ZIONIST MEMBERSHIP DRIVE PUSHED THROUGHOUT STATE; NEW YORK LEADER TO SPEAK

Meetings Slated Sunday in Providence and Woonsocket

Dr. Berger Issues Plea

Self-respect, courage and vision in meeting the problems which assail world Jewry on all sides demand hugely increased enrollment in the Zionist Organization of America, Dr. Illie Berger, outstanding leader of the movement here, declared today. Dr. Berger is chairman of the committee now conducting an intensive membership drive throughout Rhode Island.

In connection with the campaign, Abraham Goldberg of New York, governing board member of the Zionist Organization of America, will give two addresses in Rhode Island next Sunday, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in the foyer of the Providence Biltmore Hotel and at 8:30 in Congregation B'nai Israel in Woonsocket.

Two Groups to Meet

Dr. Berger pointed out that Zionist units in Providence, Pawtucket and Central Falls will attend the Providence meeting, several hundred persons being expected, while the Woonsocket district will hear Mr. Goldberg in that city. In connection with the latter program, the Hebrew Choral Society will give a recital.

Mr. Goldberg plays a prominent role in the guidance of the Zionist movement in America, his participation dating back over many years. Born in Russia 49 years ago, he became interested in Zionism as a youth. For almost 30 years he has been a prolific writer in both Yiddish and Hebrew. For 18 years he was editor of Dos Yiddische Folk, at the same time contributing many articles, monographs and brochures. He is author of three books in Hebrew and two in Yiddish.

For 18 years he has been a member of the Zionist actions committee, taking keen interest in every phase of Zionist activity. He was first secretary of Order Sons of Zion, was president of Paole Zion and is a member of the Administration of the Jewish National Fund. He aided Dr. Weizmann in 1921 to organize the Keren Hayesod in America and championed the idea of the Jewish Agency being extended to include non-Zionists.

Expert on Palestine

Mr. Goldberg has made a series of visits to Palestine, studying every aspect of the Jewish development in Palestine. He was vice president of the American Jewish Congress and is a believer in the doctrine of Jewish self-aid. In addition to other publications, he is a frequent contributor to the press.

A parade was formed of the committee members bearing gifts, led by Mrs. Morris S. Wahlman, treasurer, who carried in her arms a golden treasure chest containing the donations. Each was attired in a blue and white apron and cap, made in the form of a six pointed star called the "Star of David."

The program chairman Mrs. Morris L. Cowen introduced the distinguish-

Palestine Concern Declares Dividend

Report Also Shows Gain in Farm Prices and Building Boom

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (JTA) — A dividend of one percent for the sixth month period ending December 31, 1933, was declared by the Palestine Economic Corporation.

Bernard Flexner, chairman of the Board of Directors, in his announcement that the company had been placed on a dividend basis, said:

"The action of the Directors in voting the first dividend on the stock of the corporation is significant in that it follows the original plan and purpose for which the company was organized in 1926." A report accompanying the announcement revealed that prosperity prevails in Palestine. Figures disclose that there is considerable expansion in prices for agricultural products and a substantial increase in the building trade.

The export value of the 1932 orange crop alone, 1,701,000 pounds ($8,777,000 at present rate of exchange) exceeded total exports for 1931, and the export of manufactured articles increased by 23 percent. The favorable economic conditions prevailing are attributed mainly to the influx of immigrants who

Dickstein Now Asks More Drastic Probe Into Nazi Activities

Urges Congress Create
Special Board to Push Inquiry

Rainey Seen Favorable

NEW YORK, Jan. 12—The strong possibility that Congress will authorize an even more sweeping investigation into Nazi activities in the United States than even his committee was able to accomplish was indicated by Congressman Dickstein during a visit back here in between Congressional sessions.

Dickstein, who introduced a resolution calling for such a probe and authorizing an appropriation of $25,000 for it, said he would probably accept chairmanship of the committee to be created. Congressional leaders, Dickstein added, appeared keenly interested in the revelations of his inquiry and appeared concerned enough about Nazi propaganda methods to agree on the need to probe further into its effects.

Stresses Flaunting of Law

The New York solon stressed violations of the law and breaches of international diplomatic ethics he has uncovered in running down Nazi agents flooding the country with smuggled circulars and other propaganda. He indicated further that he would take the floor of the House in a dramatic appeal to awaken the nation's rulers to the menace of Hitler's thousands of secret agents scattered throughout the country in a far-reaching system of "cells" all joined together to "sell" Nazism to America.

Dickstein's attitude was the reverse of that of a week ago when he announced that in deference to the investigation, which he said he believed would be impeded with a Jew as chairman, he would not seek the chairmanship of the committee. He attributed his change of opinion to the spirit with which his resolution was received by Congress and to the appeals of fellow members who urged him to head the committee.

"From my conversations with other members of Congress," Mr. Dickstein said, "it is quite evident that the resolution asking the creation of a special committee to handle the Nazi investigation will be passed. I have the assurances of members of the committee on rules, in whose hands the resolution has been placed, that they favor the adoption of the resolution."

Dickstein stated that he intended seeking the floor during the coming week when he will discuss Nazi ac-

Fewer Readers of Yiddish Due to Assimilation, Writers Complain

MOSCOW, (JTA) — Yiddish writers in Soviet Russia are losing their reading public, because Jewish youth is becoming assimilated and does not want to read any more Yiddish, many of the Yiddish writers attending the Conference of Yiddish Soviet writers just held here, complained.

"Our readers are deserting us," the writers declared. "They prefer to read Russian literature, they are satisfied with reading the famous Russians, and they feel able to do without any more Yiddish literature."

"What is the use of our continuing to write in Yiddish if we have no readers?"

With such a situation, the conference was told, it is not surprising that some of the Yiddish writers are trying to find a place in the great literatures, Russian and Ukrainian, where they are more read.

Several other writers, however, took a more optimistic view. The fact that Yiddish literature is not read so much today, they said, is due rather to the aloofness of the Yiddish writer from the problems of Soviet Jewish life. The Jewish masses are making rapid cultural and political progress, and they want to be provided with reading matter which appeals to their present outlook.

If the Yiddish writers will deal with the actual problems of the day, they said, they will have plenty of readers. They also blamed the faulty circulation of Yiddish literature. Text books and educational works in Yiddish have a circulation of over 50,000 copies, they said, which is proof that there are Yiddish readers. And if works of Yiddish literature command a circulation of only 2,000 or 3,000 copies, it is evident that the fault lies with the lack of appeal of the particular type of literature that is turned out, and not with the lack of interest in Yiddish as a language.

LADIES' ASSOCIATION ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Association was held Wednesday at the Home with several hundred members in attendance. Mrs. Harry Shatkin presided, and the following reports were presented by Mrs. Morris Berry, vice president, for the functioning committees: Mrs. Samuel N. Deutch, chairman of the admissions committee, stated: "At the first meeting, the committee had gone over the family situations and the individual problems of the 25 residents at the Orms Street Home, and have passed to accept them on the same conditions upon which they had been previously admitted."

"Since then, the committee has had periodic meetings, considering applications as they came in. Altogether, 75 applications have been considered in all, 38 male and 37 female. Out of these 60 have been admitted and five are pending. The population of the Home is as follows:

Number admitted from Orms Street, 11, males, 14 females—25. Number of applications considered, 38 males, 37 females—75. Additional admitted, 19 males, 11 females—30. Number died and discharged, 6 males, 6 females—12. Living at the institution now, 24 males, 19 females—43.

