Shamir Calls Territory Vital

by Mark Joffe

BALTIMORE (JTA) — Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir made a strong appeal last week for North American Jews to unite behind the policies of his Likud government as it moves ahead in the Middle East peace process.

Addressing thousands of delegates at the 60th annual General Assembly of the Council of Jewish Federations here, Shamir said, "Above all, we hope and expect our brothers and sisters of this great Jewish community to stand solidly with us in the critical days ahead."

Sounding a theme reminiscent of U.S. President John Kennedy, Shamir said that when world Jewry is divided, it is like a "fragile reed. But when we are united, we are a powerful spiritual and moral force that is unbeatable."

The "great Jewish community here in North America," the prime minister said, "has always stood at our side and labored together with us for the good of our people."

He later added, "I know that in seeking peace, the government of Israel can rely on the support of every Jew, wherever he may be."

While the applause that resounded throughout the cavernous Baltimore Convention Center gave the impression that Shamir has already locked up that support, other signs have emerged in recent days to indicate that North American Jewish leaders are at odds with some of his government's policies.

A survey released last week by the Los Angeles-based Wilstein Institute of Jewish Policy Studies showed, that unlike the Shamir government, a vast majority of CJF board members support territorial compromise on Israel's part in exchange for "credible guarantees for peace."

It found they also overwhelmingly back a freeze on Israeli settlement activity in the West Bank, especially if the alternative is foregoing $10 billion in U.S. loan guarantees Israel is seeking for immigrant resettlement.

Likewise, Americans for Peace Now released an open letter to Shamir, signed by 235 rabbis from more than 75 cities, urging an immediate settlement freeze.

"Continued settlement activities are not only detrimental to the peace process, but also to the successful absorption of the new olim in Israel," said the letter, which was delivered to the Israeli Embassy in Washington.

But Shoshana Cardin, chairperson of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, suggested that the CJF and rabbinic leadership may be more open to the idea of a settlement freeze and territorial compromise than the bulk of North American Jewry.

Cardin, who does a lot of public speaking, said she rarely encounters calls from Jewish audiences for a settlement freeze. "I don't hear that when I travel," she said. But she acknowledged that there are "differences of opinion" on that subject among Jews here and in Israel.

Cardin and leaders of the Conference of Presidents met with Shamir immediately after his speech here. The prime minister then left for Washington for a late-afternoon meeting with Secretary of State James Baker.

Shamir met last Friday morning with President Bush, in a session that focused on the Middle East peace process.

In his speech to CJF leaders, Shamir restated his commitment to the peace process begun in Madrid. "We are hungry for peace. We passionately desire it. Israel desperately needs it," he said.

But he also warned his listeners that "peace without security spells disaster for our state."

"Not everybody understands our security needs," the prime minister said. "We are often lectured by governments that would not themselves

Beth-El Holiday Gift Boutique

Herald Associate Editor

This past Sunday, November 24, the Sisterhood of Temple Beth-El sponsored the synagogue's fifth annual Holiday Gift Boutique. More than two dozen volunteers helped to set up and to make the day's event run smoothly.

It was a shopping extravaganza not to be missed! One dedicated Sisterhood member, Amy Sugerman, the Vice President of Ways and Means, gave birth only days before and had arrived home from the hospital on Saturday. "I wouldn't have missed it for anything," smiled Sugerman, surrounded by well wishers. "I have shopping to do!"

According to Linda Goldberg, the Chairperson of the Holiday Gift Boutique, planning is begun in August for this festive day. With a temple membership of over 400 women from across the state, the Sisterhood also orchestrates numerous other fundraising and educational events, including the Donor Event, which will take place in late April of next year.

The booths at the boutique featured gorgeous gift ideas for the entire family. Stunning watercolors, enamel pins, wall hangings, gift baskets and glow-in-the-dark boxer shorts were some of the many items on display.

Temple Sinai Religious School Chanukah Family Workshop

On November 24, children from grades Pre-K to 3rd and their parents gathered at Temple Sinai to enjoy a family workshop from 9 a.m. to 10:15 a.m.

Each class followed a time schedule wherein they all participated in a craft class, an experiential class, a music class, and a video class. Classes were approximately 25 minutes long.

Pictured here, one of the third grade classes learned to play "The Dreidelland Game." Their instructor, Robin, explained that it is similar to the game "Candyland," but reinforces the customs and laws of Chanukah.

His column's topics range from his family to whatever strikes him about life in Rhode Island or life in general. His ideas usually relate to Rhode Islanders; however, he recently directed his ideas and thoughts towards the Middle East and specifically, Israel.

For six days Rhode Islanders read about his experiences in this highly divided area. While there, he spoke to both Arabs and Israelis about the dilemma they are facing — Is there a chance for peace between two rivals? How do they go about finding compromises and learning to live together?

Interview

Herald: Realizing that the peace process was going on when you were there, is that what prompted you to go to Israel?

Mark: Part of it was that I was asked by the Jewish Federation to go on a mission with community members to see Israel. Every year they ask a couple of groups of community members to go over there; some Jewish, some not Jewish. Our group happened to be all Jewish.

I originally planned to go there simply as a human being for a change instead of a journalist. Then I examined the itinerary and realized that when the Jewish Federation sends you on a mission, they don't send you on a tour of the beaches or the museums. You see the politics and sociology and the personal pain and joy of the country.

Although the Jewish Federation trip, I think, was admirable in showing us both sides to an extent, there were some things they could not have shown us, like the Gaza Strip, like spending time on the West Bank. So I booked in an extra week and stayed on just as a journalist to make sure I viewed all sides of the conflict.

So, I put those things together. The first week there I was with the Jewish Federation as a human being; the second week there as a journalist.

Herald: Do you know why the Federation chose you?

Mark: Yes, I think it's just a question of their mission to select members of various parts of the community; to make sure Americans see and understand Israel.

Herald: So, they weren't expecting you to write something for the [Federation] Voice?

Mark: No, that was my idea. They just wanted me to go there as an individual. I said, "Is that all right, to write things?" And they said, "Sure, but there could be a problem." And I said, "Well, what's the problem?" And they said, "Well, on these missions, all the people that we meet aren't expecting to be on the record. And so we'll have to be very careful to make sure that everybody that we meet will be okay about having a journalist there taking notes."

