Financial Support Of Extreme Right May Reach $25 Million This Year

NEW YORK — Some of the nation's "most public-spirited corporations and foundations" provide a major portion of the $14 million a year that right-wing extremist groups are spending in an "assault on democratic progress," the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith charged yesterday.

Dore Schary, the national chairman of the league, asserted that his agency's survey shows that the financial support for the radical right "may reach as high as $25 million this year."

In addition, he said, the $25 million will be increased by $1.5 million from fringe groups, which "include religious and racial bigotry in their extremist views."

Mr. Schary made his charges at a news conference at the league's headquarters at 316 Lexington Avenue.

Although there was no immediate comment from most of the major groups mentioned in the league report, the chairman of the board of the Gulf Oil Corporation was sharply critical of the survey. Other criticism was voiced by the president of Harding College and the public relations officer of the John Birch Society.

The league's findings are the result of a four-year survey by Arnold Forster, general counsel, and Benjamin R. Epstein, national director of the league. Their findings will be published by Random House on Oct. 9 as a book, "Danger on the Right."

Mr. Forster, co-author of the book, said that the radical right became a matter of concern to the league more than four years ago. The book, he said, was planned and written during the last year and was finished before Senator Barry Goldwater's nomination at the Republican National Convention.

In this connection, Mr. Schary, a playwright and producer, said that the book should not be considered an attack on the Republican party or Mr. Goldwater, but that its publication in book form before the election was a coincidence.

The report identified the radical right groups and their leaders as the John Birch Society, Robert H. W. Welch, Jr.; the Christian Anti-Communist Crusade, Dr. Frederick C. Schwarz; Christian Crusade, the Rev. Billy James Hargis; Dan Smoot Report, Dan Smoot; Church League of America, Edgar Bundy; Conservative Society of America, Mr. Bundy and Phoebe and Kent Courtney, and the Liberty Amendment Committee of the U. S.A., Willis Stone.

Mr. Schary said that the radical right was a "magnet for bigots" that rejected the "traditional tolerance and live-and-let-live tradition of our two-party system ... it tends to see history as a conspiracy of evil and faithless men."

The survey listed as heavy contributors to radical right and conservative groups such corporations as Republic Steel, United States Steel, Gulf Oil and the Humble Oil and Refining Company.

These corporations, as well as foundations, the survey said, have made large donations to the National Education Program, which operates from Harding College, Searcy, Ark. Dr. George S. Benson is president of the college and director of the National Education Program.

Mr. Schary described the education program "as the largest producer of radical right propaganda in the country."

Contributions Cited
Mr. Schary said that "often the members and sometimes even the heads of these companies are not aware of the way to which their contributions are being used."

Gifts to right-wing groups, Mr. Schary said, are sometimes lumped with grants to schools, colleges, churches and other recipients "whose work is entirely free of any political connotation."

Through a five-year period up to 1963, the survey said, Republic Steel contributed $140,000 to Dr. Benson's "educational and propaganda activities" United (Continued on page 2)

Jewish Youth Attacked On Yom Kippur In N.Y.

NEW YORK — Two Brooklyn youths face a Felony Court hearing Oct. 9 on charges stemming from two incidents following Yom Kippur services at the Flatbush Park Jewish Center.

The first incident occurred as worshippers were leaving the center. A passing car veered toward the crowd and a voice from the car shouted an anti-Semitic phrase.

A few minutes later a car pulled alongside four youths walking home from the services. Two young men leaped out shouting insults. One began wielding an iron pipe against Ross Schwartz, 17, of 1545 E. 57th Street as the other pretended to have a gun in his pocket and kept Schwartz' companions at a distance.

IN BETWEEN PHONE CALLS, Donald H. Schoenbaum explains that he is devoting most of his time to the subscription drive. See Page 10 for story.

Jewish Support Of Johnson Expected To Be Overwhelming

NEW YORK — A few weeks ago, during the Democratic National Convention, President Johnson showed a group of reporters a poll that stated he could expect the support of 97 per cent of Jewish voters.

This week the director of a major Jewish agency leaned back in his chair and pondered that figure. "It sounds a little extravagant," he said. "I don't think he'll get much more than 95."

The man's observation was not meant as a joke — at least not for the East, where almost 80 per cent of the nation's 5.5 million Jews live. A sampling of opinion in the metropolitan area reveals near unanimity on the election less than two months away.

A Jackson Heights rabbi: "I haven't heard one person come right out and say he's for Goldwater. It's not the sort of thing you confess in public."

Conservative Pessimistic

A leader of the Conservative party, who intends to vote for the Republican nominee: "The Jewish vote? Senator Goldwater doesn't have a thing going for him."

A Jewish writer: "The Jewish radar — all unorganized, unofficial, individual — is operating full scale against Goldwater. The people around him seem to evoke European memories in Jews."

Roy M. Cohn, the lawyer, who is a registered Democrat and president of the American Jewish League Against Communism: "I like Goldwater, but I'm for Johnson. Jewish support for the President will be overwhelming."

Will Maslow, executive director of the American Jewish Congress: "It is difficult to conceive of a candidate the Republican party could have nominated who is less likely to receive votes from Jewish voters than Senator Goldwater."

Leaders Confirm Trend

Party leaders and workers, while less given to categorical statements, bear out at least the substance of the trend among Jewish voters.

William van den Heuvel, a campaign planner for the State Democratic Committee, says that "almost every indication we've seen is anti-Goldwater and pro-Johnson."

Arnold Fein, head of the Committee for Democratic Voters, the city's Reform movement, believes that the "Jewish voter views the Johnson-Humphrey ticket as moving in his direction."