The policy of the admissions committee has been to give preference to those people who are completely destitute, and have no children, or whose children are unable to take care of them. As a matter of fact, only five admissions have been made into the Home of old people who either had some money of their own, or whose children are able to pay for their upkeep, the balance represents 53 old men and women who had practically nothing at the time of their admission. Of the 43 now living at the Home, there are only three who are paying partially for the upkeep."

Mrs. David Kahanovsky presented a report of the entertainment for the year, including that of the Chanukah, Purim, and Passover entertainments, and special gifts in clothing and other articles that were presented to the old folks during the past year.

Mrs. Harry Shatkin delivered her annual message, urging the ladies present to cooperate with the Home in securing sufficient support from the community, since the needs of the Home are increasing. A number of people have as yet not been approached for support of this worthy institution.

The nominating committee, consisting of the following ladies: Mrs. Jennie Goldsmith, chairman; Mrs. S. Adler, Mrs. M. Dressler, Mrs. M. Mellon, Mrs. A. White presented a slate of officers for the coming year as follows: Honorary presidents, Mrs. Isaac Woolf, Mrs. Ephraim Rosen; honorary vice presidents, Mrs. Harry Shatkin, Mrs. Jennie Goldsmith; president, Mrs. Harry Shatkin; vice presidents, Mrs. Morris Berry, Mrs. Samuel Ganzer; treasurer, Mrs. Max Siegal; financial secretary, Mrs. George Press; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Lyon Marcus; assistant corresponding secretary, Mrs. Leo Miller; recording secretary, Mrs. Isadore S. Low; auditor, Mrs. Milton Fuld.

The nominating committee recommended that the date of election be changed to October, to conform with the election of the men's organization.

The Golden Book, presented by the Ladies' Association to the Home, was on display and the first inscription is made, commemorating the event of the Operalogue Tea held on Wednesday, December 6, reciting each of the names of the patronesses and donors who participated.

Entertainment followed in the form of a tea, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Jacob Ernstof, and the members of the board of directors as hostesses. Attractive tea services were set on tables, with decorations furnished by the ladies.

Dreams Realized

By NINA KAYE

For a long minute after Leonard Harris proposed to her, Judith felt man was silent. Sitting there beside him in the secluded intimacy of his car, Judith thought swiftly of what it would mean to her if she accepted Leonard.

This car would be hers, this gleaming, glistening car which made all the neighbors stop and stare whenever it slid up before her door.

The charming house Leonard had inherited from his parents, the position which went with being the wife of Leonard Harris, one of Clayton's leading attorneys. The clothes and jewelry he could buy for her. And Leonard.

From beneath her veil of lashes, Judy's gaze leaped the length of him, dark and good-looking, bearing with such suave assurance the success which was his.

He was so very good-looking. Such good company. So successful. So everything she wanted in a husband. She liked him immensely. And yet—liking him immensely didn't somehow, seem enough.

She sighed, the gloved tip of her finger tracing the silver markings on the ash receiver. Her mother would call her crazy, would want to know what in the world she wanted.

And how could she say what it was she wanted, when she didn't really know what it was? She wanted to feel something new and different! She wanted not to think of Leonard's house and car and success. She wanted not to think of anything but Leonard — and her!

Leonard leaned toward her, his hand touching her arm eagerly. "You don't have to make up your mind right away, Judy. I know it's a big decision for a girl to make, changing her whole life — don't say 'no' now, Judy. Think it over, won't you, and then let me know."

A wave of relief swept through Judy. She didn't have to give up all that was real and tangible for a wild dream! She could dream her dream a while longer. Leonard would be there, waiting for her, if she didn't find what she wanted.

"Thanks, Leonard," she whispered, letting him take her hand between his. "I — I really can't make up my mind all of a sudden, like this. No, don't come up to the door with me. I'll just slip in. I want to be alone — to think. Goodnight."

"Goodnight, dearest. I'll call you tomorrow."

Judy ran softly up the steps to the porch. She didn't want to wake her mother. For, she knew her mother would be able to read on her face that something had happened, would force her to tell. And then, Judy knew, her fate was sealed. Her mother would never rest until she had talked and pleaded and threatened Judy into accepting Leonard.

A shadow detaching itself from the shadows on the porch rose up as she inserted her key in the lock.

Judy stifled a cry as she recognized the careless slouch, the wide grin, the laughing eyes.

"Dave Stein!" she gasped. "What are you doing?"

"Nice way to greet a returned traveler! What would I be doing here but waiting for you? Your mother wouldn't let me wait inside, said you wouldn't be home until after midnight. Guess it's that now. I fell asleep."

Something strange and clamorous stirred inside Judy. Her hand, still fumbling with the key, shook. She attempted to keep the quaver out of her voice. "Of course she wouldn't let you wait. She thought, rightly, that tomorrow would do as well as tonight."

He caught her elbow, swung her roughly toward him. "Would it?" he demanded coolly and, tilting her chin, he kissed her.

There in his arms on the wind-swept porch, Judy's heart was singing. This was what she had been waiting for! This was what she had been dreaming! Why hadn't she known it! Why hadn't she realized it was Dave, careless, arrogant Dave who went striding off to the city three years ago and hadn't even sent her a post card.

He drew her back again. "You are glad to see me, aren't you, Judy? And for heaven's sake don't start asking me why I didn't write or what I've been doing! I'm here now and we're going to have some of our old gay times together, aren't we?"

Helplessly, futilely, delightedly, Judy nodded.

Judy wasn't home the next day when Leonard called her. And when she came dashing in at dinner time to change her dress before going on to a dance with Dave, she was too rushed to call him back. Besides, it was too late to get him at his office and he hadn't had time to reach home yet.

And in the days that followed, it seems that she didn't have a moment to herself. Dave wanted to take in as much fun as he could before settling down to work in his father's store and she was hardly out of bed in the morning before the sound of his automobile horn summoned her for the day's outing.

Judy tried to shrug away her mother's expostulations. "Judy, Leonard Harris called you every day this week! Aren't you going to call him back? Why are you running around with Dave Stein? What will you do when he goes away again for three years? Judy, you're acting like a crazy!"

Judy stopped brushing her hair long enough to say, "Oh, Mama, you always think the worst! How do you know Dave is going to go off again? He came back to work for his father."

"Does he want to marry you?"

"He's hardly been home a week, Mama! You don't think a man speaks of marriage the first day he sees a girl!"

Almost as if Dave had known of that conversation, his talk swung to marriage as he headed the car toward Canuga Lake where they were going for a swim.

"You know, Judy," he said, his handsome, bronzed young face alive with smiles. "You're the only girl I know who could spend as much time with me as you have this week without trying to steer the conversation around toward marriage."

Judy's laugh floated back with the wind. "Don't be too sure about that! Only this morning, Mama asked me if you wanted to marry me!"

"And what," he asked, suddenly serious, "did you tell her?"

"Oh," Judy said lightly, "I said a man doesn't speak of marriage the first day he sees a girl."

"Especially," Dave said, his words clipped and short, "if he hasn't any intention of marrying the girl. Or any girl, for that matter. That's why I like to be with you, Judy," he went on breezily, "because you're the only girl who can understand the way I feel and still enjoy going out with me!"

Somehow Judy managed to live through the day. Somehow, she managed to laugh and swim and dance. Not by a tear, not by a sigh, did she reveal to him the pent-up hurt inside her.

But when she was home, she had no impulse to fling herself across her bed and give vent to the tears she had been holding back all day.

Standing grim and determined in the center of her own room, she raised her head defiantly. "That's what I was waiting for! That, when I could have had Leonard and his love!"

Swiftly, silently, fearful that her mother would hear her, Judy tiptoed down the hall to the telephone and called Leonard's number.

