Democrats Control Houses; Landslide Contests Seen

Led by Governor Philip W. Noel, the Democratic party victory created for them an unprecedented majority in the Rhode Island Assembly. Democrats now control 45 of 50 seats in the Senate and 81 of 100 seats in the house, after an especially good turn out of voters went to the polls last Tuesday.

Richard Licht won an easy decision over his Republican opponent, Arline Kiven by a more than two to one margin. Mr. Licht is a young Democratic attorney and a nephew of the former Governor, Frank Licht. He will now take over the senate seat previously owned by Senator Julius Michaelson, who gave it up to run for attorney general; which proved to be a good decision by "Julie" who won from incumbent Republican Richard Israel.

A plus for the Republicans: Senator Lila Sapinsley won a solid victory over her Democratic rival, Peter M. Scotti. Senator Sapinsley, one of two Republicans victorious in this year's election, will begin her second term representing the Providence second district.

In the Rhode Island House, Democratic candidate, Victoria Lederberg, a psychologist and teacher at Rhode Island College, easily defeated her GOP opponent, James H. Anderson, to win the seat which had been vacated by Representative Theodore F. Low, a Republican, who had held the seat since 1965. Representative Low decided not to run for reelection.

Also in Providence, Frederick Lippitt won by more than two to one over Beatrice Rosenstein, for the third district House seat.

In Cranston, Irving H. Levin was reelected by a decisive victory over Republican Elliot Travis Richmond.

Peter K. Rosedale, won reelection in Providence in District 18, because for one reason, he ran unopposed. He totaled up 2035 votes.

In Warwick, Zygmunt J. Friedmann, a Democrat from the 35th district, won by a large margin over Republican Collin P. Caron.

Some decisions are still awaiting the results of the 1,500 absentee ballots. It may be sometime next week before the final tallies are complete.

TO RECEIVE AWARD: Isaiah Segal, one of the founders of the Providence Hebrew Day School, has been named a recipient of the 1974 Amudim Award of Torah Umesorah, the National Society for Hebrew Days Schools, according to an announcement by Samuel C. Feuerstein, national president of the organization.

The Amudim Award, given each year to 18 outstanding leaders in the American Jewish community, who have shown initiative in the field of Jewish education, will be presented at the Annual Awards Dinner of Torah Umesorah, to be held on Sunday, November 17 at the New York Hilton Hotel in New York City. A graduate of the Rhode Island College of Pharmacy, Mr. Segal was a joint chairman of the education committee of the Providence Hebrew Day School and is currently a member of the board of directors of the school.

Rhode Island Represented At UN Demonstration

Two bus loads of Jewish protestors from Rhode Island joined the throngs in New York to show their displeasure with the United Nations General Assembly invitation to the Palestinian Liberation Organization to come to New York and take part in the Mid-East peace talks.

The group of about 60 adults and young people joined the 170,000 persons standing near the UN building, listening to speeches and waving banners.

The trip was coordinated by the Jewish Community Relations Council, and included students from the New England Academy of Torah, who were excused from school to attend, as well as students from other schools who received permission to be present in New York.

According to Roberta Botvin, coordinator of the JCRC, the Rhode Islanders made signs and banners and "just got out there and listened like everyone else."

There were loudspeakers attached to telephone poles which made it easier to hear the speeches from wherever the demonstrators were standing. This, Miss Botvin said, may have helped in keeping the crowd so very "peaceful and polite." There was little pushing or shoving.

Part of the work of controlling and directing the vast crowd was performed by more than 300 volunteer marshalls provided by the Jewish War Veterans and B'nai B'rith. The teamsters union also provided an especially burly contingent to control access to the speakers' platform, according to a New York Times report.

Michael J.A. Lonergan, the Police Department chief of operations, said it was one of the most orderly crowds he had ever seen at a large demonstration.

When the speeches were over, the band struck up the joyful "Am Israel Chai." (The People of Israel Live) as the crowd filed out of the plaza toward home.

NAMED DIRECTOR: Charlotte I. Penn of East Providence has been named director of the Rhode Island office of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, it has been announced by Felix A. Miranda, chairman of the board of the New England Region of the NCCJ.

Mrs. Penn, the former Charlotte I. Goldenberg, returned to Providence from New York City in 1973 to take the position of administrative assistant to Vernon J. Lisbon, former director of the agency.

Prior to leaving Providence in 1971, she spent 10 years in social service activities and human relations training as director of the youth department of the Jewish Community Center of Rhode Island.