Michael Scelsi, Republican state campaign manager for the national ticket, says that it is "a little early to tell yet, but there are indications that we are not going to get an appreciable increase in the normal Jewish Republican vote." The normal Jewish Republican vote in the state in Presidential elections hovers around 15 per cent.

18 Per Cent Believed for Nixon
Most observers, however, and some Republican campaign workers speaking privately, believe that it will require a miracle or a vast change in world events for the Arizona Senator to hold even half of the 18 per cent of the Jewish vote Richard Nixon is estimated to have received in the nation in 1960.

Their reasoning is that not many who voted for John F. Kennedy in 1960 are likely to switch their votes to Senator Goldwater in 1964. Even if there is some switching, mainly because of the civil rights issue, they argue, it will be more than offset by Republican defectors.

Jews make up more than 2 per cent of the population in 10 states — California, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island — and the District of Columbia.

In New York, where the figure is 15 per cent, the power of Jewish voters in elections has been recognized since the beginning of the century. In close elections in the other states, particularly when the split among Jewish voters is 85 or 90 per cent Democratic against 10 or 15 per cent Republican, it is a significant factor.

In Presidential elections Jews have voted consistently Democratic, as they have in the majority of lesser elections.

Few Apathy Worries

Jewish support of President Johnson is thus no surprise. What does surprise some is the size of the support, and its vitality. In 1960 campaign workers worried about apathy among Jewish voters before the election. There are few worries this year.

On a sunny afternoon on the lower East Side last week, among the residents and shopkeepers of the cradle of American Jewish life, and the store owners who live in more affluent suburban surroundings, a Goldwater supporter was an extremely rare figure.

Solidly for Johnson

A man who operates a bargain furniture store on Clinton Street took time out from business to say that he, his family and all the friends he had discussed the campaign with are solidly for Johnson.

"Look," a middle-aged woman said, "most of us came over from Europe — you can tell by the accent. And from what we went through with those bastards, we vote for Johnson. All of Orchard Street will vote for Johnson."

The lone Goldwater supporter among about 30 voters chosen at random was the owner of a dry-cleaning shop on Stanton Street.

Financial Support Of Right May Reach $25 Million

States Steel gave $33,000; Gulf Oil, $55,000, and Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation, $57,000.

Sharp criticism of the league's report was made by William J. Whiteford, the chairman of the board of Gulf Oil, who pointed out that his corporation annually distributed more than $1.5 million to 600 universities and colleges "for the purpose of aiding them to carry out the large and increasing costly task of preparing our young people for the future."

Mr. Whiteford said that Harding College was a fully accredited institution "operating in an area where the educational opportunities and indeed all other kinds of opportunities were deficient."

"The fact that some of the people connected with this institution," he said, "have been vociferously anti-Communist is about as relevant as is the fact that some notorious Communists have been graduated by Harvard University to which Gulf also contributes, and indeed, in larger sums than it gives to Harding."

A spokesman for United States Steel said that no comment would be made until a study of the league's report had been made. Other corporations were not available for immediate comment.

Dr. Benson stressed over the telephone that "neither Harding College nor the National Education Program is associated with extreme literature or other materials" and "avoids being associated with bigotry and racism."

The educator also said that "Harding and the National Education Program were not anti-Jewish nor anti-colored," pointing out that there were Jewish and Negro students at the college.

"We are not," he said, "partisan in politics. We do not endorse political candidates or any political party."

He said that his college and the program "stand for the principles that made America the foremost nation in the world — faith in God, the constitutional government and private ownership of property."

At his home in San Marino, Calif., John Rousselot, the public relations director for the Birch Society, declined to make detailed comment on the survey, saying that he has not had an opportunity to read the report.

However, he said, "on the basis of previous experience in listening to comments of Dore Schary and his very sophomoric approach to the problems that face our nation, it would be perfectly understandable to learn that he has not yet learned the truth about the John

He said that Senator Goldwater's stand on civil rights was more in line with his idea of liberty.

He added, however, that he did not think Senator Goldwater had a chance of winning the election. "The Democrats have too much backing — including my wife," he said.

Rightists a Factor

The radical right-wing groups who support the Senator were mentioned frequently. They are looked upon as a threat to both Jewish tradition and Jewish liberty. Some of their members have also been engaged in anti-Semitic causes.

A question that has aroused some speculation in the appeal to Jewish voters of Senator Goldwater's Jewish ancestry. His grandfather was a Jew; he is a member of the Protestant Episcopal church.

Most observers agree with this estimate. They point out that there is no feeling against the Senator through any consideration of apostasy, since he is a Christian because of intermarriage rather than conversion. Similarly, they do not feel there is likely to be any "tribal" vote for him because Jews historically have chosen the most liberal candidate, regardless of religion.

There is, however, widespread resentment at the description of Senator Goldwater as "half-Jewish," since this assumes that Jewishness is a racial rather than a cultural and religious quantity.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

A high-priority attack finally is to be launched against the most critical and relentlessly worsening shortage of nurses in U.S. history.

It will be made via the $287 million Nurse Training Act of 1964 which President Johnson has just signed. Although the act is only a minimum answer to our crucial scarcity of nurses, it will help mightily by providing:

$90 million for the rehabilitation of inadequate nursing schools across the land and for the construction of about 30 new schools between now and 1970;

$85 million for nursing student loans up to $1,000 a year apiece, to be an incentive to individuals to enter the profession and to help remove a major financial barrier; $50 million for professional nurse traineeships to increase the number of advanced and specialized nurses and teachers;

$58 million in grants to nursing schools to improve the quality of their instruction and to help meet the costs of higher enrollment.