"I must speak to Mr. Harris at once," she told the sleepy voice which answered. "It's very important."

And then, when Leonard's reassuring "Hello" came over the wire, Judy sighed contentedly. "This is Judy, Leonard. I haven't had a chance to call you before, but I wanted —"

"Oh, I quite understand," he replied. "When you didn't call and I heard you were going about with Dave Stein, I knew that was your answer, Judy."

"But Leonard, it's not," she gulped. "I found out it's you I love!"

Leonard spoke hesitantly. "Judy, if I could believe — if only I wouldn't have to think it was because Dave doesn't want to —"

"It's not, it's not that Leonard! Oh please believe me, Leonard! If Dave hadn't come back I'd have married you without knowing I really loved you! And all my life, all my life I'd have been longing for his kind of love. Longing for it because I didn't know what it really was!"

"Judy!" his voice was choked with joy. "Judy, it's not too late to come over to your house is it? I must see you, Judy! Must kiss you now, tonight!"

"Of course," Judy whispered. "It couldn't be otherwise — when you're in love."

The members were taken on a visionary trip to Palestine, a composite picture was painted, and the work of Hadassah described as a spaceless, timeless, eternal something.

Torgsin Stores Increase from 100 to More than 1000

Moscow, U. S. S. R. — "Torgsin," which is the Russian abbreviation for "State Corporation for Trade with Foreigners in the U. S. S. The Torgsin building department now reports more than 1000 stores completed and new ones opening almost daily.

The plan is to cover the entire country with this chain which sells only for foreign currency or gold. Merchandise is mailed to recipients of remittances from abroad if they do not dwell near enough to a store.

SWASTIKA ON ARAB ORANGES DISPLEASES BERLIN ARYANS

Berlin (JTA) — Official circles here are protesting against the misuse of the swastika, official Nazi emblem, found printed on the wrappers of Palestine oranges intended for export to Germany. German authorities are displeased that the German national symbol is being used for advertising purposes.

Oranges marked "Saint Elijah, Jaffa," were wrapped in paper bearing a picture of the prophet surrounded by swastikas. The wrappers were found to have been used by an Arab exporting firm.

The Rising Tide of NEW Savers

There's been a depression . . . you may have heard it mentioned.

A couple of years back, it slowed up temporarily the numbers of folks who were opening new Old Colony share accounts. Our rate of growth did not continue as rapidly as in some previous years.

But for many months now, the numbers of new accounts opened have shown a resumption of the steady upward trend. In November alone over 500 such new accounts were opened here . . . and in December, of course, an even larger number.

More and more young folk have learned the wisdom of steadily accumulating "nest eggs". More and more of them have become "savings-and-loan conscious". Our message of thrift is not directed to a mass meeting but to a parade, and the marching ranks have caught its meaning.

The new generation advances, rediscovering for itself one of the finest methods ever devised for achieving financial independence . . . and one that has stood the test over and over!

ZIONIST MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

If ever there was an organization that has, in the face of tremendous handicaps, proved its worth and earned the universal support of Rhode Island Jewry along with others of our people throughout the world, it is the Zionist Organization of America which is now in the midst of a membership campaign.

For many, many years a few far-seeing men, inspired by the conviction that there is only one real solution to the centuries old Jewish problem, dedicated all their strength and their energies to preaching the gospel of a Homeland in Palestine for Jews. They cited the persecutions down through the ages, pogroms and wholesale killings that caused Jews to wander from nation to nation, ever seeking rest and refuge, a haven peacefully and respectfully to reside and prosper.

In every nation of Europe, even though Jews have contributed tremendously to the intellectual, business and political life, they have at some time or other — often continuously — been the goats. Even in the United States their lot is not a completely happy one. To these pioneers Palestine was the only answer and events during the past few years have gone far to prove them right.

We say that qualifiedly, for nobody can blink at the absolute fact that it is physically impossible for Palestine to accommodate the millions of Jews scattered over the face of the earth. At the same time, many hundreds of thousands would not dream of leaving their present positions. But Palestine remains the greatest single haven for persecuted Jews, and to Zionism goes the chief credit for building up that country.

We who are comparatively comfortably off here in America should lend every support to those of our people who are in desperate straits elsewhere throughout the world. Membership in the Zionist Organization is one of the best means that we know.

THE LAST STRAW?

Bismark, the iron chancellor of the last century, for 10 years tilted with the great windmill of the Roman Catholic Church before he capitulated, finally realizing he could not make that institution an instrument of political policy. Hitler, the black chancellor far inferior to Bismark in strength of will but just as tricky and underhanded, attempts now the same struggle with the German Protestant Evangelical Church.

Through his Reichsbishop, Ludwig Mueller, the Nazi chieftain resorts to strong arm measures to bring the unbending church within the control of the Nazi state, and thus invites what even so early in the struggle seems to be the sternest opposition he has yet faced in his mad career.

Many hundreds of pastors promptly flaunt his dictatorial decrees, issued through Mueller, thundering their refusal to be used as tools for Nazism. All the rugged traditions of the church are now mustered against him, with sympathetic support of the Catholic church. Whatever success Hitler has had in persuading millions to surrender their economic and political individuality, he faces quite a different situation when he would rob them of the religious conscience.

The sum total of his program to date has been to ruin 600,000 Jews, bringing upon the people of Germany the extremely painful boycott; to alienate powerful labor organizations the world over by abolishing them in the Reich, which just about turned down the screws of economic pressure upon that country; to defy world efforts for peace and an end of the bloody way of settling disputes, and now to invite the wrath of hundreds of fighting pastors and their congregations. Maybe that will be the last straw.

By DAVID SCHWARTZ

A Jewish Book

My good friend, Mr. Day, the manager of the Hotel Imperial, where the present writer makes his abode, is a great lover of Jewish works. That is why, presumably, every room at the Hotel contains that well known Jewish book called the Bible.

I must say that of late years I have been neglectful of my spiritual reading, but the other night, after a dinner topped off with a mint julep, reminiscent of my old Southern days, I felt benignly spiritual, and I picked it up and began to read the latter part of the work — the New Testament.

Communists! I Hiss!

Somehow I found myself in the Acts of the Apostles and I read how Peter baptized the early Christians, and then the passage went on to say that these early Christians were of the faith and held all property in common.

"Communists," I hissed. I thought of sending a marked copy of the work to Herr Hitler. He is so down on the Old Testament, yet the Old Testament says nothing against private property in land. It regarded the land as the common property of the whole people. But the New Testament goes the whole way to Communism. And so Herr Hitler, if he is consistent, has much better reason for blacklisting the New Testament instead of the Old.

Communism in New Testament

The Christian part of the Bible is more communistic, and I think the Jewish element in Communism in general has been vastly exaggerated. If Marx did not believe in private property, there were many Christians long before Marx who expressed quite similar views. There was Robert Owen — there was Cabot — there was Saint Simon — the whole school of pre-Marxian socialists.

Who Are Communists?

I hope I shall not be misunderstood. I certainly do not regard it as shameful for any Jew to be a Communist. Although not one myself, I rather think that in a certain sense, a belief in Communism reflects credit upon the person. It reveals at any rate that this person has a sense beyond the meum — a sense of social idealism.

But what I want to point out hereby is that the facts happen to be that some of the foremost Communists have been Christians and also that some of the most critical and antagonistic works towards Communism have been written by Jews.

Professor Oppenheimer

If Herr Hitler were really sincere about his Communist talk, for instance, I know of no man whose economic philosophy would have been more valuable to him than that of the Jewish economist of Germany, Professor Franz Oppenheimer.