Lack Of Space
Due to lack of space the interviews with Rabbi Joel H. Zaiman of Temple Emanu-El and Rabbi Israel Goldman, formerly of that temple, will appear in next week's Herald.
There have been columns and some other articles which have been omitted this week. They will appear in the November 15 Herald.

Largest Demonstration In City History

100,000 Protest PLO Participation In UN Middle East Peace Talks

NEW YORK: More than 100,000 people filled the streets around the United Nations Monday in one of the largest demonstrations in the city's history — to protest the invitation to the Palestine Liberation Organization to take part in the General Assembly debate on the Middle East.

The demonstrators, a generally merry group despite the seriousness of the issue, spilled over side streets and avenues and tied up East Side traffic despite the efforts of several hundred police officers.

The crowd heard Abba Eban, Israel's former Foreign Minister, declare bitterly: "The United Nations, in its present composition and mood, would refuse to support the Ten Commandments because they came out of Israel."

It also heard Senator Henry M. Jackson, Democrat of Washington, charge that the invitation to an organization "sustained only by terror...poisons the atmosphere for constructive peace negotiations."

The rally, with a speaker's platform at Dag Hammarskjold Plaza, First Avenue and 47th Street, was sponsored by the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, a coalition of 32 national groups.

On a day that Governor Wilson proclaimed as "Protest Against Terror and Injustice Day in New York State," the demonstration brought out notables of many kinds.

The speakers included Moshe Dayan, the former Israeli Defense Minister, Mayor Beame, Senator Jacob K. Javits and his Democratic opponent in the current election, former Attorney General Ramsey Clark; Roy Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Sister Rose Thering, of the National Coalition of American Nuns, for Roman Catholics, the Rev. Dr. Arnold Olson, president of the Evangelical Free Church of America, and Lane Kirkland, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor.

The demonstration was organized after the General Assembly on Oct. 14 voted 105 to 4 — the United States, Israel, Bolivia and Dominican Republic opposed — with 20 abstentions to ask the Arab group to take part in a plenary session debate, now scheduled to start Nov. 13. It was the first such invitation by the United Nations to a nongovernmental body.

The demonstrators' views were depicted in hundreds of signs — "PLO Is Murder International" and "U.N. Surrenders to Murderers." Across the speakers' stand they read: "Humanity Against Arab Terror" and "Israel Yes, P.L.O. No."

It was a well-behaved crowd, applauding approvingly when speakers condemned the Palestine Arab group, an umbrella organization of Palestinian guerrilla groups. After the speech-making, someone in the throng in the plaza set afire two United Nations flags with P.L.O. labels. Others at the rally formed a circle and danced a hora.

Loss To Hope Of Peace

The seventh Arab summit meeting, which ended in Rabat last week, left Yasser Arafat, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), the victor in his six-year-long conflict with Jordan's King Hussein.

The five point decision taken at the close of the summit acknowledged Arafat as the "absolute" representative of the "Palestinian people" and claimant to the West Bank. The fourth point, however, did call on the PLO to coordinate its relations with Jordan, as well as with Syria and Egypt, within a framework still to be defined. But it indicated clearly that Hussein had been replaced in the Middle East political arena, though not necessarily on the ground, by the PLO.

The PLO challenges the very existence of the State of Israel and in Rabat's insistence on the PLO's status, there is confirmation of Arab refusal to recognize the existence of Israel, and a threat of renewed war, sooner or later.

The Arab summit's decision can in no way be taken as a contribution to a Middle East political settlement. The mere fact of the entry of the PLO into the diplomatic arena at this stage completely undermines the United Nations Resolutions 242 (of November 1967) and 338 (of October 1973). These have been the frameworks for the only political progress achieved in 26 years.

The PLO was not a party to either of the resolutions, which called for a settlement between Israel and its neighbors — Egypt, Jordan and Syria. The interests of the Palestinians were to have been taken into account under the resolutions, but not through the recognition of an independent Palestinian body at the expense of any of the other parties concerned.

There were suggestions from Rabat that Jordan might be pressured into attending the Geneva Middle East Conference acting simply as a front for the PLO, which was acknowledged by the summit as guardian of any "liberated Palestinian land."