The truth is — and this says a lot about Israel — that nobody cared because Israelis love to get their opinions to the world.

Herald: You mentioned in an article that you weren't a practicing Jew. Are you?

Mark: It depends on what you mean. I'm a member of Temple Beth-El; and I said I'm not devout. I don't go to daily minyan services. I might go a couple times a year to services, but I'm actually involved in an intermarriage group at the temple. And I did find that this trip really taught me something about Judaism. That it is unlike many religions. Judaism is not just a religion that has to do with theology and worshipping in a house of worship. It's a religion that also has to do with identity, history and identifying Israel. When you're Jewish, feeling Jewish and being Jewish can often mean caring about what happens day to day in Israel; that can be as important as going to a synagogue for services. So, in a sense, this trip to Israel to me was practicing my religion.

And I do remember one thing that really speaks a lot about the connection between Jews in America and the Jews in Israel. When I got on the tour bus, right after we landed there, the first thing the guide said was, "Welcome home." And I think that touches on a sense of identity that all Jews have with Israel that we don't realize because it is unique as being a Jewish nation.

Herald: Did you feel at home?

Mark: I did in many ways. In some ways I didn't. I found that Israel has a reputation for being the beautiful country that made the desert bloom. It is beautiful in some ways, but it is also a harsh, austere country. It's not a wealthy country. And for an American it's not always the most comfortable place in the world. So, in many ways, it's not a place where you can get to feel comfortable right away, but I will say that there is something that happens when you go to Israel as a Jewish person.

In America no matter how much you feel part of America and accepted by America and committed to America — and I do I love it and this will probably be my home forever — we're still a minority here. And there's still a feeling sometimes, so subtle you don't even know it. You kind of have to tiptoe around because you're a guest here among the majority. You always have to worry a little bit whether the majority will treat you right.

To go to a country, the only country where you could be among the majority, makes you feel at ease and at home and confident in a way that you don't always feel.

Herald: As an American Jew talking with the Arabs did you feel that they had any

FEATURE

"Gentle, Plain, Just"

(lines from Walt Whitman)

by Mike Fink
Herald Contributing Reporter

In the season of dimming lights and dawning festivals, I was flipping through a recent morning Journal. I was struck by how the magic of "Magic" Johnson jumped out of the hoop of the hoopla sports section right onto the front page. It dribbled me back to my by-gone days of idol worship.

The war was over, over there. My grammar school days were over, over here. The wheels of progress started turning again. I ran around high school corridors dashing to get into the action.

I can't recall setting out to be a writer. I did columns for both the Bishop Bugle and the Hope Log. The first sawbuck ($5) I ever got paid came from a contest put out by Scholastic Magazine. You had to list three heroic figures of that period.

I named Schweitzer, Gandhi, and Eleanor Roosevelt to my personal hall of fame. I kept no copy of my story. It's just pasted on the walls of my mind. I wouldn't pick the same people if I could go back and rewrite. Still, I can picture why I chose those three public persons.

Dr. Albert Schweitzer told a Life reporter that he never swatted flies or slapped mosquitoes in his clinic in Africa. Every little mite has a soul. The Mahatma Gandhi sat for his normal Bourke-White photograph, bald and skinny, wrapped in thin cotton, spinning away at an ancient wheel. He lived and died unimpressed by the magic of machines. Eleanor, unpretty and deaf, titled her open diary simply "My Day." She stepped down into the mines, not up to the fine folk on their dais before the glass of fashion. She hobnobbed with the maimed and the orphaned.

I bought into these symbols and styles. Later on, they let me down. Gandhi never showed much insight into the anguish of the Jews. The Roosevelts promised us more than they ever delivered. Schweitzer's gallant gestures by today's standards shrink down to a silly scale.

Even so, I look back kindly at my postwar generation. We were touched, however lightly, by the wand of the depression and the sticks of war. We were warmed by the passion for justice in its aftermath. We looked up to our elders. We didn't crave handsome heroes. What people did for others gave them stature. They loomed up before our eyes. My favorite movie star was Marlene Dietrich. She wore fatigues and sang for our troops. She made a moral choice, not a smart self-seeking one. She cast her lot with the Jews, sure to lose, not the Nazis, who seemed certain to win.

Today's "role models" make me worry. Kids want their idols to look good and grab for big time bucks and kicks. What's the matter with small time?

These days I like my heroes close by. Stan smiles behind the counter at the bakery where I buy my daily bread. Bob who takes my ticket at the Avon calls me by name. Jan at the Temple shares a soft word with me. Rabbi Goodman from the Home waits with me at the JCC for the Midrasha bus. He introduces me to his wife and children. These folks knit up the ravelled sleeve of care in the afternoon. It's not Charles Atlas who holds together the world, earth and sky. They do.

We Jews have our legend of the 36. They don't know who they are. Nobody does. But these select souls humbly keep the world spinning - safe, slow and sound. On the East Side and in other city blocks and

Letters to the EDITOR

Dear Editors:

I represent Aron Pliskin, who recently immigrated from Russia. He is looking for his aunt or her heirs, whom he last heard from in December of 1946. The address given on the envelope at that time was Mr. N. Cremer, 39 Douglas Avenue, Providence, Rhode Island. He believes the name she may have used was Lena Hoffman Felsner Cremer or Cramer. Her family name was Hoffman. She was also known as Frum-Lea. She had two sisters in the United States and had no children. She was born in about 1880. Mr. Pliskin believes her first husband, a Mr. Felsner, owned real estate in Providence. If you have any information regarding her or her relatives or regarding those who lived at 39 Douglas Avenue in Providence, Rhode Island, in December, 1946, would you please advise. Thank you very much.

Dear Editors:

There is good news, and there is bad news. The GOOD news is that the gubernatorial candidate for Louisiana, David Duke, was defeated by a 61 to 39 percent margin.

The BAD news is, that a bigot, racist, and hate monger, like that man, a former Nazi and Ku Klux Klan member, could gather even 39% of the electoral votes. This in the last decade of the twentieth century or the end of the millennium, if you will. Duke seems to have a following which is considerable, not only in his State, but also all over the country, including our own Rhode Island.