Oppenheimer has really developed an economic philosophy which rationally challenges Communism and presents a solution of the economic problems that can certainly not be completely ignored.

As far as Hitler is concerned, I fail to see any economic program that could stand any intellectual test.

Hitler's Insincerity

Oppenheimer by a different approach independently arrived at the same conclusion that Henry George came to — namely, that the evils of the economic system spring from the land factor. He worked out the case in a brilliant masterful manner.

I do not intend here to go into any elaboration of those views. All that I want to point out here is that there was a Jew who had worked out a system which even its critics will admit presents some intelligent challenge to the Communist philosophy. A challenge of the intelligence — not of the color of shirts.

And yet here is a leader — our friend Hitler — who professes to want to fight Communism and yet makes the man who presents the one intelligent challenge — a pariah and exile.

And let it not be thought that Oppenheimer was merely a lone voice crying in the wilderness. He had quite a school in Germany and in Holland a parliamentary party was formed which advocated his views.

Two Critical Books

If I were asked to name the two books most challenging of the Communist philosophy, I would name two books written by two Jews, namely, Oppenheimer's "Weder Kapitalismus noch Kommunismus" and Max Hirsch's "Democracy versus Socialism."

A Strabismic World

But to come back to our original point. It smacks of little sense for Christians, whose New Testament does represent a Communist vein to attack Jews for being Communistic. Are then the Jews too Christian for Christians?

It reminds me somehow of a story I heard the other day — of three little boys in Germany.

Two were little Nazi boys and the third was a Jewish lad.

Someone asked the Nazi boys what their names were.

Replied No. 1: "My name is Jakob."

Replied No. 2: "My name is Joseph."

Then the Jewish boy was asked. And he replied: "My name is Adolf."

If you gather my moral — it is something to the effect, that this is a strabismic world, my friends, very strabismic.

Words and Music

I see where Gertrude Stein's poem on Napoleon or something or other, which reads like the following:

"The red white lily red white red white lily lily red" is going to be put to music.

Won't someone else put the Chinese laundry ticket to music or maybe the New York Telephone directory with its 28 pages of Cohens? The 28 pages of Cohens would certainly make a good refrain. That is to say, I hope they will refrain from printing more than 28 pages of them.

Latest by Katz

A man I envy is my colleague, Ateph Katz. In a day when material problems hang so heavily on us, Katz can lose himself in the composition of verse. Just off the press is Katz's "Dos Telleri Fun Himl." There is the rhythm of Hiawatha in it and there's philosophy too and a

Jacob Wassermann Renowned Novelist Passes Away at 60

By HARRY SALPETER
(Copyright 1933 by the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, Inc.)

It is hard to believe that Jacob Wassermann is dead. Because his work had the vitality of that which is done in a man's prime, and not when his finest energies have been spent. I saw him but a few years ago and he did not then look like a man who would soon be sixty, the age at which he passed away. To be sure, these have been years which would rapidly age most German and Austrian Jews, but one always thought of Wassermann as possessing spiritual reserves with which to counteract the agents of decay.

The sense of shock and surprise with which one accepts the fact of his death is tempered a little by the recognition that his best work was probably done and that he is secure in his reputation as a great novelist and a marvelous story-teller. In a sense it was fitting that his death should come now, in the very season which saw the publication in English of his autobiography, "My Life as German and as Jew." Publishing enterprise rendered him a slighter service, however, in making available to American readers one of his earliest novels, "The Jews of Zirndorf" under the title of "The Dark Pilgrimage," a book in which the worst of the Wassermann defects are laid bare.

But, surely, one who has created in so brief and troubled a lifetime as his works as "The World's Illusion," can sustain such weaker works. In his autobiography he makes the point that he wrote "The Jews of Zirndorf" to affirm his Jewishness and "Casper Hauser," a much finer and more mature work, to affirm his Germanism. Toward the last he was becoming fascinated by the prospects and the possibilities of biography for he brought out on Columbus, the discoverer, and Stanley, the explorer, and these studies, if not up to the level of his best fiction, at least proclaimed his spiritual affinities — towards lonely men who keep their way and achieve their goals. Perhaps a future publication, of Wassermann's letters and notes, may inform the world what other projects of a similar nature the novelist was cogitating.

His fiction was freighted with a double cargo, the cargo of message and the cargo of story. Or perhaps it would be more correct to say that his story ships carried messages as cargo — messages of justice and understanding for the misunderstood and the unjustly treated. His own youth and boyhood were poisoned by ill-treatment and lack of sympathy. The early chapters of the autobiography are heartrending with such details. Yet out of evil he created good. The autobiography tells us how he prevented a malicious younger half-brother from spying on him to a cruel stepmother and a vindictive father. He would spin continuous stories to this persecuting younger brother, and the installment at the most exciting point and promise to go on to the next installment the following day only as the reward for good behavior. His best novels show his amazing inventiveness in story telling. It is possible to read "The World's Illusion" as a modern One Thousand and One Nights or as the work of a modern Dostoyevsky. "The Goose Man" and "Casper Hauser," to mention only a few works, have the same kind of fascination. As a matter of fact severe critics have resented a touch of trickiness in his devices.

THE NEW CROWN HOTEL is announcing the opening of their new Cocktail Lounge adjacent to the Princess Room, with direct entrance from the Main Lobby. The Lounge is a beautiful room, finished in Old English style, with most comfortable leather cushioned chairs and a ban-tam bar in red and silver, where you can watch the bartender mix your favorite cocktail or fancy drink. It will be open from 11 a. m. until closing. It is a delightful place to drop in and wait for your friends, or just to have a cocktail before luncheon or dinner. A feature of the new Lodge will be the Cocktail Hour, between 3.30 and 5.30.

The bartenders wear little red jackets similar to the hunting coats of the English riders—very effective. The prices are right enough to make drinking a round or two or three a pleasure instead of a worry—cocktails from twenty five cents to fifty cents—none higher. Drop in for a pick-up after an arduous day of shopping—you will enjoy it.

New Year Holds Little Hope for Jews of Nazidom While Roumanian Jews Face Governmental Crisis; U. S. Congress Asked to Investigate Nazis Here

By MILTON BROWN

GERMANY

There was little auspicious in the opening of the New Year for the Jews in Germany. Few indications were given that the campaign of Jewish extermination would be lessened. On the contrary, prominent Nazis, such as Wilhelm Frick, who is the Reichminister of the Interior and one of Hitler's close associates, called for redoubled enforcement of the Aryan clause during 1934 and stressed the importance of the Jewish aspects of the Nazi program. Julius Streicher, anti-Semitic leader and publisher, called for complete extermination of the Jews.

On the other hand, Minister of Labor Franz Seldte, who has come to share somewhat the apprehension of Minister of Economics Schmitt that the drive on Jews in commerce and industry was fraught with danger in the German economic structure, in association with the ministries of propaganda and economics, ordered all Nazi labor commissars to discontinue dismissal of Jewish employees from industrial enterprises. Nazi cells in industrial concerns were also ordered to curb their activities.

The almost customary quota of harassing decrees making the life of Jews in the Reich more desperate and intolerable were pronounced.

Mrs. Norman Bentwich, whose husband, former Attorney General of Palestine is now associated with High Commissioner McDonald in refugee aid work, was struck by a Nazi self-designated censor in Saarbrücken. Her offense was that she pointed out that the Saar is still governed by the League of Nations, not by Hitler and Goering when she was reproved with "German women do not smoke."

