Coughlin Hints He'd Junk Anti Jewish Attacks 2nd Time Around

DETROIT (AJP) — Father Coughlin, one-time moving spirit of the anti-Jewish "Christian Front" movement, broke a 12-year silence this week to say in effect that had he to do it over again, he would have never touched on anti-Semitism.

The 59-year-old Catholic priest, breaking a long self-imposed ban on public utterances, also told newsmen in an interview celebrating the 25th anniversary of the founding of the Shrine of the Little Flower that "there is not much bigotry in the United States" and that a "more charitable" America rejected stirred-up hatreds.

On world issues, the once stormy Father Coughlin expressed belief that Communism might destroy itself. "All evil," he said, "carries a germ of destruction within."

Sounding like the mellow echo of the voice which was frequently flayed for alleged anti-Semitic undertones during nation-wide radio broadcasts in the mid-30's, Father Coughlin, in the course of the interview, was asked about his hectic campaigns aimed at a cure-all for social and economic ills.

Though sidestepping the direct issue of the anti-Jewish nature of the "Christian Front" movement, Father Coughlin said:

"If I had it all to do over again, I would not try to talk to people about economic changes and political changes, but about the ethical changes and spiritual changes."

Touching on religion in the United States, the pastor said:

"Maybe it is true as some people say, there is not much religion in the United States. But also it certainly is true that there is certainly not much bigotry."

Father Coughlin said that during the past 25 years he had watched bigotry "almost vanish from our life."

"We can't stir-up our people to hate North Koreans or Communists, as we hated Germans in World War I," he said, adding, "We are more charitable."

Coughlin's "Christian Front" activities, including rallies highlighted by frequent clashes, were strongly denounced by leading Christian clergymen as well as Jewish groups.

Network Denies Schultz Influence

NEW YORK (AJP)—A folk singing group scheduled to appear on a nation-wide television show this week cancelled its engagement, but spokesmen for the network denied reports that protests from an anti-Communist council headed by the controversial Rabbi Benjamin Schultz were responsible.

A spokesman for the National Broadcasting Company said the folk singers, known on television as The Weavers, had requested to be relieved of the TV commitment "because of conflicting rehearsal schedules."

The request was granted, the spokesman said, while a company investigation was underway into complaints received from members of the Joint Committee Against Communism in New York and others.

Basis for the protests was the appearance of members of the singing group at Communist functions and the frequent listings of its founder and director, Pete Seeger, by the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Rabbi Benjamin Schultz, coordinator of the Joint Committee Against Communism in New York as well as director of the controversial American Jewish League Against Communism, told the American Jewish Press that it was his understanding that spontaneous complaints against the Weavers' appearance were made to the sponsor and the network.

Halley Accepts Bid For City Prexy Post

NEW YORK (AJP)—Rudolph Halley, a young Jewish lawyer, and former Chief Counsel of the Kefauver crime probe committee, this week accepted a bid from the Liberal Party to seek presidency of the City Council in next November's election.

Halley called upon "voters of all parties who value clean, efficient, and non-bossed government to join with me in a non-partisan spirit and help make this greatest city the cleanest city in the world."

Hadassah Leader Scores Silver

DENVER (AJP) — A former president of the largest single Zionist group in the U. S. said this week that she hoped the World Zionist Congress, now scheduled for Jerusalem in August, would never be held because stormy issues at the conference would embarrass American Jewry.

The assertion of Judith Epstein, past national president of Hadassah, was coupled with a blast at Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver and the Zionist Organization of America. She criticized Dr. Silver's recent trip to Israel as electioneering on behalf of the General Zionists.

"I think it's dreadful how the ZOA is politicking in Israel's elections," Mrs. Epstein told Robert S. Gamzey, editor of the Jewish Intermountain Jewish News, local English-Jewish weekly, in an interview here.

The former Hadassah president, here to stimulate activity of regional units of the women's Zionist organization, told Gamzey the 300,000-member organization "is keeping hands off the Israel election" in accordance with its traditional non-partisan, non-political policy.

"Judith Epstein," Gamzey wrote following his interview, "doesn't even like to see the oft-postponed World Zionist Congress held this summer—if ever."