Some may believe that he is not to be taken seriously, but I am reminded of another man who was believed only a paper-hanger with odd political views who lived in the late 1920's and early 1930's. Nobody took him for real, but just remember what his "odd" views and his hatred accomplished...

It was Santayana who wrote, "Those who do not remember the past, shall be condemned to re-live it."

May G-d have mercy on all of us.

Hans L. Heimann

The Dual Life Of A Jew

In the beginning of this week's Torah portion, Vayei-shev, we are told about two of Joseph's dreams, both of which had the same meaning: that Joseph would rule over his brothers and that they would pay homage to him. The second dream added to the first with the information that 'the sun and the moon' - Jacob and Bilha - would also pay their respects to him.

No explanation is given about why Joseph's dreams were repeated and, indeed, the additional information that the second dream conveys could have been hinted at in the first. We are forced to conclude that Joseph's two dreams, alike though they are in their meaning, are allusions to two different things.

What are these two things? And what are the implications that they hold for us?

Joseph's two dreams differ in the following way. The first dream refers to the earthly realm: "And behold, we were binding sheaves in the midst of a field." But the second refers to the heavens: "the sun and the moon and eleven stars." These two dreams illustrate an ascent in holiness. The difference between Joseph's two dreams exemplifies the unique character of a Jew; he is simulta-aneously involved in both the material and spiritual, or in this world and the next.

Despite the popular image, these two worlds are not separated by time - a this-worldly present and an other-worldly future. Instead, a Jew is bound to a higher spiritual reality even in the midst of this world. He is always ascending.

Every detail in the Torah contains a lesson which has a bearing on our conduct. The fact that Joseph's dreams referred to both earth and heaven and yet had a single meaning implies that the Jew must fuse his dual lives, that of the material and the spiritual, into one. Not only must there be no tension between the two worlds, but the material must contribute to his spiritual life until it is itself spiritualized.

Moscow's Jewish Elderly Receive Donations

PHILADELPHIA (JTA) — With severe food shortages forecast for the Soviet Union this winter, the Soviet Jewry Council of the Jewish Community Relations Council has undertaken a new project to assist the Soviet Jews most threatened — elderly people living in Moscow, struggling on small pensions and unable to stand on long lines.

Many of these elderly have children who have emigrated and who are no longer available to help their aging parents cope.

The prime minister also lashed out twice at Egypt, accusing it of both attacking Israel's immigration policy and failing to live up to the peace treaty it signed with Israel in 1979.

"I am sorry to say that to this day, Egypt has refused to fulfill many normalization agreements concluded 10 years ago and continues to oppose the abolition of the grotesque U.N. resolution equating Zionism with racism," he said.

But on an upbeat note, Shamir recalled that the last time he addressed the CJF General Assembly, two years ago in Cincinnati, large-scale aliyah was still a dream.

"In the interim," he said, "nearly 400,000 olim have entered Eretz Yisrael. We have registered a 10 percent increase in our population."

"By the time you meet three years from now," he told the American and Canadian Jewish leaders, "we expect a total of 1 million refugees and immigrants will have entered Israel from all over the world."

Shamir expressed hope that the Bush administration would soon approve guarantees enabling Israel to borrow $10 billion for immigrant resettlement from commercial banks.

Saying that Israelis "understand the present economic conditions of the United States," Shamir stressed that Israel was not seeking "additional financial aid, or debt forgiveness or loans."

"But one thing is clear: We shall not ask a single Jew in the Soviet Union, or Romania, or Ethiopia or elsewhere to wait until the loan guarantees are finally approved.

animosity towards you? Did they hold back?

Mark: No, I think that Israel is a funny place. If I were to rip around the Gaza Strip in an Israeli car with yellow Israeli license plates we probably would have been stoned and maybe killed. Because Jews are targets there.

I didn't go in advertising that I was an American Jew when I talked to Palestinians. Some may have known by my name, but I doubt it because it's not necessarily a Jewish name in most eyes. So, I think most saw me as an American rather than an American Jew. I did feel accepted by them. The reason is that among the Palestinians they often will use phrases; not just they hate the Israelis but that they hate the Jews. They mean the Israeli Jews and they are a little bit more open to non-Israeli Jews, I think. I'm not sure. The reason I'm not sure is that I was there also as a journalist and I think journalists are treated a different way. They are treated a different way because Palestinians realize that one of their only hopes is to win their battle in the court of the world opinion.

Herald: What about you as a Jew and a journalist, did you find it difficult not to sympathize with the Jews there?

Mark: Yes, as a rule I do have a sense of backing Israel and believing in Israel. And I did have some question about whether, or not, I could be an objective journalist. And I think that I found that I could. And the way to do that is to make sure you talk to people on the other side.

I went to extraordinary lengths to talk to the other side and an elaborate set of contacts to get me to the Gaza Strip. I stayed in the Gaza's only hotel overnight; got up at 4 am and moved among the "slave market," where 50,000 Gazans leave every morning on buses to go to Israel. I spoke to Palestinians in refugee camps, Palestinians on the West Bank, Palestinian kids who throw stones, Palestinian kids who don't throw stones — actually all Palestinian kids throw stones.

So, I went out of my way to hear what's in people's hearts, and to write about what's in their hearts. And I found that when you take that approach that you begin to see, even as a Jew who supports Israel, that Palestinians do have a case. You can't help, as a Jew, to sympathize with people who long for their own nation because they feel persecuted wherever they go. That's the history of the Palestinians. That's also the history of the Jews.

One of the things that I think struck me most was how similar the backgrounds of the Jews and Palestinians are. They are both exiled people, seeking a home. The only problem is that they both want the same place, [the same land.]

country lanes, survivors and refugees walk by and greet me with a handshake or a kiss. They bless me and they keep me, when I come and go.

I guess maybe I never grew up. I lift my eyes and tip my hat to people big and small who heal our wounds and give us cheer.

I think of the Maccabees and their candles like small torches that stand in the menorah. They hold the light up like the spirits of heroes guiding the way into the winter ahead. I think of them almost like yahrzeit flames, flickering with our multiple lives.