German Jews were advised not to negotiate with the Reich government concerning Jewish rights by Dr. Bruno Weil of the Central Union of German Citizens of the Jewish Faith.

Hopes that a considerable number of German Jews would find a refuge in Angola, Portuguese West Africa, were raised when it became known a mission of experts would shortly leave for there to study possibilities opened by the Portuguese government for settlement there.

The former Ruth Steinberg, an American Jewish woman now Mrs. Wilhelm Krueger, was sentenced to a year's imprisonment for reading an anti-Nazi newspaper.

ROUMANIA

Jews in Roumania went through a trying period following the shock of the assassination of Premier Ion G. Duca, the Liberal Party leader who had pledged himself to protect their rights in the face of the Nazi-inspired anti-Semitic campaign. Premier Duca fell at the hands of an Iron Guardist because he was friendly to the Jews. The outlawed organization had planned a wave of assassinations of hostile leaders. A cabinet headed by Dr. Constantin Angelescu fell after five days because Foreign Minister Titulescu, strongman of Roumanian politics declined to support it. Its stand against subversive organizations such as the Iron Guard, he said, was not strong enough. George Taterescu, secretary of the Liberal Party, organized a cabinet including Titulescu, and promised determined action against the Guardists and their allies.

PALESTINE

Protest against the Palestine immigration restrictions continued throughout the world. The Revisionist Union made a point-blank accusation that Great Britain had violated the mandate terms and started circulation of a petition for organization of an inquiry into the government's activities. The Polish Mizrahi, meeting at Warsaw, studied the Revisionist stand and empowered the Mizrahi executive committee to decide whether the orthodox group should line up with the Revisionists in this matter.

The Palestine government called for troops from Egypt to be stationed throughout Palestine in a move considered a precautionary measure in connection with the projected Arab demonstration on January 16.

Hearing of the three defendants in the Arlosoroff murder case continued with the defense of the three Revisionists, under the leadership of Atty. Horace Samuels, forcing the persecution to the defensive.

Conviction of two Arabs and the penalty for the murder of the Nahalal settler, Joseph Jacoby, and his son, was affirmed by the appellate court.

The Hebrew University at Jerusalem graduated seventeen students. Work will be supplied in Haifa harbor for 200 Jewish harbormen from Salonia. Mayor M. Dizengoff of Tel Aviv and poet Chaim Nachman Bialik denied they had attacked the Keren Hayesod. The Anglo-Palestine Bank took over the banking functions of the Jewish Colonial Trust, established by Herzl, and the Trust became a holding company of 98 percent of the stock of the bank.

GREAT BRITAIN

King George IV honored O. E. D'Avigdor Goldsmid, Henrietta Adler, daughter of the late Chief Rabbi, Mrs. Lillian Freiman, of Canada and Victor Kohn, in his New Year's list.

Dr. Chaim Weizmann postponed his American visit to proceed to Palestine. The Joint Foreign Committee received word that 2000 Jews had been expelled from Afghanistan and are wandering homeless in the desert. The London Jewish Chronicle editorially blamed American Jewry for the failure of the London relief conference and called upon them to unite in order not to jeopardize the entire program of refugee relief.

THROUGHOUT THE REST OF EUROPE

Anti-Semitic disturbances in Austria resulted in a strict government order for the enforcement of law and maintenance of peace in the Transdanubian provinces.

Two Nazis were jailed for anti-Semitic attacks in Hungarian villages. Eight others were held by the police following rioting in Zalaegerszeg and Zalaevoev.

The non-Jewish population in Bureva, slated by the Soviet government as site of an autonomous Jewish region, was revealed as far in excess of the Jewish population. New methods of settling Jews there were called for.

UNITED STATES

Congress received a resolution empowering the Speaker to name a committee of seven to investigate subversive Nazi activities in this country. Congressman Samuel Dickstein sponsored the resolution.

President Roosevelt sent to the Senate the names of Henry Morgenthau, Jr., for Secretary of the Treasury, Isadore Lubin for Commissioner of Labor Statistics, and Lee Sack for Minister to Costa Rica. Reports that Jesse I. Straus would not resume his duties as ambassador to France were denied and Mr. Straus announced his sailing plans.

Measures to strengthen the anti-Nazi boycott were considered at two meetings in New York City when lawyers attended a meeting of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League and studied means to prevent fraud in the sale of German goods here and Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver addressed a gathering of 500 youths who pledged themselves to prosecute the boycott in retail establishments.

High Commissioner James G. McDonald called for aid for refugees from Germany and pointed to the responsibility of non-Jews in supporting the relief work.

Jewish philanthropic leaders of the nation gathered at Chicago for a conference to map a program of organized Jewish philanthropy.

A significant meeting of representatives of national Jewish organizations was called by Morris Rothenberg as joint chairman of the council of the Jewish Agency for Palestine and president of the Zionist Organization of America to consider the restrictive Palestine immigration measures.

ROUNDOABOUT

We received a mysterious letter postmarked Taunton this week and the letter was really clever enough to print without editorial revision but . . . it was not signed and we never print anonymous letters—soon—if the writer will let us know who he is—it's obvious it is a man—we will be glad to print it in its entirety.

Did you know that a daughter of one of our furriers is about to honor and obey it with a Maine lad? The knot is to be tied sometime this week—and many a local lad will wear crepe on his sleeve because the furrier's little daughter is very popular.

The gentleman of the service station who greeted this column a couple of issues ago—because of his car's inability to run—protests . . . he maintains he was not out of gas . . . his battery went dead.

Bert and Cele Marks are in town again for a couple of months . . . they have just come back from a long and varied trip through the middle west . . . seeing America first and combining business with pleasure.

Seen about town . . . Mrs. Allen Markoff and her oldest son Arthur . . . Mr. Berren of the jewelry store on his way to lunch . . . Sylvia Soforenko hurrying to meet someone—probably her pal Miriam Silverman . . . Ben Rossman engrossed in a street corner conversation . . . Dr. Lenzner talking to Dr. Albert Berger in front of a local bank . . . Mrs. Mary Ehrlich on her way to a Hadassah meeting . . . Selma Pilovin looking very pretty in a new brown fur coat . . . Cecile Fishman Scholchi and her husband just back from their honeymoon . . . Hilda Ruttenberg just from the hairdressers . . . Charlie Brier waiting for someone in front of the Union Trust Building.

Congratulations and that sort of thing to the Big Boss . . . a new baby boy in the household . . . and mother and baby doing very nicely . . . pass out the cigarettes, Mr. Smith.

Two of our Providence lassies are going places aplenty with two Worcester lads—and we understand it's serious for both couples . . . the girls are friends and the boys are pals so maybe it will be a double wedding.

Notes from a secretary to her boss: Milton Pliner was in and ate all the cashews that were on your desk . . . no matches and your new lighter doesn't work . . . and it's raining and you will probably come in without any and expect me to get them . . . nothing doing . . . Some man called up for your home address but I didn't give it to him . . . he wouldn't tell me his name and you never can tell what he wanted you for . . . I ought to be paid for being a body guard as well as a secretary . . . Jack Silverman was in while you were out and told us what happened to him New Year's Eve . . . it's priceless . . . get him to tell it to you . . . this morning's mail brought in a story about you for Roundabout . . . of course the party who sent it in doesn't know you write this column and of course I don't know whether or not the story is true but it's a honey and I didn't think you were capable . . . we won't let you forget it in a hurry . . . That was a lovely party Dr. and Mrs. Klibanoff "hosted" this week-end . . . Mrs. Morris Cooper of West Barrington was there looking younger than ever . . . Cheerio . . . next week!