The Rabat decision on the PLO was not unexpected in view of the over all Arab support the organization enjoys and the recent vote of the UN. The lack of fight displayed by Egypt's President Anwar Sadat and Saudi Arabia's King Feisal can be attributed to their desire to avoid confrontation with the radicals in the Arab world. Moreover, Sadat had been steering the PLO towards legitimacy, with the aim of handling over the burdensome problem of the Palestinians to their own people to enable him to concentrate on Egypt's own affairs. Feisal probably feels no sense of commitment to a fellow monarch whose Hashemite dynasty was overthrown in the Arabian peninsula by his own Wahabi line.

The big surprise was Hussein's surrender to the PLO. He emerged the loser in what Jordanian newsmen at the summit described as the most diplomatic fight of his 21-year-long political career. This seems to be true, unless the still youthful, usually shrewd monarch capitalized on secret accords, through which he hopes to retain his power and image at home.

However, such secret accords appear somewhat unlikely, as Hussein has recently been reported to be discouraged by inter-Arab political intrigue both outside and inside his desert kingdom. His surrender seems to have been in part brought about by Arab opposition to his political overtures and the absence at the same time of any decisive Israeli response to such gestures.

At various times, King Hussein has been valiant in the face of challenge, but at Rabat he did not throw down the gauntlet to the leaders of the PLO who have reached the highest forums by terror and slander. At the initial sessions in Rabat, Hussein openly voiced his regret, if not pain, that the majority of the Arab rulers were denying him his carefully promoted image as the gallant young Arab King. He even mentioned Nasser's reference to him as a true patriot, who would go down in the annals of Arab history because of his alliance with Cairo in 1967. But this did not win him the sympathy of the present Arab leaders.

Hussein's failure in the Middle East political area has undoubtedly cast a heavy shadow over the political efforts on which US Secretary of State Kissinger has been concentrating since the October war. The Jordanian monarch was regarded as one of the pillars of American policy in the Middle East and his defeat constitutes an Arab vote of non-confidence in, if not defiance of, Kissinger.

Indeed, the Rabat stand on the Jordan-PLO conflict may be the result of Soviet Middle East policies. Thus, the Arabs turned down Dr. Kissinger's advice to by-pass the Palestinian problem and PLO representation at this stage. Instead, they responded to the Kremlin's insistence that an immediate emphasis on the Palestinian case be coupled with the demand for a complete Israeli withdrawal to the pre-1967 lines at an early Geneva conference.

The move indicates that the Arabs are determined to confront Israel with the Palestinians, the most moderate of whom demand a return to the 1947 UN Partition plan which was never implemented at all. And this at a time when the people who were authorized to rule on the Palestinian issue insist on the establishment of a so-called "Secular Democratic Palestinian State," which means the elimination of the political structure of the State of Israel.

In this context and especially in the absence of any Palestinian recognition of Israel sovereignty, the decision taken by the Arab summit can scarcely promote the prospect of peace. Bitter as it may sound, Rabat may spark the threat of a new war, seen by the Palestinian leadership as developing in stages.

However, despite the gloom generated at Rabat, Kissinger is unlikely to abandon the efforts invested in his year-long shuttle diplomacy. The scope of Kissinger's future activity is likely to be governed by the degree of Arab flexibility. At present, he is unlikely to go beyond a search for a further partial settlement between Egypt and Israel.

The main implication of the Rabat summit is that the Arab leaders

Moshe Kohn Hears The Footsteps of Messiah

By BERYL SEGAL

The Jerusalem Post, of all the newspapers and magazines in Israel, published an article by Moshe Kohn, entitled:

"Are we on the Eve of Messiah's Time?"

Reb Moshe Kohn is a former staff member of an American weekly newspaper and is now on the staff of the Jerusalem Post. He is, according to the people who know him, a Talmudic scholar of note. He asks the question: What did the Talmudic sages of the time of Jesus, Bar Kochba and after, have to say on what the Messianic time would be like?

Now Jews believe that "In the End of Days" Messiah will come and remove all injustices, all hatred, all misunderstandings from the earth. There will be no more wars, because there will be no cause for warfare.

But what about the "End of Days?" How are we to know when the hoped-for Messianic days are near?

The history of the Jews is replete with calculations and predictions based on these calculations that were put forward by various people. These calculations were based primarily on the Book of Daniel in Scriptures. They were put forward especially when the times were particularly troubled, when great social upheavals occurred, or at the appearance of comets and eclipses of the sun and moon, or when floods and earthquakes were visited upon the land. Many false Messiahs are recorded in the History of the Jews, and all of them ended in disgrace and disaster. They apparently miscalculated.