The Red Rooster - Something To Crow About

by Sarah Baird
Herald Associate Editor

One of the most remarkable things about the Red Rooster Tavern in North Kingstown is that it is not located in Manhattan or Boston's Back Bay, where many of the finest restaurants in the country can be found. Rather, the Red Rooster Tavern is a Rhode Island treasure, an elegant establishment featuring superb food and a distinctive atmosphere.

With five comfortable eating areas, the Red Rooster is perfect for intimate meals and private functions. The charming atmosphere is enhanced on Fridays and Saturdays, when a guitar player/singer entertains the after-dinner crowd in the spacious bar.

The owners, Frank Hennessey and Normand Leclair, opened their well-known restaurant in 1969, the Chinese Year of the Rooster, and continued to operate it until June of 1988, when it was sold. In June of 1991, they bought it back, so that today it operates under the original management.

The menu includes an ample selection of fine appetizers and main courses, including marinated artichokes, chateaubriand, poultry, duck and fresh seafood. For more adventuresome dining, try the sole baked with bananas, grapefruit juice and curry. All dinners include a choice of homemade soup, fruit jello salad or tossed salad and a potato and vegetable presentation. The extensive and informative wine list has been recognized nationally and won numerous awards.

Our meal began in one of the cozy rooms, where hurricane lamps burned on every table and the dark wooden ceiling beams lent warmth to the colonial setting.

The smoked salmon appetizer with capers, red onion and fresh lemon was tender and well-treated. The French onion soup, a classic, was presented in a pewter tureen with steaming, cheesy, sweet onions.

The freshly tossed salad was unlike most side salads, filling a deep bowl to overflowing. A tangy honey mustard dressing and hearty croutons cascaded over the crisp lettuce.

An interesting entree for those who love to sample is the Chicken Combination which includes three selections from the chef's recipes. The tender chicken breasts featured that evening were Chicken Indienne, Hawaiian Chicken and Pesto Chicken. Although somewhat sweet, the Indienne and Hawaiian are delicious alternatives to everyday chicken dishes. The Beef Wellington, one of the many house specialties, was cooked to perfection, the beef tender and rare and the pastry shell light and flaky. Beware, however, if you are a modest eater, this heavy dish with huge proportions may be out of your league. The steamed broccoli, butternut squash and oven-roasted potatoes rounded out our enormous feast.

After relaxing over a rich cup of coffee, it was hard not to be tempted by the many deserts choices, including: cheesecake with strawberries, assorted tarts, pies, ice creams and parfaits. The Chocolate Chestnut Torte with warm raspberry sauce provided the ideal ending to a satisfying meal. The dark rich chocolate torte was moist and fabulously dense; the sauce was subtle and complimentary. Another popular selection is the Kentucky Pie, a combination of bourbon, coconut, chocolate chips and chewy crust. Tasting like gourmet cookie dough with a kick, the pie was an exciting taste sensation.

The Red Rooster Tavern accepts major credit cards and is open Tuesday through Saturday for dinner and Sunday from one o'clock onward. Reservations are suggested.

Horowitz's Piano On Display

The Steinway piano performed on extensively by Vladimir Horowitz, one of this century's greatest piano virtuosos, will visit Avery Piano Co., 256 Weybosset St., Providence, R.I., as part of a 75-city tour of the United States. Members of the public are invited to play the piano in a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. Advance reservations must be made by calling 401-421-6000.

The piano, a Steinway Model D, nine-foot ebony concert grand, was Horowitz's touring instrument until the time of his death in 1989. Horowitz used this piano exclusively wherever he performed, including the historic concerts marking his return to Moscow and Leningrad, as well as concerts in Japan, Europe, Britain, and The White House. It is this piano which Horowitz plays in the video film produced about the concert tour of Moscow.

The Horowitz piano was in the Horowitz home for many years, and then used for his public concerts (in the US and abroad) and for recordings. At the time of his death, Horowitz was planning a return to Europe and Russia, and was planning to have the piano transported there. Vladimir Horowitz was a Steinway Artist for more than sixty years.

The piano is a standard Steinway concert grand, scrupulously maintained for Horowitz's use. Because Steinway pianos are not mass produced, each one has a distinct and unique personality. Horowitz chose one that would best suit his remarkable technique which called for an extremely fast and responsive action, with tremendous uplift (enabling the keys to stay right under his fingers).

The piano has been used in performance and recording by a few other musicians after Horowitz's death, notably Rudolph Firkusny, Horacio Gutierrez, Alicia de Larrocha, Murray Perahia, and Alexei Sultanov.

"Scots On The Rocks" At Brown

"Scots on the Rocks" by Andy Greer, Alaraby Johnson, and Patrick Snee will be presented by Brownbrokers and Brown University Theatre for eight performances, Wednesday, Dec. 4 - Wednesday, Dec. 11. All performances will begin at 8 p.m. in the Isabelle Russek Leeds Theatre, Waterman St. (at the marquee) on the Brown University campus. Tickets are priced at $9 and may be purchased or reserved by calling the Box Office at (401) 863-2838 during business hours Monday-Friday 11 a.m.-5 p.m. Tickets for senior citizens 65 and over are $7 and students with a valid ID are $5. Tickets are by reserved seating and very limited. Tickets for Friday and Saturday evenings are already sold out for this production, so it is best to purchase early for the remaining evenings. Ticket reservations are accepted by phone with either VISA/Mastercard; regrettably we no longer accept unpaid reservations.

"Scots on the Rocks" by Andy Gree, Alaraby Johnson, and Patrick Snee is a student written, produced, and directed musical production. "Scots on the Rocks" tells the tale of the MacFegg clan who is stuck in a mansion in Maine. There is a murderer on the loose and relatives are dropping like flies. Whodunit and who will be left alive to inherit the family fortune? This whacky romp of a murder mystery turned musical will leave your toes tapping and your hair standing on end!

Mozart's Requiem Concert At Brown

At 8:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 5, the Brown University Orchestra and Chorus will perform Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's Requiem in the University's Sayles Hall, located on the College Green. The concert, under the direction of conductor Paul Phillips, will commemorate the 200th anniversary of the composer's death on Dec. 5, 1791. Joining the ensemble will be a quartet of guest soloists - soprano Kathryn Jennings, mezzo-soprano Hillary Nicholson, tenor Frank Kelley and bass Arizeder Urreiztieta - as well as organist Frederick Jodry, acting director of choral activities at Brown.