Jacob Wassermann

It seems only a few years ago that he was visiting these shores, but I fear that his experience was not entirely pleasant. He did not speak English and interviews had to be conducted either in German, or, as mine were, with the help of an interpreter. It was to me he said: "I compare myself to the workman who pours the molten metal with which is formed the bell. In these twenty years we shall see and we shall hear." During his American stay he did not lecture and at the dinner given him in New York by the P. E. N. Club he seemed aloof and moody. He gave the impression of being concerned not with superficial aspects, but with the inner meaning of things and of man. A Nazi minister may have excluded Wassermann from the Prussian Academy of Letters, but none can exclude him from the minds of his hundreds of thousands of readers, wherein he reigns with the greatest masters of the story.

TEMPLE BETH ISRAEL

Services Tonight Will be Dedicated to Local Hadassah

Temple Beth Israel will dedicate its Services tonight to the Providence Chapter of Hadassah, which will hold its annual Sabbath at the Temple.

The Service will commence at 8:15 promptly and will be conducted by Rabbi Morris Schussheim with Cantor Joseph Schlossberg reading the ritual and the choir, under the direction of Jonas Goldenberg, rendering musical service. Miss Bella Goldenberg will be at the organ.

The speaker of the evening will be Mrs. Archibald Silverman who will talk on "Present Day Palestine." Mrs. Silverman sails to the Holy Land at the end of this month and this occasion will be also in the nature of a farewell to her.

Temple Beth Israel was the premier Zionist institution in the city giving many of the present officers and a large number of the active members of the Zionist District to the cause, outstanding among them is Dr. Ilie Berger, honorary president of the District. At present the following members of the Temple are active officers:

Benjamin N. Kane, vice president; Hillel Hassenfeld, vice president, and the Rabbi, vice president. Active members are Jonas Goldenberg, James Goldman, Jacob Licht, Robert L. Berstein, Joseph Keller, chairman of the Young Judea Council, and many others.

The Providence Chapter of Hadassah was originally organized under the leadership of Mrs. Silverman as president and Mrs. Morris Schussheim as first vice president. At the present time many members of the Sisterhood are active, outstanding among whom are Mrs. J. D. Grossman, vice president of the Chapter, Mrs. I. Singer, chairman of the Annual Linen Shower, Mrs. Lyon A. Marcus, chairman of the reception after the Services. It will thus be seen that in coming to Temple Beth Israel for the annual Service, Hadassah comes into its own environment.

All Zionists are expected to attend. This Service is open to the public. Saturday morning services are held at 9 o'clock.

The Bar Mitzvah of Leon Stone, son of Mrs. Gertrude Stone, will be held Saturday morning, January 20 in the Temple.

FLORAL OFFERING

The Temple acknowledges with gratitude the offering of pulpit flowers at the Services last Friday night by Mrs. Louis Botvin in memory of her father.

The floral offering at tonight's service will be placed by Hadassah.

And So The Days Pass

By JACK SILVERMAN

THE "BLACK KNIGHT" CAFE

... If any of you folks ever go to New York, please drift over to Greenwich Village, and see if there is a cafe at 136 Macdougall street operated by Max Schwartz. Of all the places that I have ever been to, this particular spot will always linger in my memory. It was right across the street from where I lived and worked at that time.

Not because it served the best meals, or had the best environment, or anything else except that ... at this particular place we'd gather ... about a dozen of us ... to discuss this, and that, and everything about people and LIFE ... Fools that we were ... trying to solve the riddle of the ages ... attempting to establish a panacea for human conduct ... living under the illusion that our arts, literature, drama and poetry were things of greater importance than the mercenary objects of business, finance, commerce and manufacture.

And yet I miss these pals of Bohemia more than I can tell ... There was a philosophy and sympathetic understanding of life and people in their hearts that you folks of the work-a-day world sadly miss ... They never judged a man or a woman according to his social, educational or financial standing. They didn't give a continental whether you wore a dress suit or a pair of overalls, whether you were born in Russia, Italy, Ireland, America or any other place. They wouldn't condemn you if your folks came over on a cattle boat in 1916, or hold you in esteem because you were a descendant of the Pilgrims. Color or creed were absolutely non-essential ... Only humility, friendship, liberality of thought, absence of bigotry and narrow mindedness were the requisites for adoption as one of the comradeship of this gathering.

As the days pass one by one ... and you encounter people that have such an exalted opinion of their importance ... People who get angry and temperamental over the most insignificant things of life ... People whose actions are almost entirely motivated by wild, distrustful, unruly passions ... People who refuse to abandon hate, and learn the glory of LOVE ... people who absolutely know nothing, and are positive that they know everything ... People who can't and won't see the futility of sensitiveness, "high-hattedness," lack of compassion, pity and understanding ... People in whose entire makeup there isn't the slightest trace of that Divinity that the bible states the Lord injected into us at the time of creation ... It is then that one wishes ... Oh how greatly! ... to be with pals that are different ...

THE SEVEN AGES

... There are few persons who have not read Shakespeare's beautiful description of the seven ages of Man. (Nothing to confuse you with "Biography of Man" that the great Historian Jascha Abramovitch Zilberman writes in this column!) ... An ancient Hebrew sage has given us his thoughts on the same subject. His language may not appear so elegant as that of the immortal bard, but his sentiments are equally hard, and certainly more edifying.

Seven times in one verse (said Rabbi Simon, the son of Eliezer) did the author of Ecclesiastes make use of the word vanity, in allusion to the seven stages of human life. The first commences in the first year of human existence, when the infant lies like a king on a soft couch, with numerous attendants about him, and eager to testify their love and attachment by kisses and embraces.

The second commences about the age of two or three years, when the child is permitted to crawl on the ground and, like an unclean animal, delights in dirt and filth.

Then at the age of ten, the thoughtless boy, without reflecting on the past, or caring for the future, jumps and skips about like a young kid on the enamelled green, contented to enjoy the present moment.

The fourth stage begins about the age of twenty, when the young man full of vanity and pride, begins to set off his person by dress; and, like a young, unbroken horse, prances and gallops about in search of a wife.

Then comes the matrimonial state, when the poor man, like the patient ass, is obliged, however reluctantly, to toil and labor for a living.

Behold him now in the parental state, when, surrounded by helpless children craving his support, and looking to him for bread, he is as bold, as vigilant—and as fawning, to—as the faithful dog, guarding his little flock, and snatching at everything that comes in his way, in order to provide for his offspring.

At last comes the final stage, when the decrepit old man, like the unwieldy though sagacious elephant, becomes grave, sedate, and distrustful. He then, also, begins to hang down his head toward the ground, as if surveying the place where all his vast schemes must terminate, and where ambition and vanity are finally humbled to the dust.

Jewish Orphanage Annual Meeting to be Held January 28

The annual meeting of the Jewish Orphanage of Rhode Island will be held at the Orphanage on Sunday, January 28, at 2.30 o'clock.

An unique feature of this year's event will be the showing of a moving picture of the children in their various routine functions and activities. The picture will depict life at the Jewish Orphanage from the time the children get up until the time to retire. It will be accompanied by an illustrated lecture, pointing out the underlying principles of Child Care employed at the Jewish Orphanage. Reports will be submitted by the various committee chairmen. A prominent speaker will address the audience and musical selections will be rendered. A tour of inspection of the building is also planned for those attending. The community will have full opportunity to become intimately acquainted with the Child Care program at the Orphanage.

The annual meeting marks the 25th anniversary of the Orphanage's service to the Jewish Community of the state of Rhode Island, caring for dependent, neglected and orphaned children, preparing dependent children to assume a station in life equal to that of any other child. It is indeed a source of gratification that many graduates of the Jewish Orphanage have made satisfactory adjustments in the community and are successfully engaged in productive occupations.