If you have been unfortunate enough to have needed nursing care in recent months, you have first-hand knowledge of the situation. Even so, these findings of a comprehensive nurse-power study presented to Congress this year by a consulting group under the direction of Dr. Alvin C. Eurich, head of the Ford Foundation's Fund for the Advancement of Education, well may stun you.

So short are our 6,400 hospitals of professional nurses that 20 per cent of these positions are now unfilled, and just to fill the hospital openings today at least 70,000 additional professional nurses are needed.

So understaffed are our nursing care homes that one out of 10 of our 10,000 "skilled nursing care" homes, serving 350,000 patients, have no full-time professional or practical nurse, and among our 13,000 residential homes for the aged, only one in eight has a nurse.

So serious is the shortage that in many hospitals, under-qualified nursing aides are giving 80 per cent of all nursing care — against the 20 per cent of care they are qualified to give. Professional nurses are providing only 30 per cent of the hospital care — against a recommended minimum of 50 per cent. In mental hospitals the shortages of both professional nurses and nursing aides are particularly drastic.

Meanwhile, the number of nursing schools has been declining steadily. There are 1,200 teacher positions now vacant and only 10 per cent of all professional nurses today have a college degree. Meanwhile, because of the blunt fact that nurses on an average earn less than secretaries, enrollments in nursing schools are lagging far behind demand for nursing services and an estimated 500,000 trained, professional nurses are not practicing.

Yet, at the same time, more and more of us are demanding medical care in hospitals. More and more doctors, schools, public health agencies, nursing homes, etc., are seeking nurses. Increasingly, physicians — also in short supply — are delegating additional responsibilities to nurses, and rapid advances in the science of medicine require nurses to know and do much more than ever before.

As a minimum, we should have 130,000 more trained, professional nurses in addition to today's 550,000 before 1970. Eurich's group argues. As a minimum, we should be graduating 53,000 nurses each year between now and 1970 against today's 31,000. The number of trained psychiatric nurses should be more than doubled, the number serving nursing homes should be multiplied many times — only to meet minimum needs.

What is essential, says U.S. Surgeon General Luther Terry, is a nationwide crash program that would dramatically improve and expand our nation's nursing schools, sharply raise the number of qualified teachers, recruit and train tens of thousands more nurses.

This, the new law will not give us, but it also is not, in the words of Eurich, "a timid, piecemeal approach doomed to failure." We are beginning.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—Comedy writer Paul Pumper, formerly of Baltimore, anticipates the year 2026 when an Israel teacher asks her class, "Who was Nikita S. Khrushchev?" and a youngster replies, "He was a minor politician during the era of David Ben Gurion."

Meredith, who plays Tim Considine's fiancée in "My Three Sons," is engaged to Rick Berger of Kansas City. She recently visited Rick's family. No, she isn't Jewish, but isn't this getting to be par for the course more and more? And, may I add, not to detract from this young couple's love for each other, unfortunately?

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

Why We Came To America

By Beryl Segal

Why did I come to America? Why did we all come to America, those of us who came after the Second World War and on?

Some of us came to save our lives. It was as simple as that. To say that we fled from persecution is an understatement. It was a matter of life and death to some of us. If you flee you save your life; if you stay, they may knock on your door any night and take you away to a place from which few returned. You chose to flee.

Some of us came to America to have a future. I am one of them. When I remember the hopelessness and the despair that prevailed among the young people of my generation, I shudder even now. Here we were in the Tsarist army, we had fought, some of us were wounded, and we came back home alive. We had hands willing to work, and minds capable of devising things, but no one needed our hands and few cared for our minds. The towns and cities of the Ukraine were teeming with such "feligid gayer," do-nothings.

Still others came to this land because they had actively participated in an opposition movement against the powers that be. They fought for a better life and lost, so they came to America.

Then there are the latest immigrants who were saved from hunger and were taken out of the shadow of death and brought here. Their tale is too well known to need repeating.

Every one of us has a story of his own, and none of these stories is too cheerful. But none of us came to America because we wanted:

1. An eight room apartment.
2. Two cars.
3. Three telephones.
4. Travel with pay four months of the year, without paying taxes.
5. Bring home a pay check of over two hundred dollars.
6. Not pay luxury taxes.
7. Have the mail delivered on time.
8. Worship in any Synagogue, freely, other than Orthodox.

I do not have the issue of the Jerusalem Post handy to copy all the reasons Mr. Shmuel Eytan gives as to why he came from Israel to America. But these eight are quite enough.

Now no one denies the Israeli native the right to come to this country, become a professor at the age of twenty-eight, and live better, more comfortably, as Mr. Eytan does.

But consider these facts:

1. This same Shmuel'ikl was educated in Israel. Assuming that he is as brilliant as he seems, from his letter, he could find a place easily in Israel. There is a shortage of teachers, technicians, engineers, and in general of people who know how to do things in Israel. He did not have to leave his native land, as we did.

2. This same Shmuel'ikl cost the country an estimated amount of at least five thousand dollars. The amount is greater in some fields, for instance — Medicine. Did he ever consider this?

The logical thing for these Shmuel'iks is to do what they had to do and keep quiet about it. Why write letters about their "heroic" deeds in the Jerusalem Post? What are they after? Are they teasing somebody? Does their conscience bother them so that they want to justify their deeds?

Does he really want the eight room apartment, the two cars, and the three telephones? We have come across people who are very happy without all these things. And we have come across some who left all these to settle in Israel.

