we have doubled 4H. But the major crime on this hand, committed by East, was the opening bid of 1H. He may have thought that there was no danger of being left in. Maybe he was hoping for a big penalty if we tried to compete. Whatever the reason, his bid misfired.

Cotton Suits Are In Style This Season

The spring suit comes into its own this year. Across the country early collections point up the suit's new fashion importance . . . and from the trend-setting West Coast, the season ushers in a suit look that's feminine, fresh, and young as springtime.

To interpret this look, California designers have chosen a number of smart new suiting-weight cottons. Texture is the keynote in these town and travel fabrics. They include cotton tweed, ribbed herringbone, twill, and other ribbed cottons in the ottoman category. Also very fashionable are open-weave cottons patterned in bold houndstooth checks or softened plaids.

Men's wear pin stripes are perhaps the newest-looking pattern in cotton suit fabrics. The pin-striped suit with white cotton pique accessories will be especially stylish this spring.

COTTON pinstripes teamed with white pique vest are the big news for spring. Here they are masterfully tailored by Ernst Strauss of California.

Yeshiva University Chef Offers Shavuuous Recipes

Shavuuous is a joyous Spring Festival on the Jewish calendar, a time of the year when many synagogues are decorated with flowers and plants as a reminder of the ancient agricultural celebrations of the Jewish people. To be observed this year on May 17 and May 18, Shavuuous commemorates the giving of the Ten Commandments to the Tribes of Israel seven weeks after the first day of Passover.

The food product traditionally associated with Shavuuous is cheese, and Jewish families look forward to the cheese mixtures and delicacies and other dairy products served during the two-day holiday.

Alfred Parker, executive chef at Yeshiva University in New York City and one of the foremost authorities on Jewish cooking, says that Shavuuous offers unlimited possibilities for the enterprising housewife and homemaker.

"There are many wonderful, tasteful dishes you can serve on

SPIES SENTENCED

TEL VAIV — Two Jewish spies in the service of Egypt were sentenced to imprisonment for espionage last week.

Shavuuous, such as cheese cake and cheese pancakes, two of my personal favorites," he observes.

Here is Mr. Parker's recipe for cheese cake:

RECIPE FOR CHEESE CAKE

- Ingredients for Crust:
- 1 cup corn flakes or graham crackers
 - 1/4 lb. of butter
 - 3 tablespoons of sugar
 - 1 teaspoon of cinnamon
 - 1 cup pineapple pie filling or cherry pie filling
- Ingredients for Cheese Mix:
- 1 teaspoon of vanilla
 - 1 lb. cream cheese
 - 1 cup of sugar
 - 6 eggs
 - 1 cup sour cream
 - 1 tablespoon flour
 - Grated skin of one lemon
 - Pinch of salt

Start to make the crust by crushing the corn flakes or the crackers into small pieces. Then mix with butter, sugar and cinnamon. Spread out on bottom spring-form. Add fruit filling on top. Mix egg yolks with sugar, cream cheese, sour cream and a pinch of salt. Then add lemon, flour and vanilla. Beat egg whites to a snow and fold in the mixture. Place the mixture on top of the food filling and bake at 350 degrees for one hour. Let it cool by opening door of stove. Twelve portions.

And now Mr. Parker's recipe for cheese pancakes:

CHEESE PANCAKES RECIPE

- 1 lb. Farmer cheese
- 2 eggs
- 2 cups Matzoh meal
- 1/2 cup of sugar
- 2 ounces diluted butter
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- Grated skin of one lemon
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup corn flakes crumbs

Grind cheese and mix with egg yolks, add butter. Then add sugar, grated lemon, vanilla and matzoh meal. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold in the mixture. Form into pancakes and roll in corn flakes. Fry in hot vegetable shortening. Serve with sour cream or food sauce. Twelve servings.

Mr. Parker puts in a 14-hour day supervising three Yeshiva University cafeterias. He estimates that he drives 300 miles a week to oversee the preparation of 10,000 kosher meals at the three cafeterias—Yeshiva College, Amsterdam Avenue and 186th Street, Manhattan; Stern College for Women, 253 Lexington Avenue, Manhattan; and the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, Eastchester Road and Morris Park Avenue, the Bronx.

He became a cook by accident. At the age of 18, he was an engineering student in his native Vienna, but was forced to flee when Austria was invaded in 1938. He went to a refugee camp in Switzerland where he helped out in the kitchens, and gradually began to cook. So well did he learn his new trade that he obtained a job in a Zurich restaurant and, from there, moved to the renowned Hotel Fachschool in Lucerne.