Pointing out that the sessions of the Congress would be thoroughly covered by the American Jewish press, she said:

Figures on Bond Sales Due Soon

Figures on the sale of Israel's bonds in Rhode Island and Southeastern Massachusetts will be announced in the very near future, Dr. Ilie Berger, a co-chairman of the R. I. Committee, announced this week. "We expect to make a statement concerning the sale of bonds within two weeks," Dr. Berger stated.

Marine Hero Wins Four Awards

MINNEAPOLIS (AJP)—A Jewish Marine sergeant who participated in battles through Korea was the recipient of four awards for valor this week.

The leatherneck, Sgt. Sherman Richter, was awarded the Bronze Star, the Purple Heart with one cluster for being twice wounded, and a unit commendation medal. Richter, according to the American Jewish World, local English-Jewish weekly, suffered a shrapnel leg wound in March and was released from the hospital April 18. On April 24, the marine was wounded a second time.

Miriam Annual Meeting To Depict "Year of Progress"

A detailed picture of the facilities and operation of the New Miriam Hospital will be presented to the general public at the annual meeting of the Miriam Hospital next Tuesday evening, June 12 in the ballroom of the Narragansett Hotel, Morton Smith, chairman of the annual meeting committee, announced Wednesday.

Officers will be elected for the coming year at the meeting, which will start at 8 P.M. The theme of the program will be "A Year of Progress." It was just a year ago this month that ground was broken and construction begun on the new edifice on Summit Avenue, Smith pointed out.

Michael S. Grobsmith, executive director of the Miriam Hospital, will be the principal speaker.

Evades Answer On U. S. Loan

NEW YORK (AJP)—Twenty-eight hectic days of travel and speech-making behind him, Israel's bushy-haired Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion embarked homeward last week as the $500,000,000 Israel Bond Drive chalked up sales totalling $55,000,000.

The departure for Israel of the 65-year-old Prime Minister, his Brooklyn-born wife, and his aides aboard the liner Queen Mary, sounded a final "shalom" to the first historic visit to America's shores by Ben-Gurion in his capacity as a high government leader.

Conservative estimates on B-G's superman-like American sweep showed the prime minister took bows in a dozen cities, traveled 8,000 miles and delivered in excess of 125 speeches.

On the eve of his departure, Ben-Gurion told a press conference here that peace would come to the troubled Middle East when the Arab states realize that Israel can be economically independent as it has shown itself to be militarily and politically strong.

Though refraining from answering a specific question as to whether he believed the United States would grant Israel the proposed $150,000,000, Ben-Gurion told newsmen he thought American policy makers were aware of the strategic importance of the Middle East and Israel's democratic role in the area.

Asked about the role of fundraising for Israel in the United States, the Prime Minister asserted that both the United Jewish Appeal and the bond drive were essential in affording Israel vitally needed assistance.

Ben-Gurion expressed thanks for the thunderous ovations afforded him in major cities throughout the United States, including a huge ticker-tape parade witnessed by a million onlookers in New York City.

Moist Polio Virus Most Dangerous

PALO ALTO, CALIF. (AJP)—Two Jewish scientists warned this week that infantile paralysis virus is most dangerous while it is in the moist state.

The warning followed a study of the effects of drying on the polio virus by Doctors Harold K. Faber and Rosalie J. Silverberg of the Stanford University Department of Pediatrics.

can press services, Mrs. Epstein told the editor that the airing of controversies over U. S. Zionist participation in Israeli politics coupled with appeals to American Jewry to move to Israel, "would make embarrassing reading in the American daily press."

Gamzy concluded, "She hopes the Zionist Congress is never held, a hope shared by Ben-Gurion and myself."

SUNDAY'S SCHEDULE

Mathewson Toggery vs M & F Insurance at Sessions Street.
 Waldorf Tuxedo vs Arden's Jewelry at Roger Williams Park.
 Lincoln Woods Dairy vs Natcor at Hopkins Park.
 Broadway Auto Sales vs Richards at Collyer Field.

High-riding Waldorf Tuxedo took another double feature, this one from Lincoln Woods. Errors plus the absence of three key men weakened the Dairyman's defense. Herb Weintraub turned in some fine third basing for the winners. Abe Lobel went all the way for the 12-8 win.