Now comes Reb Moshe Kohn and "sticks his neck out." He believes, or says he believes, that the time has come for the Messiah to appear. And here are some of the sayings in the Talmud on which he bases his belief that we hear the footsteps of the Messiah.

Rabbi Yehuda says: (at the time of the coming of the Messiah) Impudence will abound. The crops of grapes will be plentiful but the price of wine will be prohibitive. (You can substitute wheat or meat, or sugar, or even oil, for grapes.) Meeting houses will be brothels. People will hold their noses in the presence of scholarship. Piety will be despised. (Remember the burning of books? The disparaging note when they spoke of Intellectuals?) Truth will be absent. The young will humiliate the old. (What do they know? Retire them!) The aged will rise up before the young. (Arrogance of youth) Sons will abuse their fathers. (The old man is coming.) Daughters will talk back to their mothers, and daughters-in-law to their mothers-in-law. Family members will hate each other. Leadership (governments) will be dog leadership. (They will bark and frighten people into submission.)

Rabbi Shmuel says: Everything will be priced out of everybody's reach. (A trip to the supermarkets will confirm this.)

Rabbi Huna, the son of Rabbi Hanina says: There will be a mediocre government that is as bad as no government. (Which government did Rabbi Huna have in mind?)

And Reb Moshe Kohn cites many other instances from the Talmud on which he bases his belief that we are on the Eve of the coming of the Messiah.

There is a remarkable sameness in the descriptions of Rabbi Yehuda and our own days. The social and moral deterioration, the mediocrities of governments, and the decay of family life. But what does that prove? The description of Rabbi Yehuda sounds very much like our own days. But does that mean that even in his days, in Babylonia, in the days of the Talmud, in the second to the fifth centuries, sons did not honor their fathers and daughters raised their voice against their mothers, and food was beyond the reach of the average man, and the youth was arrogant, and governments were mediocre?

Things don't change very much. We think that our times are unique. Rabbi Yehuda probably spoke of his own observations.

But we could look in the Talmud and find other utterances of great Rabbis that prove that we are quite far from "the End of Days."

"Messiah will not come until the people are all righteous or entirely wicked," says Rabbi Yohanan.

We are neither.

And again our sages said: "The Holy One, Blessed be He, said: Only fools calculate the end of days."

And some Rabbis of the Talmud even cursed those who undertake to calculate the time of the coming of the Messiah.

Reb Moshe must have known about these pronouncements. How come he "stuck out his neck?"

The world of today is probably not different than the world of the old days. Not better and not worse. The Rambam (Maimonides) summed it up correctly:

Do not think for a moment that in the days of the Messiah the world will change, or that there will be a new creation. The world will go on in its customary way, in its usual manner. The Jews will stay in peace with their neighbors so that they may devote more time to study of Torah.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

Crowd Protests PLO Participation

B'rith, said his service organization had arranged for 440 of these from as far away as Maine, Ohio and Georgia.

Among participants from the city, David Livingston, president of District 65, Distributive Workers of America, said his union had arranged with 500 shops for 10,000 employees to have longer lunch hours during the rally, which was scheduled from noon to 1:30 P.M.

It was a day of brilliant sunshine — "how right our cause is you can see by the weather after everybody predicted rain," Mr. Babush commented.

Crowd Size Estimated

Rabbi Israel Miller, chairman of the presidents' conference and until last week president of the American Zionist Federation, exuberantly told the demonstrators, as presiding officer, at 1 P.M. that their number had been estimated at 150,000 — and 25 minutes later he reported it at 175,000.

It was a crowd of historic size, even if there was a doubt about those guesses. Dag Hammarskjold Plaza measures 101,400 square feet, according to City Planning Commission data, which would mean a capacity of 50,000. The plaza was jammed as the demonstration was heralded with an accordion and drum combo playing a spirited rendition of "Am Yisrael Chai" — The people of Israel live.

The crowd also filled Second Avenue from 46th to 48th Street, which had also been blocked off, and which measures over 80,000 square feet. It poured down 47th Street toward Third Avenue, and it eddied along 48th Street from Second to First Avenues. More than 20 loudspeakers had been placed for the distant participants.

Five blocks to the south, at 42nd Street and First Avenue, 40 police officers guarded 10 supporters of the Palestine Liberation Organization who were holding a street news conference.