Mr. Parker came to the United States in 1947, and stepped into his Yeshiva University role ten years later.

JULIUS ABRAMS

At URI Games Civic And Sports-Minded Julius Abrams Is Sports Editor Of 'Dublin Herald'

One of the most rabid sports fans among the Jewish community of Rhode Island is Julius Abrams, civic and sports-minded East Greenwich businessman.

The jovial Abrams has followed athletics in the Rhode Island area for many years. He prides himself with the title of "sports editor" of the "Dublin Herald".

The "Dublin Herald" is the fictitious publication established by Tom Doherty, University of Rhode Island sports information director. Abrams joins the members of the press at all URI home basketball games, representing the "Dublin Herald".

Abrams is a charter member and past president of the URI Century Club.

Julius was a frequent performer at the Potowomut Golf Club links before suffering a crippling stroke a few years ago. He holds the distinction of being the only lefthander to win the Potowomut Club Championship and was appropriately honored at the club's 25th anniversary celebration two years ago.

Julius and his brother, Morris, who have resided in East Greenwich for several years, established the state's oldest Buick automobile agency there in 1917.

Like his brother, Morris Abrams, is also one of the community's civic and social leaders.

Semi-Retirement Results In 'Edgar' For Hirschberg

A MAN OF MYSTERY: Cornelius Hirschberg, who won mystery-writing prize, is shown at his job in New York as a salesman in jewelry shop.

NEW YORK — Cornelius Hirschberg, a 63-year-old jewelry salesman who writes on weekends in an attic, won the Edgar of the Mystery Writers of America last week for the best first mystery novel published by an American in 1963.

Mr. Hirschberg's book is "Florentine Finish," published by Harper & Row.

Eight other Edgars — nine-inch, black-and-white busts of Edgar Allan Poe — were awarded for other categories of excellence in the literary world of mysteries, crime and suspense at the writers' annual dinner at the Astor Hotel. Eric Ambler won the top prize, the novel of the year, for "The Light of Day," published by Alfred A. Knopf.

Mr. Hirschberg, who sells jewels in the Yorkmark shop at 109 West 45th Street and writes at his home at 64 Hawthorne Place, Montclair, N.J., has been scribbling away on yellow pads for the last 14 years.

He was looking over a trayful of diamonds when approached with the word that the advance release on the awards listed him as a winner. A large, calm, baldish man who measures people with amiable blue eyes, he smiled a little and said: "Well, I put myself commercially into semi-re-

WASHINGTON — King Hussein last week had his second meeting with President Johnson.

A joint communique issued by the White House after the 50-minute meeting stressed desire of the United States for "friendly relations with all Arab states."

The 29-year-old King plans to spend a few days traveling in the United States before returning to Jordan. He met with top officials of the State Department before his session with President Johnson.

The White House communique said King Hussein "put forward the views of Jordan and the Arab states on various Middle East problems and their impact on relations between the two nations."

"Cordiality, goodwill and candor marked the discussions," the communique said. "A common concern for preserving and strengthening a just peace in the area was evident throughout the talks."

"The two leaders declared their firm determination to make every effort to increase the broad area of understanding which already exists between Jordan and the United States and agreed that His Majesty's visit advanced this objective."

The communique also said that President Johnson had "expressed the intention of the Government of the United States to continue to support Jordanian efforts to attain a viable and self-sustaining economy."

retirement 14 years ago and now I win an Edgar."

Held Many Jobs

He said he had liked to write ever since his compositions were praised in a Bronx grammar school. But he went to work at 14 and continued through about 80 jobs, mostly connected with selling and managing stores. He has been in the jewelry trade for the last 25 years.

Mr. Hirschberg paused for a moment to reflect. "Do you know," he said, "publication of two books hasn't made me any happier. I sit at my desk in the attic eight hours a day weekends. You allow time for a bite and a nap when you stretch out to think things over. But Avon Books has bought the book for a soft-cover edition. If I could get one more in that class I might be able to retire from selling some day. Otherwise, it will be work until I drop."

The House on Hodsell Street

They hope to set an itinerary for themselves which will allow them to stop driving early in the day, and in this way they will be able to really see the country through which they travel. They will have the time to see any points of interest, and Mr. Alexander will be able to do some painting on the way.