Samuel Shanbrun is Seated as President of Workmen's Group

At a very impressive ceremony held at the Eagles Auditorium Tuesday night, the annual installation of officers of the Rhode Island Workmen's Beneficial Association took place. Samuel B. Shanbrun was seated as chairman of the organization and the other officers installed, were as follows:

Samuel Kaufman, vice chairman; Max Hercov, recording secretary; Samuel Newman, financial secretary; Simon Wolk, treasurer, and Joseph Sharp, inner guard.

Dancing and refreshments followed. Approximately 200 members and friends attended.

NEWS WRITTEN FOR THE JEWISH HERALD by GEORGE JOEL

Is Ping Pong Becoming a Jewish Game?

In the past few years I have reported the goings on over the ping pong tables throughout the country. The predominance of Jewish names among the contestants was so noticeable that only a few months ago a ping pong club was formed barring our co-religionists from its doors. When the Metropolitan championships were held in New York it was hoped that the Jewish experts would be eliminated but at this writing the tourney is in its semi-final round and all four survivors are Jews. True enough last year's champ was eliminated, as you will read further down on this page, but the "putting out" was done by another Jewish boy.

Melvin Rose New Ping Pong Star Takes Game Lightly

Melvin Rose does not take ping pong too seriously. A 16 year old, sixth form student at Boys' High, Brooklyn, his chief love is tennis. In the off-season he fools around with the table court game. He never tried tournament play until the Metropolitan championship came to town at the Hotel New Yorker. Recently he defeated James Jacobson, national champion, in the quarter-finals.

It was a startling upset. Jacobson is a tall, sardonic youth of 20 years, who is rated a sophomore pre-law student at New York University and claims New Rochelle as his home. He has been playing ping pong seven years and is a member of the Westchester Ping Pong Club, top ranking organization of its kind in the country. He is seeded No. 1 in all tournaments.

Jacobson and Rose made an odd picture as they faced each other across a table beneath the bright lights of the hotel ballroom. Jacobson was a study in brown, his shoes, trousers and shirt being of that hue. He plays with one shirt sleeve rolled up, runs his fingers through his hair often and is very serious.

Rose featured a black and white polo shirt and a bright grin. He smiled through the entire match and obviously had Jacobson distracted. As in billiards, ping pong's chief strait is mental. Sidney Lenz and other profound leaders of the game will tell you it requires the proper temperament. Rose has all that. He doesn't appear to care much.

A match is decided on the best three out of five games. Rose defeated Jacobson, 21-17, 21-13, 10-21, 11-21 and 21-8. The last game was a rout. Rose has all the required ping pong strokes down to perfection. He has a smashing forearm shot, a beautiful backhand return and a decidedly difficult spin serve.

This spin serve is causing a furor in ping pong ranks. When the ping pong powers gather this spring it is believed that they will abolish the spin serve as being unfair. Players give the tiny celluloid ball a spin before hitting it with a bat. The spin makes it fly out of bounds when the ball is hit in return.

Ping pong players must bounce the ball on their own side of the net before serving. It was this rule that revived ping pong after the game had died because players were allowed to service directly across the net as in tennis. This made it too one sided with the server always having a decided advantage. Now they are afraid that the spin serve will restore this ancient evil.

Young Rose doesn't care if they veto the spin serve or not. He thinks it is just as unfair as do his opponents. But he doesn't complain when they use it against him. Sam Silbermann, of Brooklyn, taught Rose the game a little over a year ago. He meets Silbermann in the semi-finals, and his chances are more than promising.

The space devoted to the match between Rose and Jacobson was inspired not entirely by the desire to fill space. Ping Pong has caught on as a sport and its devotees are increasing in sufficient numbers for many stores to devote a separate department to the game. Surprisingly enough it takes physical prowess, coordination and mental agility to make a good ping pong player. No one who has really seen it played can deny that it is a sport.

Chatterings

Ben Jeby who was once the mid-dleweight champion is finding the comeback climb steep and devious. Last week he suffered a defeat at the hands, or I should say gloves of Young Terry whom he had beaten before ... Six lawyers are on the staff of ushers at the Garden, evidently the writ and sue business is not so hot ... Three of these barristers are Jews.

Jackie Kid Berg who was once a contender for the lightweight title is to get another crack at Canzoneri. It will be their fourth meeting ... It will take a long, long time for those California boosters to explain away Stanford's defeat at the clats of Columbia and the bad weather. The latter is what really burns up the boys from the Pacific Coast.

tributor to the Jewish Morning Journal and Der Ameriganer.

"We are in the midst of a membership enrollment for the Zionist Organization of America," Dr. Berger stated today. "The World Zionist Organization has issued a call to every thinking man to join our ranks and strengthen the organization that aims to build a home for us in Palestine."

"The progress attained by a mere handful of Zionists during the past 10 years in Palestine—providing a home for more than 200,000 Jews, establishing the Hebrew University, founding Tel-Aviv where 8000 Jewish families reside, developing the industry, commerce and agriculture of the country—is a challenge to those who said it could not be done. The Zionist Organization of America is more than a mere gesture of support for the ideal of a Jewish National Home; it represents the corporate will of the Jewish people, giving self-respect, courage and vision to Jewry the world over to meet problems which assail it today on all sides."

Dr. Berger pleaded for success of the membership campaign in order to attain the goal in Palestine. The drive, inaugurated here by Louis Lipsky, will continue for some weeks.

THE PRESIDENT WILL ACT

The resolutions introduced in Congress by Senator Tydings of Maryland and Congressman Dickstein of New York, bearing on different phases of the German situation, and indications that affirmative action is to be taken on them augur well for the Jewish cause in particular and the cause of humanity in general.

The Dickstein resolution calls for an appropriation of $25,000 and creation of a special Congressional committee to continue the expose of the far-reaching Hitler propaganda campaign here, a program that threatens the very foundation of the country, quite aside from its designs upon Jewry. Already revealed as an extremely dangerous movement involving some 60,000 spies and paid agents smuggled into the country or permitted to land in the United States under false pretenses in violation of the law, the Nazi scheme to undermine the government has been shown to be so well developed as to merit careful scrutiny.

While the Dickstein measure deals strictly with facts as they exist in America, the Tydings resolution calls for an "unequivocal statement" by President Roosevelt, vigorously indicating America's disapproval of Hitler's persecution of German Jews. Ample precedent exists for such an act by the President, as Senator Tydings points out. Without intending to mind anybody else's business, previous Presidents, in the name of common decency and humanity, have warned other nations that they must treat their own minorities with respect.

One significant paragraph in the Tydings measure declares:

Whereas, on at least nine historic occasions, beginning in the year 1840, and continuing down to the year 1919, such intercessions have been made by the United States on behalf of Jewish citizens of States other than the United States, oppressed or persecuted by their own governments or peoples.

As if it were not enough, President Roosevelt might readily call Hitler's attention to the fact contained here:

Whereas, by express treaty, the German Reich stands pledged to the United States to accord its nationals who belong to racial, religious or linguistic minorities the same treatment of security in law and in fact as the other nationals.

The President, under the Maryland senator's resolution is requested to "communicate to the government of the German Reich an unequivocal statement of the profound feelings of surprise and pain experienced by the people of the United States upon learning of the discriminations and oppressions imposed by the Reich upon its Jewish citizens." He is requested further to ask that the German Reich "will speedily restore to its Jewish nationals the civil and political rights of which they have been deprived, and undo so far as may be the wrongs that have been done them."