Dr. M. T. Mehdi, secretary-general of the Action Committee on American-Arab Relations, said his group was asking for United States recognition of a "democratic secular Palestine" including "co-existence of the Jewish people."

The Arab conference led to 11 arrests when the police prevented a group of youths from Betair, a militant young Zionist organization, from marching toward the Arab sympathizers.

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

We have shown so many times here that one should not take a finesse unless it is the last resort. We have used this as our moral. Here is another hand to use as a classic illustration for every Declarer I watched did take the finesse and lost the hand when it could and should have been made. Not one player made this hand which was played thirteen times. If we show enough of this type of article maybe they will finally see how they might give themselves a better chance.

East was Dealer, no one vulnerable with this bidding:

P	2♣	P	4♦
P	4NT	P	5♦
P	6♣	End

North		East
♠10 9 7	♥A 5 2	♠5	♥9 8 4 3
♦9 3	♣9 6 5 3 2	♥8 7 5 4	♠A Q 10 8
South		West
♠A K Q J 8 6 3	♥K J 6	♠4 2	♥Q 10 7
♦A K	♣4	♦Q J 10 6 2	♠K J 7

South had a fine strong Two Bid whether or not South was playing Weak Two Bids. If they were he would open Two Clubs and show his suit next. If not he would open Two Spades. All North had was an Ace and some trump support. No matter how strong South was he still needed some help from his partner so when North gave his negative reply some Souths did not get to Slam. As the hand was played they were the ones who received the better result for at least they made their contract. The ones who did bid Slam went down. But the hand can be made.

West led the Diamond Queen which was won by South. I watched as they did count their tricks and could get as high as eleven. There was nothing they could do with their small Club but as did happen, they saw that if the Heart finesse worked the Slam could be made, certainly not a bad bid. A Slam that depends on a finesse should be bid. If the finesse worked and I had not watched the hand being played so many times, the article wouldn't have been written but justice prevailed and the finesse lost. What was the better play?

The answer, try to set up a Club trick. If that suit breaks 4-3 as it is likely to do, there are just enough entries in Dummy to do this. But the timing and such has to be just right. Before touching Trumps the small Club should be led and lost. The probability is that whoever wins this will lead another Diamond in which case the plan goes on and the Heart finesse can even be taken as a last resort in case the Clubs do not break. If, however, East wins that trick and returns a Heart the finesse must be ignored and the trick won by Dummy. Now another Club is played and ruffed high. Now we start the Trumps but properly continuing the plan. Dummy's Trumps are all high which is the reason for this line so play a low one over to Dummy and ruff another Club with another high Trump.

Now we are all set for both parties have followed so far and we have one more time to go. Another low Trump is played to Dummy and the fourth Club ruffed high. But what does that make the fifth one still in Dummy? Good, and there is still a Trump there for an entry provided you preserved them for that purpose. Now your last small Trump over to Dummy's last one and the fifth Club becomes the twelfth trick. The beauty of this is that if you are careful even if the Clubs fail to split no one can overruff you and when one opponent shows out on the third round the Heart finesse can then be tried as an alternate play but only as a last resort. This costs nothing and gains a trick as long as the Clubs break normally.

Moral: Watch all spots to see if you can utilize some for purposes of entries to possibly give you a better chance for a contract.

Prospects who buy often are much more likely to see your newspaper ad than occasional buyers.

RIC FALL CONCERT
 The Rhode Island College Orchestra under the direction of Dr. Edward Markward, will present its annual Fall concert on Sunday, November 10, at 8:15 p.m. in the Roberts Auditorium on the RIC campus.
 Dr. Markward, of the Rhode Island College Music Department, has appeared in numerous opera and oratorio performances and as a recitalist in the eastern half of the United States. He is also director of music at Mathewson Street Methodist Church and president of the Rhode Island Chapter of the American Choral Director's Association.
 Admission is free and the public is invited.

Formation of the committee, representing a cross section of Rhode Island, was prompted by increasing concern over skyrocketing health care costs and the financial disaster which threatens all Americans when serious illness strikes.
 The Health Security Act (S.3, H.R.22), would eliminate out of pocket costs which now deter many from seeking needed care, while at the same time monitoring health care costs and encouraging other reforms in the nation's health care system.

Hussein Will Continue To Aid West Bank

AMMAN, Jordan: King Hussein told Palestinians on the occupied West Bank of Jordan that the Arab leaders' declaration recognizing the Palestine Liberation Organization as the sole representative of Palestinians would not change his feelings toward them.