He recently submitted three pictures to the Sixth Annual Rhode Island Arts Festival. One is the "View From Prospect Terrace" which is shown at the top left of this page; another is the one immediately below it, "22nd of November", which Mr. Alexander painted in a rather different fashion than he usually does; and the third is the painting of a waterfall, "Devil's Hopyard" in Connecticut.

Mr. Alexander, who originally comes from Germany and did not emigrate to the United States until 1923, is spending some of his time translating sermons delivered by German rabbis more than 100 years ago. Some of them he says speak of matters such as old age and youth as though they had been written in 1964. Basic problems of humanity seem to stay the same over the years.

crabgrass. But she has very definitely decided that she will fight to the finish — of the crabgrass, of course, and with the determination she has shown, one can be sure that by the end of this summer, there will be very little of it left on the lawn of the Alexanders. It is she who planted the bushes which beautify the front of the house.

Among the plans which they have in mind is that of traveling around the country. They have already traveled quite a bit over the years, to the south and the west; and recently they took a slow, enjoyable trip through the Pennsylvania Dutch country, and saw Niagara Falls ("It took me 35 years to get to Niagara Falls," remarks Mrs. Alexander.)

They have visited their daughters: one in Brooklyn, (Mrs.) Joan Schwartz, and their grandson and granddaughter; and the other daughter, also in New York at the present time, Louise Alexander, who is making steady progress in her ambition to become an actress.

been very active (Mrs. Alexander always worked with her husband at the Home), they have retired, not to frustration and boredom, but to an interesting, full and different life. The one thing they manage to do is to keep themselves busy with something which they enjoy doing. Everyone can take a lesson in graceful and happy retirement from the Alexanders.

"OVER AND UNDER"

The newly-formed "Over and Under" club for young, unmarried Jewish adults between the ages of 21 and 35, will hold a mixer at the Dreyfus Hotel Mirror Lounge on Sunday, from 5 to 9 P.M.

The club was organized two months ago and the mixer is the group's first social event. Lynwood E. Volpe of Providence, club president, noted that dances, splash parties, guest speakers and adult education courses are being planned for the future.

Invitations for the mixer have been sent out and all Jewish adults "over and under" are invited to attend. Guests are expected to be on hand from Hartford, Conn., and Worcester, Boston and Fall River, Mass.

Dancing and refreshments will be included.

Mr. Volpe, Barry Cohen, Norman Elman, Reeva Curran and Sydelle Cohen of Providence and Marcia Woolf of Cranston were organizers of the new club. Persons who wish to volunteer for organizational work may call Mr. Volpe, HO 1-3848 or GA 1-5034.

Summer Canteen Starts Season With Spring Fever

The Summer Canteen of the Jewish Community Center held its first reunion of this season at their dance on April 19 at the Center. "Spring Fever" was a success, and the Canteen committee is busy planning for the rest of the season.

One Negro Youth Arrested For Attack By Gang On Jewish Students In N.Y.

NEW YORK — The only boy arrested among 50 Negroes who attacked students at a Brooklyn Hebrew school last week has been sentenced to 18 months in the State Training School at Otisville, N.Y.

The man who collared him, a passing motorist who made a citizen's arrest, received three threatening phone calls at his home.

The 15-year-old had been in trouble frequently before and had been on probation since July, it was revealed in Children's Court. He was sentenced by Judge Dyer, himself a Negro.

Two rabbis and at least 15 students were injured in the fracas at the United Lubavitcher Yeshiva, 1352 Bedford Ave., in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section. It started during a lunch recess when the Negro boys and girls carrying assorted weapons descended on the schoolyard where some 150 yeshiva students were playing and began to push and hit them.

Leo Berkman, 43, a Buildings Dept. inspector of 3301 Nostrand Ave., who happened to be driving by, stopped, waded into the battle and made a citizen's arrest of the 15-year-old boy.

Detectives said most of the attackers were coming from a funeral home near the yeshiva where they had viewed the body of a Negro youth, Major Jones, 15, who was killed in a gang fight. Police said that the group apparently went for the students as a means of venting their frustration.

In court the 15-year-old denied having anything to do with the attack, but Berkman told The New York Post:

"I grabbed him; he was right in the middle of it."

Berkman said his wife received three threatening telephone calls as a result of his action. Police were notified and are keeping the house under surveillance.