To those who, with tongue in cheek, point out that this is an election year and introduction of the Tydings and Dickstein measures constitutes bids for Jewish votes we would say this: The motives behind these bills are not to be questioned. The only issue, so far as Jewry is concerned, is to secure some form of relief for the oppressed in Germany. Whatever the means, the end justifies it.

That some expression will be forthcoming from the President is certain; likewise, even from a political viewpoint, it would seem a safe bet that Congress will take formal cognizance of both bills. President Roosevelt, his time and energies fully taken up with his recovery program, nevertheless cannot be unaware of the situation in Germany. We confidently look to see him send a characteristically vigorous note to Herr Hitler or to his ambassador here, stating the views of the people of the United States and their government.

BY THE WAY

By DAVID SCHWARTZ

Copyright 1933 by the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, Inc.

This and That
For the author of that inevitable book on "ghosting," there is the story told by Rabbi Wise at the Zionist conference to protest restrictions on Palestine immigration.

Said Dr. Wise: "Nathan Straus in preparation for a public speech would have one of us write his speech. When the occasion arrived, and he would be called on, Straus would take out the manuscript and begin to read. About half through, he would toss it aside in front of the public saying: 'This is no good. Wise wrote it. Now I'll give you a good speech' and he would begin to speak extemporaneously.

Concerning this entire matter of Jewish immigration into Palestine, it is interesting to note that much of the opposition to Jewish immigration is based on the professed argument that Jews in Palestine do not give Arabs employment as farm workers and in construction work and other fields of manual labor. The ironic note in the whole thing is this: that in the old days, it was said that Jews would not care to do any manual work themselves. Now the charge is—that they want to do all of it.

Not so many years ago, G. K. Chesterton, who is by no means too friendly to Jews, wrote that Palestine would be a success, if the Jews did their own muscular work, but that you couldn't call Palestine a success, if the Jews got the Arabs to do all the dirty work, so to speak. Chesterton went on to put it epigrammatically in something of the following fashion: "Palestine will be a success if the Jews climb down the ladder, not to the top." And now the opposition to Jewish immigration into Palestine is that the Jews insist on climbing down the ladder.

Not such a bad story was told at the "coffee-klatch" after the conference by Morris Margulies, Secretary of the Zionist Organization. Of the Jewish Communist in Russia, whose wife anticipated a blessed event.

The Jew was a Communist, but still—after all—one was a Jew—and here was the dilemma. How could he as a communist reconcile the religious rite of circumcision, which would soon be necessary with his communist principles.

The Jew was much distraught. His hands shivered. His face grew pale—as he paced the floor, awaiting the delivery of the child.

Finally, the event occurred and the Jew was seen issuing hurriedly from the room, exclaiming: "Gott hot geholfen. Es is a maidel." (It's a girl).

And then there is the story we heard of the Jewish movie actor, whose father was committed to strict economical ideas. The son, however, was liberal with his money after the customary fashions of sons. Moreover, the son, now receiving a very generous salary, felt that his father should be clad in better fashion. So it happened, that one day, Papa in New York received from his son in Hollywood, a beautiful overcoat. To quiet his father, the son wrote that the overcoat which had actually stood him $100 had cost $20.

Several days later, son in Hollywood received a telegram: "Send six more overcoats. Sold last one for $30."

Good stories are still occurring in real life too, despite depressions, and such things.

And we think the fact that "L'Affaire Jones" by Hillel Bernstein has become a best seller is one of such.

About four years ago, Bernstein wrote a story which Harpers published. They liked the story so well, they advised the author to expand it into a book. Bernstein followed the advice, and in the course of time submitted to Harpers the elongated manuscript.

Harpers examined it and rejected it. Decided that they didn't believe the public would be interested in the theme.

An English publisher later examined it—and now it is a best seller.

Speaking as we were some paragraphs back about the Zionist Conference, we kept eyeing that man Sprinzak, the Histadruth (Palestine labor) leader. Physically, when one first observes him, it is hard to believe that the big labor organization of Palestine should have made him its leader. He seems to be lacking a couple of feet in the necessary height for leadership. But as one looks at his face—the keen eyes begin to tell another story. And when he spoke, I finally completely saw. Talks sound sense. It seemed to me in general that these labor representatives at the conference were a pretty hard-headed lot. I expected them to be utopianistic, but they seem to have their feet solidly on the ground.

By the way—what is there to the report that Secretary of State Cordell Hull is wed to a Jewess?

And speaking about queer intermarriages, there is a very interesting married couple of that type which has just arrived in Palestine.

You have heard of Eliezer ben Yehuda. He was the father of the modern Hebrew language—the compiler of the Hebrew dictionary. Ben Yehuda gave his life to establish Hebrew as a living tongue.

Ben Yehuda came to Palestine and announced he would hold converse with no one except in Hebrew. Such was his passionate love of the language of the Jew.

Ben Yehuda's daughter also loved Hebrew, but she loved a German non-Jew better. And she married him—and they lived happily in Germany.

Then came the Nazi revolution. The couple found themselves proscribed. The husband because of his Jewish wife, could find no work.

So now the couple are in Palestine to stay there permanently.

I think Ben Yehuda in his grave must be happy. His daughter is speaking Hebrew again. And not only that, but a Christian is learning to speak it.

Strange new faces are now to be seen working for Zionism. There is Aaronson, for instance—the vice president of the New York Central Railroad—one of the leading railroad men in the country.

Over 300 Attend Ahavath Sholom Jubilee Celebration

More than 300 friends of the Ahavath Sholom Talmud Torah attended the celebration of its 25th anniversary and the dedication of the Junior Congregation Sunday evening.

Other speakers of the evening were Louis Bolotow, arrangements chairman, Max Charren, chairman of the evening and president of the Talmud Torah, Rabbi David Bachrach, Rabbi Jonah E. Caplan, educational director and Samuel H. Levenson, board of education chairman.

Musical entertainment was furnished by M. Sherwin, violinist, Miss Dlut, pianist, Miss Mary Orliansky, soprano soloist and Samuel Berditch who rendered several Jewish folk songs.

During the evening honors were bought by the following: golden key to the Ark of the Junior Congregation, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Krasnoff; lying-in scrolls into Ark, Morris Krasnoff; and Abraham Bliviss; endowment of Hebrew School Classrooms, Mr. and Mrs. Max Charren, Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Rosen, Mrs. B. Pulver, in memory of her husband, Bernard, Mr. and Mrs. Mincoff and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ehrlich; endowment of Talmud Torah auditorium, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Krasnoff. ## Scituate Country Club is Mecca for Many Joy Seekers

While most of the other night clubs are finding the going rather hard, some of them operating on a curtailed schedule, a couple having closed altogether, The Scituate Country Club operated by Frank Quigley and the Beaudette sisters of radio fame, is doing a better business than ever before.

Frank, Eva, Bertha, and Lucien Bellanger make a quartet of genial hosts. The atmosphere of the place is conducive to general all around gaiety and relaxation. The patronage is of the highest grade. There is a large cozy fire-place in the lobby, a unique bar and sitting room down stairs labeled as the "Nut Club," which is a striking replica of some of New York's Greenwich Village gathering places, a rhythmic group of musicians known as The Taverners who play for dancing nightly, including Sunday, and special entertainment features Wednesday, Saturday, and Sunday nights.

This popular resort also makes a specialty of catering to weddings, banquets and bridge parties, and carries a full supply of the choicest wines, beers and liquors. There is no cover charge at any time, and the prices for food and beverages are very moderate considering the quality obtainable.