Does he want terribly to worship in any synagogue he wants, besides Orthodox? I hardly believe it. In the first place, you fight for something you really want. And in the second place, there are other synagogues in Israel. Shmuel Eytan knows it as well as I know it.

As for delivery of mail daily, without delay — that, we would expect a man who is a professor at the age of twenty-eight to understand better. The mail was not delivered because the postal clerks were on strike, and when they won the strike, the delivery of mail was resumed. Shouldn't the postal clerks have gone out on strike for the convenience of Shmuel? They fought for the same reason that Mr. Eytan went to America. Or, should they have come to America, too, as Shmuel Eytan did?

There are about 70 to 80 thousand Israelis in America and in Europe. They have left Israel in the sixteen years since the republic was established. On the other hand, one million and 200 thousand Jews came into the land. These statistics are according to the New York Times. The land is developing. The land is growing. The land needs every pair of hands, every ounce of brain, every spark of genius. There is no unemployment in Israel. No one, not even Shmuel Eytan, can say that he came to America because he could find no work in Israel. All the reasons he gives in his letter are pure fabrications.

I do not know Shmuel Eytan. I do not know what he teaches at the age of twenty-eight. But if he is a professor at twenty-eight, he will be a fool at seventy. What he did in writing the letter to the Jerusalem Post shows, what one letter writer calls, little character.

Character or no character, the Israelis have a right to go any place they want to, in search of what they want. But bragging about their "success" is in very poor taste, and Shmuel Eytan apparently has this poor taste in abundance, even though he is a professor in a college in Massachusetts at twenty-eight.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own. His views are not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

First Draft of Schema as Evangelical As Second - Difference Is Clarity

NEW YORK — The Rabbinical Council of America, an Orthodox group, last week made public a statement by Dr. Joseph B. Soloveitchik, outstanding American Orthodox rabbi, commenting on the revised draft of the declaration on Jews by the Catholic Church presented to the third session of the Ecumenical Council which opened its deliberations last week at Vatican City. Dr. Soloveitchik's statement, disseminated among the several hundred rabbis affiliated with the Rabbinical Council reads:

"I fail to understand the surprise and dismay with which prominent Jewish leaders who actively participated in the theological 'Dialogue' with the Catholic Church have greeted the latest draft of the Schema. The first draft of the Schema, in my opinion, was as evangelical as this one. The only difference between the two schemas is the explicitness and clarity with which the evangelical theme has been formulated now. While the first Schema contained only an oblique and indirect appeal to the Jewish community to embrace Christianity, this one addresses itself to us directly.

"Both Schemas present the typical Christological view that the historical mission of the Jews exhausted itself in the so-called Praeparatio Evangelica in paving the way for Christianity and that the Jew, after the Biblical drama was consummated in the rise of the Church, forfeited his covenantal status and his very relationship to the Biblical past because he rejected Christ. Since the Jewish leaders did not object to this premise contained in the first Schema, they should not be surprised now that the Church, in which Jewish history supposedly culminated, expects the Jew to reactivate his role as a historic being, emerge from historic anonymity and realize his destiny by ceasing to exist within the framework of a separate community.

"Those who are perturbed now should have realized before that the theological 'Dialogue' was bound to become a theological monologue on the part of the Church which is not ready to depart from her basic interpretation of Jewish history. Instead of complaining bitterly against the Church, they should say 'Nostra Maxima Culpa' — in plain Hebrew, 'Hotonui' — for rushing in where angels fear to tread. The Church is within her rights to interpret our history in her own theological — dogmatic terms. We are the ones who have transcended the bounds of historical responsibility and decency by asking for a theological document on the Jews as 'brethren' in faith. Instead of urging the Church to issue a strong declaration in sociological — human terms affirming the inalienable rights of the Jew as a human being.

"I am very little concerned over the response of the Jewish community to the evangelical appeal contained in the new draft. The Jew, tenacious and totally committed to his past, with faith in his glorious eschatology, will reject this appeal with dignity. Such approaches by the Church have been made many times in our history and the powerful Church has always failed to sway the Jew from his eternal course. What hurts me is that for the first time in our history the Church was, because of naive and equivocal statements, led to believe that in the interests of good will we are ready for some revision of our historical attitudes and

REDUCES SENTENCE

SYDNEY, Australia — The Sydney Appeals court reduced last week a 12-month sentence imposed on a member of the Australian Nazi Party to six months. Joseph Facer, 21, who was sentenced on June 26 together with three other neo-Nazis after a police raid on the party's headquarters, appealed the sentence. Police found him in illegal possession of a revolver during the raid. He said his job was to see to it that no Jews entered the headquarters.

Artists Series Schedule Announced for 1964-65

Malcolm Frager, called by the Washington Star, "One of the most fantastically gifted pianists of modern times," will begin the 1964-65 season of the Artists Series on Wednesday at Temple Beth-El.

A winner of the coveted Leventritt Award (1959) and the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium Award (1960), Mr. Frager's musical career has been punctuated with awards for excellence. In 1952 he won the Prix d'Excellence at the American Conservatory in Fontainebleau; in 1955 he carried top honors at the International Piano Competition in Geneva. He has also been awarded the Michael's Memorial Music Award in Chicago and the National Career Award of the National Society of Arts and Letters in Los Angeles.

The second concert will be performed by the Societa Corelli, a chamber orchestra, on Oct. 14. On its sixth tour of the United States, the ensemble features three soloists, Silvano Zuccarini, cellist; Mirella Zuccarini, pianist; and Aldo Reditti, violinist.