Berkman said he was amused by the remark made by the school principal, Rabbi Samuel Schrage, who said Berkman "is a Gentile, a real Good Samaritan."

"I happen to be a Jew," Berkman said, "but I would have done the same thing if I'd seen colored boys attacked by whites or Christian boys attacked by Jewish boys."

SS Officers Wore Elegant Uniforms During Mass Murders At Auschwitz

FRANKFURT — SS guards at the Auschwitz concentration camp "celebrated drunken orgies to bolster their courage" for carrying out mass slaughters of inmates, a witness testified at Germany's largest war crimes trial.

"After they were roaring drunk, they slung their carbines over their shoulders and went out to finish off another batch of inmates," Mrs. Jenny Scharner, originally from Berlin, told the court trying 21 former SS guards and Auschwitz functionaries.

The petite, red-haired and green-eyed witness, who entered Auschwitz in 1942, said the SS guards "always wore elegant uniforms and white gloves at the executions."

"When they returned," she continued, "they were covered with blood and their uniforms were in a terrible state of disarray."

They looked like wild animals with their bloodshot eyes."

Mrs. Scharner recalled that defendants Perry Broad, an ex-SS corporal, and Johann Schobert, a former SS sergeant, participated in slaughters "where young SS men ran around like animals beating men, women and children to death with anything they could get their hands on."

Asked for particulars, the witness said she once saw "how the SS prepared a truck load of 50 children for the gas chambers."

"After the truck was emptied of the children — little tots between 3 and 6 — they were marched off, each carrying a little suitcase."

"Suddenly a small boy about 6 stepped out of the column, pulling his 4-year-old sister by the hand."

Kicked Girl

"They walked over to an SS man and the girl asked him something. I couldn't hear what she said, but the SS guard kicked her so hard she flew about eight feet and landed in a heap. She got up crying."

Tells of Torture

A woman juror and several women among the spectators wept. Mrs. Scharner began to sob.

After Mrs. Scharner had regained her composure, she testified that Broad had once tried to have her executed for a minor offense and that Schobert had frequently helped defendant Wilhelm Boger torture inmates on the "Boger Swing."

4 Nazis Sentenced

Brunswick, Germany — Four former officers of a Nazi extermination squad were sentenced today to prison terms of four or five years for their part in the wartime massacre of 5,200 Jews in the Pinsk region of eastern Poland.

FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS

Dating Secretly Leads To Confusion

THE WEEK'S LETTER: I have fallen in love with the boyfriend of a friend. They aren't going steady or anything like that, but they don't date anyone else—at least she doesn't. I have been out with him secretly. One time she found out about it and they broke up. He didn't mind much, but she was miserable. They finally got back together. She hates me for dating him but we are still friends. I am sure the boy likes me and is keeping it a secret. I have never told anyone I like him. We still go out secretly. When he is with her, he pretends I don't exist. He tells me it is just so she won't be suspicious. I can't take much more. I am beginning to hate my girlfriend. I would quit liking all my friends if I knew it would get this guy to forget about her. I have tried to tell him how I feel, but I can't. What can I do?"

OUR REPLY: Get your head down out of the clouds and take a real good look at the situation. This boy is "supposed to" be going steady with another girl. He isn't. She is the only one going steady. He is secretly dating you and, most likely, secretly dating other girls as well.

If he should completely break up with this other girl and begin dating you as his steady, isn't there a good possibility that he will also secretly date someone else? Would you change places with your girlfriend under existing circumstances?

If you have a teenage problem you want to discuss, or an observation to make, address your letter to FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS, COMMUNITY AND SUB-URBAN PRESS SERVICE, FRANKFORD, KY.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

Hollywood, Calif. — Famous for its long line of eccentrics who have jumped fully clothed into swim pools, Hollywood came up with the clincher — a bourbon and Scotch bath for a star's wife, all dressed up in her new and expensive evening gown.

It happened following the TV Guide Awards show at NBC-TV studios in Burbank. Winners and other nominees, press, and members of the industry had filed out of the studio where the show had been beamed live eastward and also taped for later showing in the western area. They entered the dining room where they promptly crowded around the winners.

Richard Chamberlain, loser in the favorite male performer division, and his running mate, Raymond Massey, were shaking hands with everyone for their double win — "Dr. Kildare," which had been named favorite series, and "Tyger, Tyger," their two-part segment, named best single dramatic, musical or variety program.

Inger Stevens was beaming while accepting felicitations for her victory as favorite female performer.