In the second game, behind the six-hit pitching of Lefty Bernie Davidson, Waldorf went to town, banging out 20 runs. Hilt Bader led the way at the plate for the winners. Gene Silverman was the only Dairyman to take toll of Davidson's offerings, banging out four of the six hits.

M & F Insurance won the first game from Natcor on a forfeit, then took the scheduled second game 13-5. Warren (Red) Foster, besides going all the way on the mound, garnered four of the M & F 18 hit total. Jack Chalken, Sheldon Golden and Bertie Gerstenblatt slapped three hits apiece for the winners.

Arden's Jewelry kept twin bill killings the theme of the day with their double win over Richards. A sensational double play engineered by Earl Tretralt with two men on in the seventh inning wiped out a Richards threat to break the tie. In the bottom half of the inning Joe Joyce beat out a slow roller, scoring Nate Snyder with the winning tally.

Twenty hits featured the 18-6 trouncing handed Richards in the nightcap. George Karembeles spiked a three run triple to help build up a lead Carl Lefkowitz never relinquished. Len Rodman hit well for the losers.

Broadway Auto Sales kept pace with the pack with a double win over Mathewson Toggery. Clutch hitting by Big Murray Kerzner and fine hurling by Jack Steiner were the deciding factors in both contests. Ralph Winn stole home with what was then the tying run in the sixth. Bob Goldis knocked in the run that won the game, 5-4.

Broadway Auto overcame an early Toggery lead to take the nightcap 8-5. Joe Rubin doubled in the winning runs in the top of the seventh, and then Bob Goldis turned in a neat double play to sew it up.

HERE'S MONEY-MAKING NEWS ABOUT YOUR U. S. DEFENSE BONDS!

New law gives your Series E Bonds ten more interest-bearing years

Bond bought for $18.75 in '41 will pay $33.33 in '61!

Congress has passed a bill that makes it possible for all U. S. Series E Bonds to continue earning interest ten years longer than was originally planned.

For example, a Series E Bond which cost you $18.75 in 1941 will pay you $25 in 1951. But if you hold that bond ten extra years, until 1961, it will pay you $33.33. This is an average interest of 2.9% per year.

The new law applies to all Series E Bonds (purchase price of $18.75, $37.50, $75 and up to $750.00) bought in any year. The same holds true for any bonds of this series which you may buy in the future.

There is nothing for you, as a bond holder, to do. You need not exchange the bonds you have. You need not sign any paper, fill out any form. You simply keep your bonds as you have been keeping them.

This law does not change your privilege of redeeming bonds in any way. You may still redeem any United States Series E Bond at any time after the first sixty days you have held it.

May be converted to Series G

The new law also makes it possible for you to exchange your Series E Bonds, in blocks of $500 or more, for Special Series G Bonds which pay interest in cash twice a year for 12 years. For further details, ask at any Federal Reserve Bank or Branch.

Look how your maturing bonds go on earning under the new law!
(This table shows $25, $50, and $100 bonds as examples of how ALL Series E Bonds grow.)

No Dress Rehearsal

(A Behind the Scene Report)

The fuzzy-haired dynamo of energy, David Ben-Gurion, needed no microphone to get his point across to the select gathering of 200 top Zionist leaders grouped about the dais in the Waldorf Astoria's swank Jade Room. Here, they soon realized, was the Ben-Gurion who swayed the masses in Israel with fighting words; the hard-punching Mapanick out to make his point known to an audience.

Gone, too, were the usual flowery terms, the prepared speeches which had marked his nation-wide tour of America's 12 Jewish strongholds on behalf of the 500,000,000 Israel Bond Drive. Instead, the veteran warrior for Israel, letting his hair down publicly for the first time on his 28-day-long tour of the U. S., read American Zionists the riot act. Some of the Zionist leaders, politely but firmly, rallied to fire back verbal barrages.

Gathered with the trusted corps of men and women who for decades had faithfully plugged away for a Jewish state, performing equally well in fair and foul political weather, Ben-Gurion loosed his shirt and with a vigor envied by many in the room whose hair had yet to turn silver, told U. S. Zionists they must be content with "advising" Israel, but not "telling" the Jewish State how to run its affairs.