Leopold Simoneau, a tenor, and Pierrette Alarie, a coloratura soprano, will present a joint recital on Jan. 13. Mr. Simoneau has sung with the Vienna State Opera, La Scala, the Munich State Opera and others. Miss Alarie has performed with the Paris Opera and the Opera Comique. Both have toured extensively and appeared as soloists under the direction of well known conductors such as Charles Munch.

The final performance of the Artist Series will feature Leon Fleischer, pianist, and Leonard Rose, cellist, in a joint recital on March 24.

Admits Signing Poison Gas Orders At Auschwitz

FRANKFURT — Robert Mulka, one-time second in command at the Auschwitz death camp who has insisted throughout the Auschwitz war crimes trial here that he knew nothing about the Nazi program of wholesale murder of European Jews, admitted to the court that he signed orders to bring poison gas to the camp.

Mulka, one of the 22 former SS guards and other camp functionaries on trial here, admitted signing the orders to bring Cyclon-B gas to Auschwitz when he was confronted with an official form he had signed.

Presiding Judge Hans Hofmeyer showed Mulka the form ordering a five-ton truck to load up with "Material for the Resettlement of the Jews" and to bring the "material" to the camp.

Mulka, in response to a direct question, testified he knew that the phrase was a Nazi euphemism for poison gas. Previously, Mulka had also insisted that he did not know until the war ended that Auschwitz was one of the 250 camps set up in Germany and occupied countries to dispose of Jews and others considered unfit to live by the Nazis.

Since Bible times Jews have accepted the responsibility of guarding the message of Judaism and passing it on as our heritage. The education of our children in the traditions and ethics of our people is the link between our generations.

Here, in Providence, the Bureau of Jewish Education initiated and sponsored by the General Jewish Committee, is a vital service and coordinating agency for all the Jewish religious schools. A substantial part of its budget makes available grants-in-aid to schools for the purpose of improving their standards of instruction.

The money you give to GJC helps to strengthen Jewish education in our community!

Your contribution also makes possible the Jewish education of underprivileged students in Morocco, who are also fed by the Joint Distribution Committee.

Donald H. Schoenbaum Feels Regional Groups Lead To Salvation Of Theater

The institution of the regional theater has been for the past few years the aim of a great many of the actors, producers and directors of the stage and theater world. Donald H. Schoenbaum, new managing director of the repertory group at the Trinity Square Playhouse feels strongly that this movement "is the salvation of the theater as we know it in this country."

He says that the United States needs a national theater such as many countries of Europe have. Not one that is controlled or subsidized by the government, but as "various lakes throughout the country made up of independent, hopefully, self-supporting theaters."

Mr. Schoenbaum, although now wholly concerned with the business management side of the theater has been an actor in the theater for many years.

"It's not expected that the zoo pay for itself, or that the library pay for itself, or the symphony orchestra," he says, so why shouldn't a community be willing to help subsidize a regional theater until it can become self-sustaining.

Born in Yonkers, N.Y., Mr. Schoenbaum came to Providence by way of California and Omaha.

One of the many admirers of Adrian Hall, director of the Trinity Square Playhouse, he had known Mr. Hall in Omaha where he directed "Playboy of the Western World," and he was willing to come to Providence to be able to work with him again.

Originally, the theater to Mr. Schoenbaum was more of an avocation, and he started acting when he was in college. It was at the University of Southern California that he became more interested in it. It was also at the university that he met his wife, Gerre, a costume designer, and after graduation went to Omaha (where his wife's family lived) and became connected with the theater there. With Mr. and Mrs. Schoenbaum in Providence are also their three sons, Mark, 13, Andrew, 10, and Robert, 7.

Before he came to Providence, he had been in Hawaii for nine weeks on a Ford Foundation Grant investigating the feasibility of forming a regional theater there. Actually, he says, except for the regional theaters now being formed in various parts of the country (many of which, he adds, would not be in existence were it not for the Ford Foundation) there is no theater in this country, outside of New York and a few of the very large cities. There are road shows and commercial types of shows. "Children haven't had the opportunity of making theater a part of their lives. It is the one art form," continues Mr. Schoenbaum, "you can relate to more than any other art form."

What does a business manager do? According to Mr. Schoenbaum,

Financial Support

Birch Society or any segment of the organized conservative movement in this country." He went on:

"We will now expect B'nai B'rith to do an extensive, detailed study of the Communist criminal conspiracy and its internal and external threat to this country."

Dr. Benson's program, the survey said, also received support from foundations. The report listed the Sloan Foundation, with contributions of $600,000; Armco Steel Foundation, $67,500; Allen-Bradley Foundation, $60,000; the Donner Foundation (now called the Independence Foundation), $38,000; the Rosa Mary Foundation, $35,000; the Texas Educational Association, $47,250; the Stockham Foundation, $25,000; the Houston Endowment, $20,000, and assorted other foundations with a "reported total of almost $175,000 over a period of years."

Financial support for the extremist groups, the report said, comes from 70 or more foundations, almost all tax-exempt; more than 100 business concerns and corporations; some 250 individuals who have contributed at least $500 each, and "hundreds of thousands of one-to-five-dollar givers who have been frightened by the propaganda barrage and have succumbed to it."

RECEIVES AWARD

Selwyn Ackerman of Governor Francis Farms, Warwick, was awarded the Chartered Life Underwriter designation at National Conferment Exercises of the American College of Life Underwriters in Cincinnati, Ohio, on Sept. 23.

The C. L. U. designation is granted to persons in life and health insurance.

A life underwriter for the Guardian Life Insurance Company of America, Mr. Ackerman was recently elected to the Board of directors of the Life Underwriters Association of Greater Providence.