David Janssen, with his wife Ellie seated proudly at his side, was being besieged for his highly popular win as favorite male performer. He had also accepted the coveted silver bowl for "The Fugitive," in which he stars, named favorite new series.

I shook hands with Janssen and said, "You must feel as high as the times you soared over the pole vault bar at Fairfax High School (Los Angeles)." He replied, "Higher."

I leaned over and asked Ellie how she felt. We both knew it was a silly question but it served its purpose. The statuesque, brunette beauty, once a fashion model, said she had never felt so excited and proud during their six-year marriage.

David has as much reason to be proud of Ellie. She has a gifted flair for creating her own wardrobe, which looks as if it emanated from the Paris and Rome ateliers. Tonight, she wore a stunning black evening gown. Like creeping ivy, it had sought out and found the right places to cling.

Then, it struck. I said my goodbyes, straightened up, turned, and came face to face with a tray of mixed drinks. The tray tipped. The glasses toppled and their contents, like a miniature Niagara, came spilling down on Ellie. She was soaked from neck to toes.

Dripping and stunned, she sat in silence. Then, everyone came to life, rushing to her side with napkins. She dried herself as well as she could.

Not once did she blame anyone. She didn't raise her voice, lose her composure or complain about her embarrassment in front of so many top members of the television industry. I have never seen anyone remain so calm and gracious under such trying circumstances. She showed more concern for me and the waitress than she did for herself.

I felt awful. Now, I knew what it meant to wish the floor would open and swallow me. I shuddered when I recalled the torrent of mixed drinks pouring down on David's impeccably groomed wife and turning her beautiful gown within seconds into a wrinkled mess.

Just then, Sterling Way, manager of the Hollywood Palladium, who had catered the Awards dinner, walked over and told Ellie and David that he had witnessed the incident. Way said, "A man seated at the table behind yours arose, his elbow knocking the tray out of the waitress' hand. It happened so quickly, Barney and the waitress thought they had collided."

I started breathing again. Minutes later, David and Ellie were discussing the TV Guide Awards show with their table guests as if nothing had happened. My hat comes off to a distinguished lady.

The Lyon's Den

as well as France's Count de Paris and Austria's Otto.

One night they all sat playing in a card game, almost oblivious of the callers who curtsied and bowed. One observer described the group: "They constitute quite a poker hand: Four kings." Anna Rosenberg, now Mrs. Paul Hoffman, said of these Pretenders and deposed: "No, a royal flush."

The fishing villages along the Cote Soleil are as picturesque as the French Riviera's, and the hotels fronting the beaches are marvelously inexpensive. The most elegant is a converted chateau, the Albatross, with a private beach. It was to this place that Anthony Eden came to recuperate and write his memoirs.

Prince Rainier and Princess Grace of Monaco are making their first visit to Portugal. The Princess, looking as radiant as ever, said that her mother is here too, to accompany the Rainiers and the children on a journey to Nazare and Fatima.

Fatima, 100 miles from Lisbon, is where the shrine was built on the site described by shepherds who vowed they'd seen visions of the Virgin there. Nazare is the home of descendants of the Phoenicians who still use the same prowed boats their ancestors did. Their wives sell the day's catch at auction, the way their Phoenician ancestors did.

And the fishermen of Nazare built and use an elevator, linking the beach to the top of the cliff — as none of their ancestors ever did.

Prince Rainier entered the room and lit a cigaret. My wife boldly asked him if he'd read the U.S. Surgeon General's report on smoking. "Frankly, no. I haven't read it," he said. "Because I'm afraid if I did read it, I might want to give up smoking."

He of course was looking forward to the journey, to seeing the charm of the ancient towns of Portugal. The charm, and the stabilized prices too, will be challenged with the advent of the tourists. They'll come in increasing numbers now, with the new N.Y. — Lisbon nonstop route just granted to Alitalia.

On the flight from N.Y., incidentally, a new travel class for possible price-rating was discussed by the Alitalia officials aboard — first class meals, then sleep stretched out in a full row of economy-class seats.

We drove through Almada and Caparica, to the ferry across the Tejo and then on to Sesimbra for the fishermen's festa. The nets were drying in the sun, and each of the boats anchored in the sea had two eye-like white spots on its bow, to help it "see" the fish.