In a radio and television speech, he also said that his Government would continue to provide aid and services to West Bank people.

Despite the Israeli occupation of the West Bank since the 1967 war, the Jordanian Government pays the salaries of Jordanian administrative employees there and provides aid to municipalities.

The King, who returned earlier tonight from the conference in Rabat, Morocco, where the Arab declaration was adopted Monday, also told Palestinians that Jordan would "continue to be the homeland" of all those who chose to live here as good citizens.

Israel Expels Four;
Result Of Crackdown

TEL AVIV: Israel banished four Palestinian activists to Lebanon as part of a crackdown on pro-guerrilla agitation in Israeli occupied territories.

The four were said to have solicited support for the Palestine Liberation Organization and to have been involved in terrorist acts against Israelis and Arab moderates.

They were identified as Ali Mahmud al-Khatib, editor of Al Shaab, a Jerusalem newspaper, Dr. Mustafha Hasan Milhim, deputy mayor of Halhul; Isam Bakr Fatah, an engineer, of Nablus, and Daoud Ariqat, a Jericho farmer.

An official announcement said the four had been active in the "Palestinian National Front," which military sources here characterized as a "terrorist organization that has perpetrated acts of murder and terrorism." The four were also said to have been responsible for a petition circulated in the occupied areas, calling for support for the Palestine Liberation Organization, to speak in debate. After the Arab summit conference in Rabat designated the group as the sole legal representative of the Palestinians in the West-Bank area, Arabs have been greeting one another with the "V" sign and nationalist slogans have been painted on walls.

The newspaper Maariv said editorially that the banishment of the activists should warn Arabs "who deluded themselves and believed they could now take the P.L.O. flag from its hiding place and prepare to unfurl it." Activists who concluded from the Rabat resolution that they could start shedding Israeli rule have miscalculated, the editorial said.

The banishments were the first since December of last year. Most of those previously banished were sent to Jordan; the four men ousted today were sent to Lebanon apparently because they would be endangered in Jordan because of their hostility to King Hussein.

The Jews and the Blacks

If the local Protestant Church of the South has a sorry record in the social revolution, the Jewish fellowships in the South have an even sorer record.

But nothing helps. The bitter irony of it is that demagogues throughout the South "accuse" the Jew of inspiring the whole Negro movement.

Leander Perez Sr., of Plaquemines Parish, La., publicly said, "The Jews are leading the Negroes. They'll resent it and I say they are unadulterated damn liars because I do resent any Goddam Jew trying to destroy our country and our rights and that's what they are doing, and they are using the Negro for it."

The Southern Jews failed the Negro for the overly complicated but obvious reason that Jews failed to understand that anti-Semitism has nothing to do with racial segregation or anything else.

If the American Jewish Congress never filed one amicus curiae brief, if Irving Engel never tried to commit his entire conservative organization to the Negro, if the Anti-Defamation League never committed itself to the cause of civil rights, the anti-Semite would never have missed a beat. All the anti-Semite needs is Jews, not liberals, not racists, not patriots, not scientists, not fools, not villains, only Jews.

No one expected the Jews of the South to become crusaders. It would have accomplished little and, besides, the Negroes never solicited crusaders. The Jewish fault was in bringing their lay influence to bear in silencing the rabbinate and, to some extent, silencing their national organizations. Southern Jews have been particularly disturbed by the presence of Northern rabbis among Freedom Riders.

Nazi War Relics; Booming Business

BONN: Exhibitions of Nazi art, auctions and sales of Nazi war relics are booming in West Germany. Some of this is rationalized as coming to grips with the past. But much of it is evidently catering to a growing market of morbid curio-hunters.

An exhibition of Nazi paintings, sculptures and architectural designs opened this week in Frankfurt amidst a wave of public protest. The display, which will continue until December, has been organized by the Frankfurt Art Society and a group from the local university. The organizers contended that the exhibition is "an attempt to interpret the Nazi era and to help people come to terms with the past." An organization in Wiesbaden, dedicated to preventing the dissemination of Nazi culture, declared that the exhibition "merely glorifies the Nazi legacy."

In Bavaria, the government there auctioned some 350 vases, statuettes and other memorabilia that once belonged to Nazi Air Force Chief Hermann Goering. A Bavarian government spokesman said the objects were of "appalling taste." The government had inherited them after the war and had to find a way of getting rid of them, the spokesman said. He had no comment as to why the government wanted to make money from the legacy of a leading Nazi, instead of destroying the objects.