Tickets for the Requiem concert, priced at $2 for those with Brown University identification and $4 for others, are available at the door before the concert or may be purchased the week of the performance at the Orwig Music Building, 1 Young Orchard Avenue.

Mozart died before completing the Requiem, just eight bars of music into one of the final movements, the Lacrymosa. The work was completed by Franz Xaver with the help of Mozart's musical sketches. As is common practice, the Brown ensemble will perform the Sussmayr version.

AROUND TOWN

Story and photos by Dorothea Snyder

Toby Belfer Brings Understanding

Gloria Teles Pushker spoke in a soft, relaxed pace though she had one foot out the door.

She was due at Maison Blanche, a New Orleans department store, where she has been a sales professional for many years.

So this story could appear this week, Gloria squeezed a telephone interview into her tight schedule. Once into our chat, I grew anxious I'd delay her but her southern ease and gentility made it seem she had all the time in the world.

We talked about Gloria's first and recently published children's book, Toby Belfer Never Had A Christmas Tree.

The story line revolves around Toby Belfer, a young Jewish girl living in a small, all-Christian Southern town. She, her parents, and grandmother celebrate Chanukah. They love Torah and follow its laws. Toby Belfer never had a Christmas tree and never wondered why. One December night, Toby invites her friends to celebrate Chanukah with her family just as Toby has joined in with their celebrations.

By a phone tour, Gloria guides me to Toby Belfer and the joyous jolt of being published. It all started 20 years ago.

"I'm a professional student first," she says of matriculating as a freshman at 44 when her oldest daughter had a master's degree and her other two were in pursuit of theirs.

"It was time for me to do something," she says bringing up a conversation she had with her sister about jealous people. "I told her the two things in the world about which I'm jealous are a master's degree and a flat tummy."

"She laughed and said I could have both if I want them bad enough."

That night, Gloria drove home from work and heard a radio commercial questioning listeners about their spare time. The message plugged continuing education for women at Loyola University.

"That was an omen," Gloria believes. "The next day, I signed up at Loyola for one class with the understanding that if I passed, I'd take another."

Passing with flying colors, she took one subject at a time for 11 years, earning a social studies degree. She continued in a graduate program at University of New Orleans.

Another turning point came when Gloria's niece suggested she take a storytelling course as a breather from her other courses. Her niece, a special ed. teacher, was aware of Gloria's love of reading to her grandchildren. The course would also count as graduate material.

Gloria took her niece's advice. "That ended sociology. From that moment on, I was a storyteller."

Gloria has taught Sunday School for 30 years. In 1982 she conducted a class project for her youngsters at Touro Synagogue in New Orleans.

"Overnight, I wrote a very elementary, simple and casual story and brought it in. I gave each child a page, telling them to illustrate the content."

"We xeroxed, colored, bound and spiraled the booklet for the children to give to their parents for Chanukah."

While in graduate school, Gloria was the only Jewish person in her class. All the Jewish authors were assigned to her. "I found it absolutely fascinating. I. B. Singer was my all-time favorite."

"One particular assignment called for a religious holiday story, I asked my professor if I could do my own."

She said nobody ever requested that before. Granted permission, my results gave me a standing ovation from my class.

"My teacher thought it was the best account of Chanukah she had read and pushed me to publish it. She brought it to New York on several occasions. We got many beautiful letters of rejection. I put the book aside."

Four years ago, Gloria's employer at the department store asked if she could write a story to go along with Mr. Bingle, a fluffy teddy bear doll for which he had the copyright.

She produced a 32-page children's book with one or two lines on each page about eyes and dedicated it to her blind cousin. Her employer loved it but was so busy opening 22 stores in Florida that he turned it over to someone else who had no interest in the project.

Weeding out her papers a year ago, Gloria came across Mr. Bingle and got permission from her employer at Maison Blanche if she could show the book to local publishers. The book was mailed to Pelican along with a letter from Joseph Sternberg, now deceased.

After a publisher's meeting, she left other written pieces. "Mr. Bingle was put on hold but they loved Toby Belfer and wanted to pursue it."

"I was out of my mind!" she exclaims.

Gloria was given free reins in choosing an illustrator for Toby Belfer Never Had A Christmas Tree. She deferred to the publisher who assigned Judith Hierstein, a non-Jewish illustrator, from Auburn, Maine.

Gloria Teles Pushker, author

"I'm so thrilled with her work!" Gloria exclaims. "Judith sought a rabbi's advice for approval of her sketches."

Reaction to Toby Belfer has been wonderful, she says with a bounce in her voice. A non-Jewish woman, who reviewed the book for a South Florida Parenting Magazine, wrote "Toby never had a Christmas tree. Toby never needed one. She knew her identity..."

"I'm just so delighted. The book has received wide acceptance among Christian congregations here. I've been invited to speak to a religion class at Loyola University and to read my book to a church school. I'm really thrilled that the gentile community is accepting this book."

Gloria was invited to the three-day Miami Book Fair last weekend where happily, Toby Belfer sold out.

"A non-Jewish school teacher bought the book to read to her class. She asked why I wrote the book."

"In one word... understanding. I just feel there's such better rapport between faiths if there is understanding."

"My children know all about Christmas because they celebrated it with their friends. Their friends in town knew all about Chanukah because they celebrated it with us."

Gloria praises her husband Ben for his support and for accompanying her to speaking engagements.

Together with dedications to Coleen Salley, the teacher who encouraged her, and to her late sister Bluma, Gloria's book is dedicated "To the Magnificent Seven - Adam, Paul, Melissa, Ryan, James, Matthew, and Courtney (whose grandmother's grandmother was really and truly named Toby Belfer)."

DO YOU KNOW?

The records at the Sugarman Memorial Chapel of your family's past funeral practices and preferences are the only such records dating back to the 1930s.

More often than not, our records are the only reliable source of a family's Yahrzeit dates; Hebrew names; maiden names; etc. That is probably why we are asked to provide such information to area Jewish families more than 100 times each month.

More than just a funeral home.

Sylvan Helps People Learn

 by Kathy Cohen
Herald Associate Editor

"When house and land are gone and spent Then learning is most excellent."