AT REHEARSAL of "Dark of the Moon" the theater like anything else has certain specialties. It needs a managing director, a man who is responsible and capable of running a theater. Besides managing the business end of the theater, he is responsible for the subscription drive (to which he is devoting practically all his time at the present moment), for the efficient operation of the box office, for the contracts with the people in the theater from Equity actors to plumbers, for the production of the show. A business manager acts as a coordinator of the show — the craftsmen, costume, people, properties — and is responsible for seeing the production efficiently mounted on the stage.

For the success of the theater to be assured, a broad base of subscribers is necessary, according to Mr. Schoenbaum. Not only is the money necessary, but a community theater must involve everyone in the community. The theater should belong to the community and in turn, be supported by the community.

The Trinity Square Playhouse season will start on Oct. 14 with "Dark of the Moon," a story by Richardson and Berney, based on the old folk song, "Barbara Allen." As the season progresses, the theater hopes to bring in some professional Equity actors into the shows, so that by the end of the season there will be a proper proportion of Equity actors and amateur and former professional actors in the theater. In this way the theater will be able to offer more professional performances, and will also be offering the opportunity to the younger actors and actresses to become members of Equity, the theatrical union.

The other plays for the season will be "Tartuffe," by Moliere, on Nov. 11; "The Caretaker," by Harold Pinter on Dec. 9, and Chekhov's "Uncle Vanya" on Jan.

6. These will be followed by Eugene O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms," a new play, and a musical comedy to be chosen from a current outstanding Broadway musical which will be presented on dates yet to be announced.

According to Mr. Schoenbaum, a great deal of work has been done on the theater itself. The seating capacity has been increased from 180 to 250. There is a new box office, and new carpeting on the stairs. With new lighting and sound equipment, the artistic quality of the theater will be improved.

Reform Judaism In Israel Grows, Seeks Recognition

TEL AVIV — The number of Progressive (Reform) congregations in Israel has doubled to eight in the last two years and the total membership has increased more than threefold to 3,000. It was stated recently by Rabbi Moshe Zager, spiritual leader of the congregations in Kfar Shmaryahu and Ramat Gan.

The other Progressive communities are in Upper Nazareth, Nahariya, and two in Haifa and in Jerusalem.

"If we had the spiritual leaders we could immediately start another six congregations, in Beersheba, Tel Aviv, Bat Yam, Rishon LeZion, Herzliya and Ramat Hasharon," said Rabbi Zager.

He believes that Progressive Judaism can fill "the spiritual vacuum which exists in that vast no-man's land between Orthodox and secularism."

The Progressive Judaism organization hopes eventually to gain the right for its officers to perform marriages, officiate at funerals and carry out conversions.

Premises Problem

The Ramat Gan congregation has not yet been able to find permanent premises.

A Ramat Gan resident who allowed the congregation to use his flat for services last year withdrew the offer after pressure from Orthodox circles.

The congregation has obtained the use of the Histadrut Club Hall for the High Holy Days.

Besides Rabbi Zager there are only three Progressive Judaism rabbis in the country.

And long before the Mets were conceived, Meany wrote books about ball-clubs. His "Magnificent Yankees" was inscribed to Dan Topping, the Yanks' owner, this way: "If you don't like this book, who will?"

On Meany's 50th birthday a party was given in his honor by his newspaper colleagues at Toots Shor's. They presented him with a gold watch... A few days later he met the district attorney of Brooklyn, proudly displayed the watch and said it was expensive. The district attorney nodded, and told him the exact cost of the watch: "We had a tip that Harry Gross, the bookie bought watches for cops on his payroll. I subpoenaed the jeweler's records and went over all the sales slips."

39 Jewish Candidates In British Election

LONDON — The final list of candidates for 630 seats in Parliament in the British general election Oct. 15, published last week, listed 39 Jewish candidates. These include 25 Labor candidates, 3 Conservative, 9 Liberal and 2 Communist. Preliminary data had previously listed a total of 29 Jewish candidates.

The 36 million British voters include an estimated 300,000 Jewish voters. Jews do not comprise a majority in any constituency, but in several they could determine the election if all voted for the same candidate, which Jews never do.

The Jewish Labor list includes Emanuel Shinwell, 80, former Minister of Defense; Sir Barnett Janner, 72, former president of the Board of Deputies of British Jews; Sydney Silverman, 71, noted parliamentarian and former chairman of the British section of the world Jewish Congress; and Maurice Edelman, 53, president of the Anglo Jewish Association.

Jewish Conservative candidates include Sir Henry David Goldsmid, 56, president of the Jewish Colonization Association, and Sir Keith Joseph, 46, present Minister of Housing.

ENGAGED — Mr. and Mrs. Newton Frank of Concord Avenue, Cranston, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Carol Sue Frank, to Alan S. Wineman, of Ann Arbor, Mich., son of Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Wineman of Detroit, Mich.

Miss Frank is a graduate of Cranston East High School, and Pembroke College in Brown University, class of 1964.

Mr. Wineman was graduated from the University of Michigan with a degree in Engineering. He received his Ph. D. in Applied Mathematics from Brown University. He is presently Assistant Professor in the Engineering Mechanics Department at the University of Michigan.

A December wedding is planned.

A CHESS BOARD, A CHUNK OF CHEESE AND A GLASS OF FINE WINE are the ingredients for a relaxing evening, according to Stanley Fishbein, young wine merchant and encyclopedic expert on the bottled "blood of the grape."

ANYONE FOR LIQUID SUNSHINE?