American Zionists were told that widespread Hebrew Education in the United States was essential if Jewish youth were to remain Jews, let alone become Zionists. Ben-Gurion torpedoed the belief that mass immigration by American Jews to Israel was likely. Instead he asked that American Zionists provide a steady stream of skilled technicians, a crying need in present-day Israel.

B-G took a crack at Zionist groups claiming to represent counterparts in Israel claiming that only Israeli citizens could express their views as to the actual administration of the little nation.

Go get more members, B-G told them.

Leading Zionists spokesmen listened as B-G read the riot act. Then they opened up.

The Silver Knight came under strong attack for omitting references of Zionism in his American addresses; sustained verbal blows for his fine-lined distinction between "advising" and "telling" and underwent a good-natured but firm racking for what Zionist spokesmen said was a misbelief that widespread support of Israel was always assured in the United States.

"There are many present supporters of Israel," one Zionist leader cautioned B-G, "who might not be counted upon too surely were the political situation to change." He referred to the possibility of continued adverse decisions toward Israel by the U. N. and other attempts to gang-up on the Jewish State.

As the speakers took turns at commenting on B-G's observations, the energetic prime minister scribbled notes with a pint-sized pencil. When it came his turn to answer, three sheets packed full of memos were aired.

Shouting at times, Ben-Gurion addressed each of the Zionist leaders in turn remarking on their observations of his address.

To one he exclaimed, "If I'd make another speech I wouldn't use the word 'Zionism' . . . when I see a kind of Zionism which isn't my Zionism, I cannot identify myself with it."

As for cries that a crisis existed in American Zionism, B-G poo-pooed, "I deny that there is a crisis in Zionism. There is a crisis with some Zionists and I feel sorry for them."

"They just don't recognize the Jewish state . . . it's time they did!" The applause at this point was not ear-splitting.

Whether or not such was the case remained doubtful. But Zionist leaders leaving the Jewish Agency's private dinner four-and-a-half-hours after first checking their hats, recognized something else. Not a small number of the legends which have grown through the years concerning B-G's ability to sway an audience, many felt, were surely gospel truth.

Broadway Tales

BY BEN FEINGOLD

ODDITY DEPT: Half of the rip-roaring dancing Broadway combination of Coles and Atkins—the amazing Honi Coles—is being hailed as Moseh by the backstagers. Here's why: Coles speaks a perfect Yiddish; wears a mezzuzah and orders kosher wine as his favorite after-show brew. Honi met his dancing partner, Cholly Atkins, while the two were overseas in Uncle Sammy's army. The war over, the ex-GIs decided to switch from fox-hole performances to swank nightclubs. This season they opened in the hit 'Gentlemen Prefer Blondes'. The audiences preferred Coles and Atkins and today Mr. Atkins and his Yiddish-speaking partner are tops on the Great White Way . . . P. S. Both boys are—Negroes!

IMPRESSION DEPT: New Yawkers still reeling from the terrific impression of the now-departed Israeli naval vessels. Unlike most visitin' seamen, the Israelis nixed the gay spots during their Gotham stay, seeking more worthwhile things instead. One gob approached a cop and in words spiced with an English flavor asked directions. Before he could complete his query, the policeman, familiar with the likes of sailors who shore long-time-no-see, pointed to a bar. "Best liquor in town, fellah," the policeman quipped. "Thank you sir," answered the Israeli sailor, "but what I was seeking was the location of the nearest chess club." The startled cop hunted up the data . . . The tidiness of the two ships startled harbor officials. Despite their numerous parades, dinners, guest appearances, etc., the 200 officers and men found time on their New York visit to COMPLETELY repaint the ships from stem to stern—plus scraping clean the boiler rooms and other ships gear.

BROADWAY GOSSIP: Hitting the airways for Israel last week was scribbler Paul Gallico and his frau. The famed author will do research in the Jewish state for a new novel, "To Live Forever" . . . Philly will be the tryout city for ace Yiddish comedian Menasha Skulnick's first non-Yiddish play assignment in more than a decade. Skulnick, a tradition in East Side play circles, is slated to open in the Fall on Broadway, a star in the show "Business is Business." The Philadelphia try-out is slated for Sept. 19th. Menasha should open on the Gay White Way come Oct. 17th, our informants inform us . . .