There were rowboating races, and boys racing while paddling from buckets. On the quay inside the Moorish castle the boards were set up as bars for the beer and soda drinks. A Portuguese hootenanny began by a street band improvising music with an accordion, guitar, harmonica, tambourine and wooden knockers.

This singing was different from the fado in the nightclubs here, the voice-twitching, flamenco-like laments by women enshrouded in black. This was joyous festa, sung by toothless sailors as well as prosperous merchants, united in spring celebration.

"Obrigato. Thank you for your hospitality," Marc Connelly called to them all, as our bus started off for Lisbon. "Remember, if you're ever in McKeesport. . ."

Flagship Shalom Embarks From Haifa; Navigation Co. Yields To Rabbinate

TEL AVIV — The Shalom, the Israel merchant fleet's new flagship, sailed from Haifa last Friday on her first voyage across the Atlantic.

She left port with 150 passengers for Naples and 550 for New York.

She has 1,090 berths, but officials of the Zim Israel Navigation Company said they decided against filling the ship for her first trans-Atlantic trip. They said they regarded it as a shake-down cruise. The ship is fully booked for her return voyage to Haifa next month.

The maiden sailing today inaugurated a regular service. Two smaller Israeli liners, the Zion and Israel, will continue on the New York-Haifa run.

The Shalom, a 25,338-ton ship, was built at Saint Nazaire, France. Cuisine Stirred Controversy

Her name, in Hebrew, means "peace", but she has been the center of fierce controversy over her cuisine.

Like other Israeli liners, the Shalom will serve meals in conformity with rabbinical dietary laws. Beef and fowl will have been slaughtered ritually. Certain meats and seafood, pronounced unclean in the Bible, will be banned.

Butter, milk and other dairy products will not be served with meals that include meat. Separate sets of dishes will be used for the two kinds of food.

The Shalom had been designed as the first Israeli liner that would offer passengers a choice between kosher and nonkosher foods. It was built with two kitchens.

Loss of Sanction Threatened

That plan was shelved after a long struggle during which the rabbinate threatened to withdraw its ritual supervisors and certificates from all the company's liners. Under rabbinical law it is forbidden for one Jew to serve nonkosher food to another.

Accordingly, the kitchen intended for the preparation of non-kosher meals is to be used for preparation of dairy dishes and the other only for meat dishes.

Company officials acknowledged that some irate passengers canceled bookings after the line yielded to the rabbinate.

However, the consensus was that the ship would lose fewer passengers by maintaining dietary restrictions than she would if she sailed without a kosher kitchen certified by the rabbinate.

Service Criticized at First

Another of the ship's birth-pangs has been dining room and cabin services. Newsmen who traveled on the shakedown cruise from Saint Nazaire to Haifa last month published highly critical reports. About 25 per cent of the crew has been replaced, and service on two brief cruises in the region was reported improved.

The beauty and comfort of the vessel have been highly praised. Her 10 decks house one indoor and two outdoor swimming pools, tennis court, synagogue, chapel, theater, enclosed promenades and winter garden, as well as a selection of dance floors and a gymnasium with vapor baths and other amenities. She is fully air-conditioned.

New York Rabbi To Study Effect Of Crucifixion Story

NEW YORK — Roman Catholic authorities in Milan, Italy, have invited Rabbi Henry E. Kagan of Sinal Temple, Mount Vernon, N.Y., to organize a research project on the effect the crucifixion story has had in producing anti-Semitism over the centuries. The rabbi left for Milan by plane early this week.

Two years ago Rabbi Kagan became the first full-time "preaching rabbi" to be certified as a consulting psychologist licensed to practice psychotherapy. He is the author of a book entitled "Changing the Attitude of Christian Toward Jew: A Psychological Approach through Religion," published by the Columbia University Press.

The rabbi's project has added significance, because the Ecumenical Council will take up early this fall a new schema on Christian-Jewish relations.

Rabbi Kagan will work closely with three members of the faculty at Catholic University of the Sacred Heart in Milan. They are the Rev. Giovanni Rinaldi, Professor of Semitics and Hebrew; Dr. Leonardo Ancona, director of the university's Institute of Psychology; and Dr. Gustavo Bontadini, Professor of Philosophy.

The research project was authorized by Archbishop Carlo Colombo of Milan, theological adviser to Pope Paul VI.

Last summer, Rabbi Kagan addressed the Milan meeting of the International Congress of Group Psychotherapy. In 1956, he became the first rabbi to lecture in a Roman Catholic monastery when he joined the summer faculty at St. John's Abbey in Minnesota.