A week ago, Hermann Otto Winiarski conducted his ninth sale of curios in the Bavarian village of Toerwang and said he plans to make his auctions a regular event. Winiarski, who resides in Toerwang, reported that bidders came from many countries, including the United States, France and Britain.

In what he described as lively bidding, caps bearing the SS insignia went for as much as $150. Ceremonial SS daggers bearing swastikas sold for as much as $230. A copy of Leon Trotsky's autobiography, which Hitler had annotated critically, went for $750. Goering's Mercedes was sold last month to an American buyer for more than $165,000. Some Nazi relics are still awaiting some buyers willing to pay the reserve price, like $750 for a life-sized painting of Hitler, or $4000 for a sweatstained cap once worn by Hitler.

'Well Hung' Winds Its Way
 From Comedy To Slapstick

Well Hung, Trinity Square Repertory Company's season opener, winds its way from comedy to slapstick and, finally, black comedy, all played out in a New Zealand police station. The sergeant and constable have an immediate need, as things begin, to convince master detective Smart, unluckily present in town, that only the local moron Wally could have committed a brutal double murder.

But the flamboyant sleuth has built a successful career on distrust of the obvious. While townspeople and police point out Wally's guilt, Detective Smart continues to suggest other possibilities, even though Wally's appearance convinces the audience. All this is interspersed with the efforts of Trev, a constable whose hobby is girls, to sell his car in order to pay for an abortion. A vigorous elderly woman, talking nonstop and non sequiter, appears at the station, either to buy the car or take care of Trev's girl (it's hard to be sure which) and Trev's girl comes along, too — and in the end justice appears to be served.

George Martin gave his usual excellent performance, establishing himself, in a well-done monologue early in Act 1, as the great detective. Trev (Richard Jenkins) was excellent when he was attending to the business at hand. He and the sergeant (Robert Black) were occasionally convulsed and often amused, during Act 1, by matters never made clear to the audience. Marguerite Lenert was quite good as the would-be car purchaser. Others in the cast were Mina Mamente (the sergeant's wife), Tom Griffin (Wally), and William Damkoehler (the town's leading citizen).

Beginning straightforwardly as comedy, Well Hung turned into an in-and-out-of-closets-and-toilet, of-with-the trousers, up-with-the-skirt

Well Known Artist,
 Reuben Rubin Dies

TEL AVIV: Funeral services were held for Reuben Rubin, an internationally famous Israeli artist who once served as his country's envoy to Rumania. Mr. Rubin died Sunday night at the age of 81. Many of his paintings, which he always signed "Reuben," are on display in leading galleries all over the world.

He was born in Galati, Rumania in 1893 and came to Palestine in 1912 to be one of the first students of Boris Schatz, founder of the Bezalel school of art in Jerusalem. Later he studied at the Academy of Fine Arts in Paris and held his first exhibition in New York in 1920.

set design by Eugene Lee and costume design by Betsey Potter. A downstage bench cut sight lines for some, but otherwise the set looked like a sunlit painting of planes and surfaces, and worked well. This is the American premiere of New Zealander Robert Lord's play.

Golan Heights Fortified Before Rainy Season

TEL AVIV: Israel is spending over IL 200 million on the construction of what some term a "little Maginot line" on the Golan Heights, making that region the most heavily fortified of all Israel's frontiers. Military correspondents on a conducted tour of the Heights were shown a network of anti-tank trenches and massively fortified positions being built by private contractors engaged by the Defense Ministry. The intention, they were told, is to complete the defense complex before the rainy season sets in next month.

The correspondents also visited settlements on the Golan heights which, it was disclosed, have been supplied with anti-tank guns, recoilless cannons, heavy machineguns and mortars for the settlers to defend themselves against attack.

Maj. Gen. Raphael Eytan, commander of the Northern Front, warned at Kiryat Shemona that the Syrians were preparing for a new war on a long-term basis. But he assumed that for the time being Damascus would agree to the continued presence of the United Nations Emergency Force, the mandate of which expired Oct. 24.

New Teachers' Guide; Jews In US History

NEW YORK: The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith announced the publication of a new teachers' guide intended to correct deficiencies and stereotypes in the treatment of Jews in American history textbooks titled "Jews in American History: A Teachers Guide," by Jerome L. Ruderman, was prepared in response to a 1970 ADL study that found American history texts continued to slight the role of Jews in American history, primarily by omission, and sometimes gratuitously identified Jews as such, the ADL said.