Experiment, Says Young Expert,
 To Learn To Enjoy Fine Wines

Stanley Fishbein is a young man who believes that wines are living things with their own beauty and grace and the flavor of the earth that grew their grapes.

Only twenty-six, Mr. Fishbein has had a pervading interest in wines and their backgrounds for more than ten years. He has read everything on the subject that he could locate and is now a walking encyclopedia on wines -- about pedias could be written.

When he speaks on his favorite subject, Mr. Fishbein does so with enthusiasm and authority. He communicates his enthusiasm to anyone who asks about wines and doesn't mind taking the time to do it thoroughly, apparently. He firmly believes that today's American families are missing out on one of nature's greatest bounties and one of the most attractive aspects of gracious living if they don't cultivate an interest in wines and their use.

One of Mr. Fishbein's favorite quotations -- source unknown -- is: "A meal without wine is like a day without sunshine." He believes in sunny days in his own daily life, not only using wines with his meals, but IN his meals, as well.

Wine has been an ingredient in just about every kind of dish that has graced the Fishbein table, from the morning's omelets to the dinner steaks, roasts, and even the lowly hamburger. Wine in gelatine desserts is a Fishbein favorite.

Another favorite with Mr. Fishbein is wine as a relaxing accompaniment to snacks. A game of chess, a chunk of cheese and a bottle of good wine are his personal substitutes for the more romantic delights of Omar Khyam. His favorite friends, incidentally, are those who share his feelings about wines.

Mrs. Fishbein shares her husband's enjoyment for wines but not necessarily for the same wines, preferring the Rhine wines to the French, her husband's favorites. The Fishbein children, Leslie, aged 3 1/2, and Richard, 9 months, have tasted wines in food at the table, but, Mr. Fishbein assures, have developed no particular tastes or favorites.

Two factors have kept many American families from enjoying the delights of fine wines, Mr. Fishbein believes. Many people hesitate to use wines because they are uncertain about which wine goes with what dish or occasion.

The second deterrent to wine use is the apparent belief that fine wines are extremely costly and that less expensive wines are not worth using for anything except cooking and achieving low-cost hangovers.

Mr. Fishbein claims that both these factors are not based upon fact. Rules about the choice of wines are few and simple, as are the rules about serving them. Any wine dealer or maitre d' worth his grapes is equipped to advise wine buyers as to the proper choice of wines and their proper service. There are also innumerable booklets available on these serving guides.

As for wine prices -- a good bottle of wine can cost as much as $170.00. These wines, however, are for the wealthy connoisseur only. There are many excellent vintages, from both American and European vineyards, for as little as $1.30 per bottle. The choice depends upon one's tastes, financial resources, and the occasion. And, incidentally, wines not good enough to drink, aren't good enough to cook with, either!

Making specific wine choices within the general categories of red, white or rose wines is a matter of personal taste, says Mr. Fishbein. He advises prospective wine fanciers to try a wine recommended by a dealer and to record their impressions of that wine's appeal to their eye, nose and palate. Upon hearing the effects, the dealer can then recommend a more satisfactory personal choice until, after a few experimental bottles, the taster discovers favorites in each category. From then on, one can sample others to his palate's content!

And, speaking of taste, Mr. Fishbein conducts regular wine tastings at his home for members of his staff. He believes that they should develop not only wine-sensitive palates, but wine-conscious enthusiasm. "You have to taste wines to talk about wines," says Mr. Fishbein.

Mr. Fishbein's personal tastes in wines are one of the most important yardsticks used in purchasing wines for his store's shelves. "I buy wines that I like personally," he states. "That way, if I don't sell them, I can always enjoy them myself." Fortunately for his customers,

His feelings about wines somehow communicate themselves easily to those who come into contact with this young wine fancier and expert. Part enthusiast and part crusader, Mr. Fishbein is the center of a pool from which ripples of the gracious art of wine enjoyment WILL be spread -- if he has anything to say about it!

N.Y. Home For Aged Blind Build Sukkah For Holidays

YONKERS — A 71-year-old Hungarian-born woman hung a red pepper to the branches of a grape arbor today, and said: "God bless our Home, and God bless America."

Mrs. Sara Schwartz, blind for 6 years, thus began decorating a Sukkah with fruits and vegetables of the season in anticipation of this week's celebration of Succoth at the Jewish Guild for the Blind's home for the aged.

Succoth is an annual festival of thanksgiving for the harvest, and a sukkah is a loosely constructed shelter symbolizing the dwellings of Jews during their crossing of the Egyptian desert in search of the Promised Land. Mrs. Schwartz is one of the 100 elderly residents of the 50-year-old guild's five-building residential complex near the Saw Mill River Parkway. She hung fruit on the sukkah without fumbling, and was joined in her joyous task by others, whose ages average 80.

Their countries of origin include the United States, Hungary, Holland, Czechoslovakia, England, Germany, Russia, Poland, Rumania, Bulgaria and Israel. English is the universal language with Yiddish second.

One of 7 Children
"I was lonely until I came here 12 years ago," Mrs. Schwartz said. "There were seven children in our family in Budapest and we all helped to decorate the sukkah in the yard of our home. We had many guests and we had wine at Succoth. The prayers here are much like the ones when I was a child. God bless the guild."

Alfred Keizer, 86, who came to New York from the Netherlands in 1895 and from New York to the home two years ago, said he told how he had celebrated Succoth with his parents and his two brothers and three sisters in Hasselt.

"We called it the Feast of Fruits and Flowers," he said. "Our prayers are more extensive here than at home."

David Kugler, who was born in Austria more than 70 years ago, told of observing the festival at a sukkah built on the open porch of his family's home at Krlow. "We nailed boards together to close the open part and we decorated the top with green stuff from the swamps," he said.