— Samuel Foote

There's a saying that goes, "It's not what you know but who you know." Well, we all know someone who is out of work. In these days of fierce competition in the job market, even the well-connected can be disconnected for lack of education and experience.

While most people realize the value of an education, many are intimidated by the educational process.

That's where Sylvan Learning Centers can help. Centrally located in Cranston, the Sylvan Learning Center is one of approximately 500 corporate centers throughout the United States and Canada. Nationally, the centers are considered to be exceptional in supplemental education.

Once a student has signed up for instruction and before classes actually begin, the first step he or she goes through is a diagnostic test. This includes several tests that will point out the strengths, weaknesses and specific needs. The results are charted and shared with the student, goals are set and then the instructor will prepare an outlined, individualized program to enhance the student's learning needs.

There are several programs to choose from including academic reading, basic mathematics, algebra, writing, study skills, and test preparation. In each program teachers incorporate time management, keyboarding, word processing and speed reading.

All teachers are state certified, have classroom experience and are trained to use Sylvan's materials in an individualized, instructional approach while constantly reinforcing positive attitudes towards learning. Students receive constant interaction from their instructors, from introduction of a skill to independent application and mastery of that skill. The teacher to student ratio is no more than one-to-three.

Motivation is also an important factor at Sylvan, as the teachers know how it can effect a student's learning ability. To reinforce motivation, Sylvan has created a system to build positive attitudes. Students receive recognition for their successes, tangible rewards, free time and consistent person-to-person contact. And everybody is on a first-name basis.

To ensure that all educational material meets Sylvan's high standards, each curriculum area is carefully field-tested for up to two years by the Sylvan Learning Corporation before it is available for the centers to use.

Sylvan is so positive their supplemental educational methods will work that they now offer two guarantees: one year's growth in the first 36 hours of instruction for remedial reading and math students and up to 125 points on the Scholastic Aptitude Tests, the highest guarantee available.

Steve Coutu with his Sylvan Learning Center instructor, Judy Damuth.

If they don't accomplish their goal, the student will get up to 12 free hours or the equivalent in tuition.

Sylvan instructs from preschool-age children to adults. There are no semesters, so classes can begin any time of the year.

The job market is getting more competitive every year whether the economy is bleak or not. So, it makes sense to brush up on your skills or to reinforce your child's learning skills at Sylvan Learning Centers. With one to two hours per week, each of us can become more acclimated to today's tough demands.

WHAT ARE MY RIGHTS?

 by
Louis M. Pulner, Esq.

Dear Attorney Pulner:

About two weeks ago my wife and I had dinner at what we thought was a very lovely restaurant in Newport. Unfortunately, within 2-3 hours of arriving back home, we both began to experience nausea and convulsions accompanied by fevers. It didn't take a genius to figure out that we had been the victims of some sort of food poisoning. Inasmuch as we had the same dinner that night, we were pretty comfortable that it had something to do with the fish entree that we ordered at the restaurant. Anyway, we were both treated at the hospital for a day and a half, and then stayed at home and recuperated for the better part of the week. The health department had been contacted and they've done their investigation, which showed that there was a problem with the particular kind of fish that we ate that evening. The owner of the restaurant has called us with his apologies and has asked us to be his guests at his restaurant in the near future as his way of further expressing his apology. Somehow, that just doesn't seem to be enough, is it?

M/M L.

Little Comptom

Mr. and Mrs. L.

The owner's expression of apology is only adequate if you deem it to be so. The fact is, the restaurant where you ate solicited your patronage, and by its very nature, offered to furnish to you various foods for immediate consumption. The restaurant owner impliedly warranted to you that the foods offered by him for your consumption were clean, wholesome, and free from harmful and injurious foreign substances, and further, that it was reasonably fit for human consumption. Needless to say, he has breached that warranty in your circumstance. I am sure he is truly sorry that this incident ever occurred, and that he would very much like to make it up to you by serving you an incredible meal at his expense sometime in the near future. However, under the law, you are entitled to all compensatory damages as a result of his negligence. For example, you indicated that you and your wife were home for the better part of a week as a result of this poisoning, and, therefore, if you were required to go without a week's pay, you would be entitled to this in the way of damages from the restaurant. Further, the restaurant would be responsible for your medical bills and any pain and suffering that you experienced as a result of your consumption of that tainted food. Again, the decision as to whether or not to pursue these remedies with or without a lawyer is totally up to you. I wish you both well.

by Ari Heckman

What a fest, a fun filled fest!
With all those dazzling lights!
Oh, how I wish it could last forever,
And not only for eight nights.
If I could I would, be the shamash
Perched upon my throne.
I would watch the dreidels spin,
And never feel alone.
In the Kitchen the latkes cook
This is what I like the best.

I wish I could eat them all year long,
And not just on this fest.

Hidden away in the window seat
Chocolate gelt is a nice treat.
Wrapped in foil gold and glittery,
Mmmm! It's good to eat.

Stacked up high on the Hallway bench
Wrapped in ribbons pretty and bright.
Eight presents in all shapes and sizes,
Ooooh, I can't wait until tonight!
Oh, how great!

Oh, how fun!
Such a fest for everyone!

Chanukah In My Home

by Elyssa Monzack

When I think of Chanukah at my home, it gives me a warm feeling. There are lots of things going on in my home on Chanukah. We all light men-orahs. My brother, sister, and I all pick the candles together, and then we light them. While the candles are glowing, my whole family plays dreidel.

Latkes are sizzling. My mom and dad tell us the story of Chanukah and why it's called the Festival of Lights and the Festival of Freedom. Then if we are good, we might get a present. But the best present is being together.

Chanukah In My Home

Written and Illustrated by Seth A. Konoff

I dedicate this book to the new Jewish settlers in Israel. I hope they have a great first Chanukah in their new homeland!

Read Books

One of the ways we celebrate Chanukah is by reading books about this holiday. I love reading books because they're interesting and fun!

Do Special Activities

In our home we do special Chanukah activities. We sometimes make presents and cards for each other. We decorate too, by hanging banners. I love doing Chanukah activities!

Eat Latkes

Mmm! I love to eat the latkes my mom makes! I love seeing how many I can eat! They're delicious with applesauce and sour cream!