America's favorite "uncle"—ace Jewish comedian "Uncle Miltie" Berle isn't worrying about a sponsor for his top-notch TV hilarities. His sponsors have Berle's "John Hancock" annexed to a fat 1951-'52 season contract. Junior, Mom and the rest of the family need fear no more. 'Uncle' Miltie will be around for a long time to come . . . Yehudi Menuhin and his sis Hepzibah (she tickles the piano keyboard with the same thrilling effect that her brother fingers the fiddle) are slated to open the new London Concert Hall shortly. It will mark their first joint recital in England . . . Sidney J. Weinberg, the Jewish financial whiz who resigned as a special aide to Defense Mobilization Director Charles E. Wilson, is reported battling off a gall bladder date with the surgeon. Weinberg, who started out shining spittoons at a Wall Street firm, would up as the $$$$ outfit's

Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion's stop-off visit to Prof. Albert Einstein at Princeton was not the pair's first meeting despite some sheet's report to that effect. B-G and Einstein are old buddies having last traded verbs in Berlin during 1930.

WHAT'S IN A NAME DEPT: Comic Chaz Chase is keeping nightfolk awake with this tale, says columnist Hy Gardner. Chase relates that while in Paris calendars ago he bumped into Jules Stein, Jewish show biz wonder and chairman of the board of Music Corp. of America, a huge booking agency. It was past banking hours and the visitor asked Chase whether he knew where he might cash a check for $2000. Chaz hopped off to a French broker he knew slightly and explained in great detail that Stein was one of the wealthiest and influential brains in American show business. The broker hesitated, then reluctantly agreed to cash the check—but only if the then-pauper comic Chase, whom he had laughed at in a Paris night spot, would endorse the millionaire's signature. The Frenchman had never heard of Stein—but Monsieur Chase—oh-la-la—he was an entertainer! Interesting 'nuff, Stein didn't even have an interest in the comic. Chase happens to be booked by a rival agency . . .

NOC TURNAL NASHES: Hair stylists in the Big Town are pushing the Judy Holliday "Mop hair-do—the same shazzy-dazzy what-you-call-it that caught the eye of the Academy Awarders. It helped win Judy, the daughter of Zionist official Abe Tuvim, an AA, and the local gals are hopeful it'll be helpful in landing them a you-know-what . . . By the way, there's a big reward out for Judy's favorite pup . . . the pet's been on the "Missing Hounds List" for two weeks now . . . Eddie Cantor getting still another award: this one from Gotham UJA . . . Airways officials report that the '51 promises to be the largest tourist year in the modern history of Israel as a nation—this doesn't include "visiting" Syrians, Iraqis, or Egyptians whose bayonets protrude from their luggage.

A MATTER OF APPEARANCE: Bill Olin, former lightweight champion of the world, who is Jewish, and Jack Dempsey, are often mistaken for one another. And they're perfectly aware of the fact.

So-o-o, whenever they are together and are besieged by autograph seekers, Depsey signs "Bob Olin" and Bob scribbles "Jack Dempsey." Furthermore, the boys are constantly ribbing each other. Depsey calls Olin "Maxie Rosenbloom," and Olin snaps back at Dempsey with "Gene Tunney."

Not so long ago, Olin had just finished dining in Dempsey's fashionable Broadway restaurant, when an autograph hound pleaded for "Mr. Dempsey's" autograph.

"Why, certainly," Bob replied with a grand flourish. He scribbled "Jack Dempsey."

Then, the former lightweight champ told the amazed autograph seeker, "Sit down and have a big meal on me." The guy sat down and gobbled till he was full. They shook hands and parted.

At last reports, Dempsey was looking for Olin with a check for the meal in one hand—and a king sized club in the other!

Columnist Lyons Wins Court Fight

NEW YORK (AJP) — Jewish columnist Leonard Lyons, facing a possible jail term this week, won his two-month-old fight against revealing the sources of news items he reported concerning the recent atom bomb spy trials.

Federal Judge Goddard ruled that items used by Lyons were not relevant to efforts by Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg's attorney to warrant her being transferred to the Women's House of Detention on grounds that the death house detention was designed to "make her talk."