BAR MITZVAH BROTHERHOOD

The annual closing service of the Temple Emanu-El Bar Mitzvah Brotherhood will be held Sunday at 7:40 A.M. in the foyer of the Temple meeting house. The program will include an address by Rabbi Joel H. Zaiman and a resume of the year's activities.

Officers of the Congregation and affiliated Temple organizations have been invited to attend. The service will be followed by a breakfast.

SIYUM CONVOCATION

A Siyum Convocation will be held on Tuesday at 8:30 P.M. at Congregation Shaare Zedek.

The speaker will be Rabbi Saul Leeman. Rabbi Hershel Solnica will be the moderator on the "Book of Jeremiah."

American-Israel Pavilion Officials Assail Propaganda

NEW YORK — Two World's Fair pavilions representing Holy Land nations gave Flushing Meadow a touch of the discord that has long disturbed the Middle East.

Officials of the American-Israel Pavilion demanded the removal of what they termed a "propaganda" mural from the pavilion of the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan. The pavilions, which are near each other, are separated by those of Guinea and Sudan.

The mural depicts a young refugee and his mother. The youth appeals to the world to help the one million Arab refugees who fled their homes in what is now Israel.

"Before you go," the mural implores, "have you a minute more to spare to hear a word on Palestine and perhaps help us right a wrong?"

Strangers Assailed
 "Ever since the birth of Christ, and later with the coming of Mohammed, Christians, Jews and Moslems believing in one God lived there in perfect harmony," the inscription continues.

Then, it says, "strangers from abroad began buying up land and stirring up the people. Today there are a million of us, wasting our lives in exile misery, waiting to go home."

"But even now, to protect their gains, illgot, as if the land was theirs and (they) had the right, they're threatening to disturb the Jordan's course, and make the desert bloom with warriors."

In a telegram to Robert Moses, president of the World's Fair, officials of the American-Israel pavilion protested:

"We are shocked and disturbed to learn that the Jordanian pavilion has used its premises at the fair to spread propaganda against Israel and its people. The use of the fair-grounds for dissemination of such propaganda runs counter to the spirit of the fair as expressed in its theme 'Peace Through Understanding,' and counter to the regulations of the fair."

"The American-Israel pavilion has concerned itself with the presentation of Israel's contributions to civilization. We request that the New York World's Fair take immediate action to correct this situation."

Mural To Remain Despite Protests

NEW YORK — The World's Fair refused this week to remove a Jordanian Pavilion mural that officials of the American-Israel Pavilion have called offensive propaganda.

Robert Moses, president of the fair, sent the complaining officials a telegram that read:

"The fair cannot censor the mural you refer to, even though it is political in nature and subject to misinterpretation. We believe no good purpose would be served by exaggerating the significance of this reference to national aims or attributing racial animus to it."

The mural shows an Arab youth and his mother appealing to the world to help the one million Arab refugees who fled their homes in what is now Israel. An inscription on the mural assails "strangers from abroad" who began "buying up land and stirring up the people."

American-Israel Pavilion officials called the mural "propaganda against Israel and its people" and said it ran counter to the spirit and regulations of the fair.

The telegram was signed by H. S. Caplin, chairman of the board of the American-Israel World's Fair Corporation; Z. Sitchin, president; Maxwell M. Rabb, a former Presidential adviser, and Nathan Strauss 3rd, board chairman of the American-Israel Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

A spokesman for the fair said last week that Mr. Moses had not received the telegram.

King Hussein of Jordan told reporters in New York that he did not consider the mural offensive.

Reform Synagogues Differ On School Establishment

NEW YORK — Sharply different opinions on whether all-day Jewish schools should be established by Reform Judaism were voiced this week at the annual assembly of the New York Federation of Reform Synagogues.

The problem arose at a symposium devoted to this issue at the Americana hotel.

Rabbi Alvan Rubin, spiritual leader of Temple Sinai, Roslyn Heights, L. I., called on American Reform Judaism to establish a network of such schools in several cities to "bring fresh energy and renewed vitality for vibrant positive Jewish community."

He recommended that the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, the representative arm of all Reform congregations in the Western Hemisphere, sponsor such a network.

Last year, a study committee of the Commission on Jewish Education, representing both the Union and Central Conferences of American Rabbis, said it had come to no conclusion on the subject. But it did not oppose any attempt to establish an all-day school "with a Liberal Jewish outlook."