21 Plus
Miss Gussie Liebowitz, the daughter of a cantor in Zlotopol, Russia, declined with mock coyness to tell her age.

"What girl tells her age?" she demanded.

She recalled that as a child she had joined the prayers led by her father. "Then we had our meal," she said. "This went on for the eight days. I helped to decorate the sukkah, but mostly it was done by my five brothers."

Miss Liebowitz who has retained slight vision, came to the home 20 years ago. She is secretary of the resident council. "I do all my own typing of minutes and reports," she said.

Rabbi Walter Duckat of Brooklyn, who has led Sabbath and holiday services here for 33 years, will arrive Sunday at sundown, when the festival begins, he will lead the first of a series of services marking the eight-day Feast of the Tabernacles.

STUTTGART — An exhibition entitled "The Hell of Warsaw," and devoted to life in the Warsaw Ghetto, was opened here last week at the Stuttgart Polytechnic. The exhibition includes documents, photographs and other materials depicting both life in the Ghetto and the final struggle during the Ghetto Uprising in 1943. Commenting on the exhibit, the Stuttgarter Zeitung says that it should serve as "both a warning to the coming generation and a pledge that such things will never happen again."

Exports From Israel To U.S. Expected To Rise 25% Next Year To $60 Million

NEW YORK — Pincus Sapir, Israeli Minister of Finance, Commerce and Industry, forecast last week a 25 per cent rise next year in his country's exports to the United States.

This sharp rise, Mr. Sapir said in an interview, would be the result of persistent marketing efforts of recent years that are beginning to bear fruit.

The increase forecast would raise the volume of Israeli exports to this country in 1965 to nearly $60 million, compared with $47 million this year.

The main lift to Israeli sales here, the Minister said, would come from industrial goods now being produced in mounting variety and volume. Some of the products he thought would be leaders in the export expansion included fashions, textile specialties, foods, giftwares, agricultural implements and plywood.

In the American market and in the world market generally, Mr. Sapir noted, Israeli exporters have reached the point where they now have the experience and the productive resources for an all-out drive to cut the adverse balance of Israel's merchandise trade. This balance now runs two to one on the import side with imports about $800 million and exports about $400 million.

"In the exchange of trade with the United States," Mr. Sapir said, "we now buy four times as much as we sell to you. We are now determined to reduce this ratio by selling more and in the process we will ourselves be in a position to buy more from the United States, which we want to do anyway."

"Our push for sales in the American market is entirely on a business basis. There is no more room for sentiment and we don't look for it. We come here to sell as much as we can, then we can buy as much."

Mr. Sapir said he expected Israel's exports to continue substantial increases in coming years. His country, he noted, has the industrial base for strong trade expansion, with industrial output this year expected to hit $2 million.

Stores and consumers in this country, he said, are familiar by now with the quality of Israeli products so that there is increasing acceptance. Israeli producers and exporters, he added, also have learned the intricacies of promotion and packaging that are essential for success in the American market.

Common Market Ties
Concerning Israel's relations with the Common Market, Mr. Sapir observed that in this area also his country was striving to gain a better balance of trade. Israel's imports from the European area exceed compensating sales by more than 2 to 1.

The recent three-year agreement reached by Israel with the Common Market, the Minister commented, was "a small window." The agreement extends reduced tariff treatment by the Common Market to some 25 Israel industrial products and provides reduced duties on a few additional items.

"For a country like Israel which needs a lot of 'fresh air' in the way of trade, we will need a much bigger window on the Common Market, and we hope to improve the agreement in the future negotiations," he said.

Mr. Sapir, who was in New York after participating in the monetary conference in Tokyo and Israel's exhibit in the United States World Trade Fair in San Francisco, told a trade group yesterday of the steady large growth of foreign investment in Israel.

Speaking to the American Israel Chamber of Commerce at the Waldorf-Astoria, Mr. Sapir noted that the Arab boycott and blacklisting tactics had not stopped foreign companies from setting up plants in Israel.

Foreign investments last year, he said, were $110 million, more than twice the total of two years before, and still were rising. He added that there were now more than 200 American companies with investments in Israel.

FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS

Girl Is Sure, But Boy Seems Doubtful

THE WEEK'S LETTER: I have a very important problem! This boy and I have been going steady for two and one-half years. We have been discussing marriage. He broke up with me the other night because he wants to see if we really love and want each other before we go any further with our plans. I went out with the girls on three or four occasions—and had a rotten time. I can't have any fun without him. I know he is the guy I want. What can I do? How can I tell him how I feel? Should I write to him, call him, or what?

OUR REPLY: What you do should depend on the conditions under which you "broke up." Was it for a specified length of time? If so, wait until this "test period" or, whatever, is concluded before you do anything.

You have apparently made up your mind. You know how you feel about him. But, what is equally important, is how he feels about you. Love and marriage is not a one-sided proposition. A successful marriage is by necessity a give-and-take affair... and this is something that comes rather naturally when two people are in love. If you love someone, it makes you happy to make them happy.

If this boy made the decision to "break up," he may have some doubts in his mind. Give him time to do some thinking of his own. If he loves you, you'll soon know it.

In the meantime, you can learn to have fun without him. It may be an effort, but if you work at it, it can be done. Give it a good try. Concentrate on other things. Develop some new interests and hobbies. Keep busy and don't waste time day-dreaming.

If you have a teenage problem you want to discuss, or an observation to make, address your letter to FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS, COMMUNITY AND SUB-URBAN PRESS SERVICE, FRANKFORT, KY.