The solon ruled that newspaper correspondents, under normal circumstances, should answer pertinent questions in a court hearing. In the Lyons' case, however, Judge Goddard ruled, the questions had no bearing on Mrs. Rosenberg's petition.

Lyons had reported that Mrs. Rosenberg might escape the electric chair if she cooperated with Federal authorities. He contended that a newspaperman enjoyed the privilege of a doctor, nurse, or clergyman in refusing to divulge his source of information.

Auxiliary to Hold Luncheon June 9

Annette Preblud is chairman of the luncheon of the Fineman-Trinkel Auxiliary to be held on June 9 at the Brook Manor, Attleboro, Mass., it was announced at a regular meeting held on May 28 at Temple Emanuel.

Plans were made to send one child to Camp Jori for a two week period.

Mr. Raymond McMahon spoke on "Civil Defense" and refreshments were served.

Jottings

Joan Comary's Notebook

TEL AVIV.

ON THE FIRST OF MAY the town belongs to the workers and their children. It is not an official holiday, but it might just as well be, since Histadrut (labor union) members can take the day off, and this means a good part of the population. My children went to school strictly under protest, complaining that they were doing more than most of their teachers; Michael's Ministry hardly ticked; and the hotel where I lunched had only a skeleton staff on duty in the restaurant. Everyone else seemed to be in the streets.

Since my little car could not get through, I abandoned my schedule and spent a couple of hours watching the procession. I must say that the blue shirts, the bright banners, the green pine branches and the orange harvester-combines, all under a dazzling Mediterranean sky, made as brave a show as any I have seen this side of a Manhattan musical.

The machines stole the show. One could see the naive delight of a nation being bustled into its industrial revolution. A huge gadget came lumbering by, a placard on its bosom proclaiming "I am the Giant Wooldridge which conquers the desert." (Its home town—Sunnydale, California—might not recognize its child in Hebrew, since that language has no sound for "w" and no sound for "j.")

Another big fellow, with a sort of Coney Island miniature Ferris wheel stuck on its rear, boasted that it had dug the canals which brought water to the Negev. I wondered how a bevy of homely trucks had elbowed their way into this distinguished society until I registered their plea that they brought supplies to beleaguered Jerusalem in 1948. At the tail end, like a couple of ponderous middle-aged ladies who have decided to be brave about their vanished waists, two steamrollers proclaimed that our new highways are made smooth by their weight.

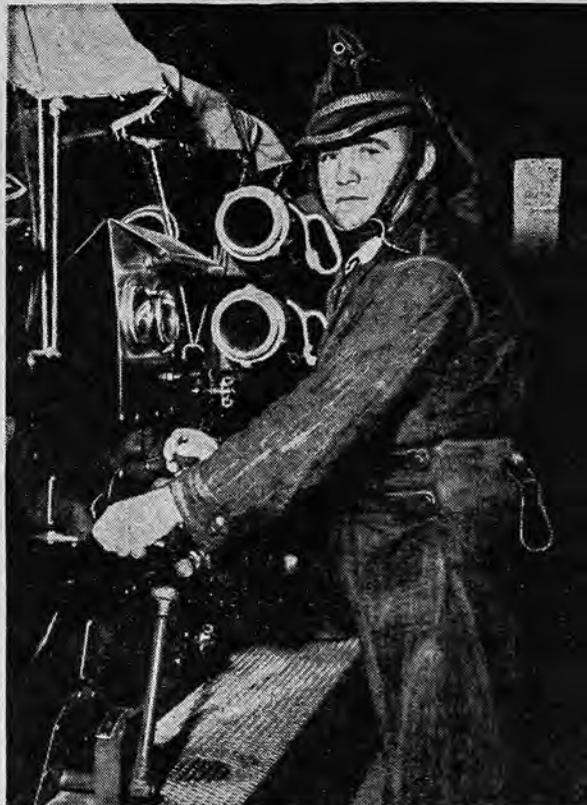

There were some ten thousand teen-agers in the line of march, and I came home with confused feelings. They were a splendid new generation, tanned, sturdy and uninhibited.