Get Gelt

The gold wrapped gelt tastes so good. We get it each night of Chanukah with our presents! I save the real gelt that we get!

Get and Give Presents

What is there tonight? I love finding out what I have! Also, I like giving my brothers and parents presents. Do you like finding out what you have?

Play Dreidle

What will it land on? Playing dreidle each night of Chanukah is so much fun! We play for pennies.

Sing Songs

Each day of Chanukah we sing songs. We listen to them, too! Which is your favorite Chanukah song?

Learn The History

It is fun learning the history of Chanukah. We celebrate Chanukah because about 2,000 years ago the Syrians took the temple in Jerusalem from the Jews and put in idols. Matisias, a brave Jew, made a small army to fight the Syrians and take back the temple. Led by Judah, the Jews won after many battles and took back the temple! They found enough oil to light the eternal light for one

My Chanukah

by Kayla Monzack

On Chanukah my dad takes out a big box filled with yarmulkes. Some are blue, some red, some white with silver along the sides. Then, after my dad and brother have chosen their yarmulkes, and my mom, my sister, and I have chosen our scarves, we take out the box of Chanukah candles. We all pick out the colors we want to put in the Menorah. After everyone in my family has had a turn at lighting some candles, we all say the prayers together. Even Nathaniel, my 6-year-old brother tries, though he doesn't know the prayers. After that, we all kiss each other and say Happy Chanukah. I love staying up late at night watching the last flicker of the candle, and even though the candle melts away, the warmth in my heart from Chanukah doesn't.

day but it lasted eight days!

Light Menorah

Every night we add one candle to our menorah! With eight candles and the shamus, the menorah looks very beautiful!

The prayers we say when we light the menorah are said to thank G-d for the miracle that happened 2,000 years ago! Happy Chanukah!

Unfortunately, Chanukah tends to become a competition with Christmas, and we need to keep explaining the Chanukah celebration in context with the "freedom to be different."

As a mother of three children, I appreciate Chanukah the most when it is over. By then everyone has faced reality and knows what the holiday means to us - family, food and fun-filled discussions. We try to accentuate the values we find most important.

So, with my tongue wedged in my cheek, I proudly submit my Chanukah drawing in the "thirty-something" category. I hope it brings a smile to your faces!

Judy Monzack

Every year my children anxiously await your Chanukah Drawing Contest. We take out the crayons, markers and colored pencils and everybody goes to town! This year your theme interested me, and I was wondering why you didn't have a "thirty-something" category. An appropriate prize might be a new frying pan to whip up latkes, or perhaps a jar full of miracle oil that might last eight days!

Chanukah in our home accentuates the aromas of special foods and de-emphasizes the presents. Much discussion occurs about the concept of "The Festival of Freedom." In Rhode Island, Jews are a distinct minority, and we have to learn to respect all other ethnic groups, as we can only hope

Out Of The Past

(Reminiscences from the Archives of the Rhode Island Jewish Historical Association)

by Eleanor F. Horvitz

This year Chanukah will be observed in our homes, in our synagogues, and through the auspices of several organizations. In the December 27, 1935, issue of The Jewish Herald are news stories which tell us how Chanukah was celebrated in the past.

"The Pawtucket branch (Henry Friedman Lodge) of B'nai B'rith held a children's Chanukah party at which there were recitations by the children and professional entertainment by a magician. Candy and gifts were distributed to the children. Temple Beth Israel also held entertainment for the children of their congregation. The American Jewish Congress Juniors held a party which held 'Chanukah surprises.'

During the week of Chanukah the children of the Ahavat Shalom Hebrew School were presented a versatile Chanukah program which featured Yiddish folk songs sung by Cantor Louis Kahn of Baltimore. Also presented was a play, 'What is Chanukah?'

coached by Miss Litwin. The Ladies Auxiliary served as hostesses. Incidentally, the musical program included recitals in both Yiddish and English.

For adults the Sisterhood of Temple Beth Israel held a Chanukah supper with more than 150 guests in attendance. Mrs. Oscar Klemer, chairman, was reported to have prepared a fine dinner. After the dinner a play was presented under the direction of Mrs. Morris W. Shoham."

Out Of The Past

Chanukah celebrations was the one held at the Jewish Home for the Aged. In the same issue of The Jewish Herald there was the following news story:

"A Chanukah supper and entertainment featured the annual celebration of Chanukah at the Jewish Home for the Aged. Mrs. D. Kahanovsky, chairman of the entertainment committee of the Ladies Association, opened the program and introduced the superintendent of the Home, Isaac E. Feinstein. . . . The lighting of the Chanukah candles by Frances Goldin and Bernice Feinstein was followed by a Hebrew selection sung by Joseph Kesler. Guest speaker of the evening was Rabbi Abraham I. Schechter, who compared the Chanukah candles with the young and the old.

Jacob and Joseph Berman then played accordion and clarinet solos, and were followed by a saxophone solo by James Gerstenblatt. Several vocal selections were given by Miss Sarah Pressman who was accompanied by Miss Ruth Silverman. Several selections were played by an orchestra composed of the following: Ruth Cohen, Saul Cohen, David Goodman and Fred Dunder, and the singing of Hatikvah was led by Martin

Cohen."

The accompanying photograph from the Archives of the Rhode Island Jewish Historical Association captures for posterity those who attended the dinner. Residents of the Home, guests and the director, Isaac E. Feinstein with his family, are shown. In the background on a sideboard can be seen the partially lit Chanukah menorah.

THE FESTIVAL OF LIGHTS

Chanukah At Warwick Mall

Chanukah at Warwick Mall - an annual event sponsored by Chabad Lubavitch of Rhode Island is one of the most enjoyable Chanukah celebrations in Rhode Island. Hundreds have participated in this celebration of Jewish pride and unity in past years.

This year's program will take place on Saturday evening, December 7, at 7:30 p.m. in the center of the mall where you can meet Judah the Macabee, join in the Lighting of the Menorah and sing along to Chanukah songs with plenty of holiday spirit. Special prizes will be given out to the children. For the children, dreidles and Chanukah gelt will be distributed.