Schools Opposed
Rabbi Rubin's position was strongly opposed by Alan Bennett, president of the National Association of Temple Educators, and Rabbi Paul M. Steinberg, executive dean of the New York School of the Hebrew Union College—Jewish Institute of Religion.

Dr. Steinberg contended the establishment of such day-schools "serves to seriously undermine our commitment to the integrity and quality of public education."

He said that the public school "is the one instrumentality which can guarantee the true mingling and integration of children coming from varying racial, religious, and cultural backgrounds."

Mr. Bennett held that the creation of day schools would weaken Jewish educational goals in the religious school but "more important" would undermine the democratic ideals of a public system of education.

By a narrow vote among the delegates, a resolution was passed calling on the Union of American Hebrew Congregations to study the problem. The Union, itself, has no definitive position on the establishment of all-day Jewish schools.

The strong network of all-day Jewish schools, combining both religious and secular subjects, is maintained by Orthodox Judaism. The majority of these schools are in the New York area. In recent years, the Conservative branch of Judaism has begun to establish all-day schools.

AT HECHT FUNERAL

Official Denies Balk By Israel

TEL AVIV — A high official denied this week that Israel was balking at foreign inspection of her atomic reactor on the Mediterranean coast. However, he said, Israel objected to the transfer of supervision from the United States Government to the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna.

The official, who asked not to be named, was commenting on reports from Washington that Israel was balking at international control over the atomic research assistance from the United States, which the United States urges upon countries it assists under the Atoms for Peace policy.

The 5-megawatt reactor in Israel, in operation at Nahal Shureik on the Mediterranean, was built with United States aid under the Atoms for Peace program.

Israel's objection to the international agency, the official said, stems from the agency's refusal to include Israel with Middle East countries. The official said the regional research center had been established in Cairo and Israelis would not be able to visit it.

If there is an agreement for control of all atomic reactors, the official said, Israel will join.

$3,800 IS BETTER THAN $12,000 IF RETIRED MAN PLAYS IT RIGHT

Here is a man who insists he has found a better life on a $3,800-a-year pension than he had on a $12,000-a-year job.

He says any couple can do as well if they have average intelligence, and have the spunk to move when they retire.

His name is Rowland V. Young, a big town businessman. He has settled in a college town of just over 5,000 population. He tells how and why he did it:

"I didn't need an Ouija board to tell me that my wife and I weren't going to feel comfortable on $3,800 in the $12,000 way of life we had built up," he says. "I wasn't concerned about being embarrassed or old friends passing us up—that's a lot of nonsense at 65. I was just working arithmetic. A 68 per cent cut in income simply leaves you a cripple among the people and things you have known..."

He says he and his wife decided they would move to a college town. "The reason for that was that a college town, even a small one, has a culture pretty much like a successful family has grown used to in a city. I'm speaking of conversation and manners and such, not academic culture—I never got a college degree."

"A retired man seeking a place where he'd feel comfortable—financially—on his $3,800 could go to a farm town in Mississippi, or to a coal-mining town in the depressed areas of Appalachia. But it wouldn't be his culture."

In selecting their college town the Youngs went to the pastor of their church for the names of colleges sponsored by their denomination in towns of less than 10,000 population. They figured a church college would cast a more peaceful spell over a town than a private college would, that the faculty would be less affluent, and that the religious atmosphere might be satisfying if religion became more important to them later on.

"In brief," says Mr. Young, "this is what I found with our $3,800:

"Golf at 75 cents a round on the college course, as against $250 club dues back in the city; beer instead of Bourbon when we entertain, and sometimes just soft drinks; slacks, sports shirt and any sort of jacket to go everywhere, instead of a $90 suit; a four-year-old foreign-make compact instead of a 1963 American sedan; a white frame cottage renting for $55 a month that your maid might live in back in the city, but here is much the same as the one next door where a Ph.D. Professor of History lives."

And this drastic cut in the cost of living, Mr. Young emphasizes, is among people of your own kind. "And since college faculty people come from substantial family backgrounds, they want more niceties than some small town people would, and they demand and get them—at a price they can pay."

The Youngs say they are having fewer problems on their $3,800 than they did on the $12,000. They just don't think about money any more. The insurance is paid up. They see no need to save any longer. They are covered by health insurance. They need only to keep within their $73 a week, which isn't far from what everybody around them has to do. They feel comfortable.