According to the author, who heads the social studies department at Simon Gratz High School in Philadelphia and is a member of the advisory board of Scholastic Search magazine, the new guide offers social studies teachers a complete plan for integrating the Jewish experience and contributions in building this nation with the overall history curriculum, the ADL announcement said. It casts the story of American Jews in light of eight American eras and themes: The Colonial World; Revolution and Civic Equality; Building a National Identity; Westward Expansion; Civil War and Reconstruction; The New Immigration; The Era of Two World Wars; and Today.

TO GET OIL

PARIS: France and Saudi Arabia are close to concluding a broad economic accord which will supply France with an estimated 800 million tons of oil over the next 15 years, French officials report. A French delegation will go to Riyadh, Saudi Arabia to continue the negotiations. Under the terms of the accord, Saudi Arabia would agree to supply France with the petrol in exchange for French industrial investments and technological aid in the form of joint ventures. The agreement was first discussed almost a year ago during the oil crisis.

are resorting to a hard-line policy, which may be replocted mainly in moves by Syria. The demand for a complete Israeli withdrawal to the pre-1967 borders, and "restoration of the rights of the Palestinians" without the conclusion of a peace treaty with Israel leaves a question mark over Syria's attitude towards extending the six month mandate of UNDOF on the Golan front.

VOTE FOR PLO

PARIS: The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization voted by an overwhelming majority to admit the Palestine Liberation Organization to its general conference, with observer status. Eighty countries voted in favor, and only two—the United States and Israel—against the move. Seventeen others, including France and her eight Common Market partners, abstained.

The Treasure Chest

Of Outstanding Offers and Opportunities

By Alan Shawn Feinstein

Hope you heeded my last newsletter to stay away from gold coins for a while. Few days later their price plummeted sharply . . . Coming right of Americans to buy gold bullion puts pressure on the huge premiums gold coins have been commanding. Also pressure on silver, too, as investors in that will be tempted to trade it for gold, as the same dollar value put into gold bullion can be stored much more inexpensively.

There'll be good opportunities ahead in gold. Will watch and advise . . .

Oil — a frightful problem. Arabs are exploiting it to the hilt, threatening economic chaos. We can't go on for long being throttled by their insane prices or a cutoff whenever they feel like it. The world needs that oil to live. We must do something to lower prices and insure its flow. And soon!

Couple of interesting items for free: First, a booklet on organic gardening. Shows exactly how to do it and how good it is for you. Write Happy Acres, Department M.S., P.O. Box 711, Somerset, Kentucky 42501. And, for a free sample of a "wonder-cleaning bar" write Houbet Clear, the Mem Company, Department M.S., Northvale, New Jersey 07647. It's supposedly better than a detergent or a soap. Has bacteria cleansing action and is non-drying. Try it.

And remember this if you buy lottery tickets: After signing the ticket add "and family" after your name. That way if you win, the winnings are split among your family. So the tax bite will be lower. Also saves on gift tax! Because the gift is now only a portion of the ticket price, not the winnings! (Keep your losing tickets too. They're deductible from your winnings for that year.)

Coming up next, some rip-offs I hope you can avoid.

P.S. Urgent news for commodity option buyers. Write me for special private report. You should not spend another penny in this field until you read it! It's free. And an eye-opener! Write me for it — Alhambra Circle, Cranston, Rhode Island 02905.

What Is The Reason?

BY RABBI YAAKOV UVSITZKY
(Rabbi Uvsitzky has requested the following space to present the Orthodox viewpoint on certain Jewish customs and procedures.)

Why is a Jewish person buried in shrouds?

The Jewish law recognizes the democracy of death. Therefore, it demands that all Jews be buried in the same type of garment. Nineteen hundred years ago Rabbi Gamaliel began this practice so that the poor people would not be ashamed and the wealthy people would not compete as to who had better clothes for burial.

Shrouds are worn because they are simple in style, all hand made, clean and white. They symbolize purity and dignity and simplicity.

Why do bride and bridegroom fast on their wedding day?

Marriage is an occasion which should be approached in a sober and earnest manner. It is the day where both man and woman become complete. They become united. On the day of their wedding their sins are forgiven and they begin life anew. Therefore, it is on this day that bride and bridegroom dedicate the day to fasting and prayer so that G-d's presence may always be with them.