The Menorah will be displayed at the center of the mall throughout the entire week of Chanukah. Holiday candle-lighting guides will be available free of charge as a service to the community.

The Holiday of Chanukah is a festival of victory and celebration for all times, highlighted by the kindling of the Menorah each night of the holiday. "It is a holiday replete with traditions and with display of Jewish pride and unity," said Rabbi Laufer, director of Chabad in Rhode Island, "yet it also contains a universal message for people of all faiths, which is that ultimately good will overpower all forces of evil. There will be freedom over oppression and light over darkness."

Throughout the holiday, Chabad will be visiting the hospitals and nursing homes to make sure that those who are unable to make it to a Chanukah party or celebration will not be left out of the Chanukah spirit. Chabad will also be distributing Menorahs at the Brown, RISD and Johnson & Wales campus.

Chabad will also be having several "Menorah mobiles" traveling throughout the entire state.

For further information on any of these or upcoming programs, please call 331-8509 or 273-7238.

Simcha Singles' Chanukah Program

Simcha Singles of Temple Torat Yisrael will sponsor "Let There Be Light . . . And Song," a Chanukah Program on Monday, Dec. 2, at 7:45 p.m.

The program will be led by Temple Torat Yisrael's own Chazzan, Shimon Gewirtz who has been with Torat Yisrael for over 2 years. He and his wife Ilana have performed with many groups including Hadassah, Senior Citizen Groups and Jewish Federation.

Admission to the program is $5 and participants in this Chanukah program are asked to bring a $2 same sex gift to exchange and a gift for a young child who would otherwise go without.

Potato latkes will be served. The temple is located at 330 Park Ave., Cranston.

THE FESTIVAL OF LIGHTS

Kislev 5752 - December 1991

Light A Candle For Freedom And Renewal

In the USSR today vast changes are taking place - both positive and negative. Soviet Jews are struggling, as the Maccabees did, for a Jewish future, the right to live freely as Jews and to emigrate from the USSR... And there has been progress. Tonight let us rededicate ourselves to Soviet Jewry, to expand on the progress made so far, and work to resolve the outstanding issues facing over 2 million Jews remaining in the USSR. Tonight let us light a candle in solidarity with Soviet Jews whose determination embodies the spirit of Chanukah.

As we gather to light a candle each night of Chanukah let us rededicate ourselves to Soviet Jewry and pledge to undertake any of these expressions of support.

- Send Jewish books in Russian language to schools and cultural centers.

- Send a small Chanukya and a box of Chanukah candles to Jews in the USSR.

- Make phone calls to refuse-niks, Jewish cultural activists, and Soviet Jews involved in Jewish education.

- Write letters to Soviet and American officials, on behalf of remaining refuseniks, registration of Jewish organizations and cultural societies, and against anti-Semitism.

- Re-educate your local Jewish community about the fluid and dynamic situation of Jews in the USSR today.

- Participate in the Community to Community Project in support of emerging communities in the USSR.

- Plan a visit to a remote Soviet city that has an identified Jewish community.

- Support Jewish organizations active in assisting Jews in the USSR such as NCSJ, UJA, Operation Exodus, JDC and the plethora of organizations assisting in the renewal of Soviet Jewish communal life.

Contact NCSJ for further assistance with any of these projects. New York office: 10 East 40th Street, Suite 1701, New York, N.Y. 10016, (212) 679-6122, Fax: (212) 686-1193. Telex: 237311 NCSJ.

Pumpkin, Pickles And The Maccabees

by Daniel Rogov

(WZPS) Most people know that Chanukah celebrates the victory of the Maccabees over the Syrians in 167 BCE. They know the story of how the Maccabees, upon re-entering the Temple, found a single cruse of oil, sufficient for only one day but which lasted for eight. What they don't know (and hold on to your chanukiot!) is that the Maccabees and their comrades devoted much of their time to the pleasures of the dinner table.

Even though the Maccabees were firmly opposed to the Hellenization of the Holy Land, they were nevertheless influenced by the dining habits of the Greeks, and, like the Greeks, enjoyed the aroma of roasting meat on an open spit.

Although no cookbooks have survived from those days, a variety of essays of Greek authors such as Glaucus of Locris, Mithaecus and Heraclitus, have. After visiting the Holy Land they wrote treatises on subjects as diverse as gastronomy, pickles and vegetables.

Cold Spiced Chicken

2½ cups dry white wine
1 cup sugar
1 cup honey
2 tsp. ground cloves
½ cup seedless raisins
1 Tbs. lemon peel, grated
5 egg yolks

1½ kilos cooked chicken, diced

In a saucepan combine the wine and sugar. Bring to a boil and let boil, stirring occasionally, until thickened (about 15 minutes). Remove and reserve ½ cup. To the saucepan add the honey, cloves, raisins and lemon peel. Boil again, reduce the flame and simmer for 20 minutes.

In a mixing bowl beat the egg yolks lightly and stir in the reserved wine syrup. Pour the mixture back into the saucepan and cook, stirring constantly, over a low flame until thickened. Do not boil. Stir in the chicken pieces.

Let cool and then refrigerate until chilled through. Serve on a well chilled plate.

THE FESTIVAL OF LIGHTS

Touro Sponsors Chanukah Fair

Touro Synagogue of Newport is sponsoring its Third Annual Chanukah Gift and Book Fair through December 8, announced Rabbi Dr. Chaim Shapiro, the congregation's spiritual leader. The Fair will feature many new items that are suitable for both children and adult gifts, as well as the standard holiday items, like candelabrum, Israeli candles, etc. The Fair will be conducted in the Touro Community Center at 85 Touro Street, at the corner of Division Street. The hours for the Fair are:

Daily 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.
Fridays 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Sundays 12 noon to 4 p.m.
Closed on Saturdays and Thanksgiving Day

There is no admission charge. This project originated from numerous requests for Chanukah religious articles, that are not available from commercial sources in this area. It was expanded to provide both suitable books and gifts, reflecting the proper holiday spirit. Chanukah, the Jewish festival of lights, will be celebrated this year by Jews throughout the world from Sunday evening, December 1 through Monday, December 9. Touro Synagogue is also sponsoring a free Community Chanukah Celebration on Sunday afternoon, December 8, from 4:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. in the Touro Community Center.