What bothered me, as usual, was that they marched in five different groups, some of them holding aloft ideological slogans which were—not only in the literal sense—above their heads. My mind told me that a passionate belief in themselves and their own creed is what supplies the power-drive for the struggle to build a nation, and is what makes these young people willing to pioneer the rugged borders of the country and, if necessary die fighting for it. And if this also means that the disputations of their elders are carried into the classrooms, is this too great a price to pay? But my heart was nostalgic for a sheltered easygoing childhood in which games matter more than politics, and juvenile differences of opinion have nothing to do with "global orientation."

TALKING OF RUGGED BORDERS, hats off to the fishing kibbutz Ein Gev, which has a strategically impossible position on the map, wedged between the eastern shore of the Sea of Galilee and the mountains of Syria—yet blithely carried through its annual Pesach musical festival within rifle shot of the enemy. On Thursday afternoon I left Tel Aviv at five o'clock, and two hours later came over a rise to look down upon one of the loveliest panoramas in the world—the lake and the hills enfolding it, bathed in the translucent after-sunset glow. In the gathering dusk, I drove through a police checkpoint in the ruined Arab town of Semakh and up the east shore of the lake to the settlement. I paid 75 piastres ($2.10) to one of the chaverim with a hooded lantern, and together with 1,100 other listeners from the kibbutzim and the cities, sat in the new arena, carved out of the side of a hill, under a ceiling of stars.

From a covered and lighted stage on the shore, the music of a wind quintet mingled with the soft lapping of the water. Only that afternoon snipers from the Syrian-occupied village of Nukel, just one mile further along the shore, had been peppering the Ein Gev buildings from the edges of the settlement's own fields. (The following evening firing took place during the concert.) A scattering of police was the only sign that the country's most ambitious music festival was being held in a war zone. As our cars creaked the lake again at midnight, through the narrow demilitarized zone, I realized why our neighbors regarded us as an irrepressible people.

Meet the People...

CORPORAL CHAIM PUPKIN, of Tel Aviv's Volunteer Fire Brigade is a baker by vocation, as was his father before him. Now 37, Chaim Pupkin came to Palestine from Lithuania as a child of nine. He lives in the southern quarter of Tel Aviv with his wife and three children, spends three nights a month with the fire brigade, likes to take part in motorcycle races during his spare time. Some day, thinks Corporal Pupkin, Tel Aviv will have a full-time professional fire department. While he feels that the temporary wooden houses erected for new immigrants have increased the fire risks in the city, he also recognizes that this disadvantage is far outweighed by the need to provide living quarters for the newcomers.

Round-Up...

By NAVON

THE KNESSET REASSEMBLED in Jerusalem last week after a month's Passover recess and passed a law providing for a maximum work week of 47 hours. Maximum stint on Sundays to Thursdays will be eight hours, with seven on Fridays, while Saturday will become a compulsory day of rest for Jewish employees. Non-Jews will be able to choose their own days of rest.

The only opposition to the measure came from the Religious Bloc. Frustrated in their attempts to introduce a Sabbath observance law, they tried to introduce amendments to this bill which would in effect have banned all work on the Sabbath except with the consent of the Chief Rabbinate. Their amendments failed and the bill finally passed by 54 votes to 13.

The same night, police uncovered what they said was a plot by religious zealots to explode an incendiary-smoke bomb on the floor of the House. This outrage was to have been perpetrated in connection with expected action on another bill—the one providing that women who object to joining the army on religious grounds must render other forms of national service. (The bill did not come up that night.)

According to plans which police stated they found in the pockets of a member of an underground group called "Brith Hakanaim" (League of Zealots), persons outside the Knesset building were to have cut the electric lines while accomplices in the visitors' gallery tossed the bomb onto the floor. In the next 24 hours Jerusalem police rounded-up more than 40 suspected members of this terrorist organization, which is held responsible for the burning of 23 cars driven in Jerusalem on the Sabbath and of one butcher shop which sold non-kosher meat. During the searches, an arms cache was found in a closet in a theological school.

JERUSALEM, May 22—By a vote of 53 to one, with 48 abstentions, the Knesset today condemned the emergency regulations under which the police last week arrested the religious zealots. It instructed its Legislative Committee to prepare within two weeks measures repealing these regulations. Criticism was voiced not so much against the arrests themselves as against the regulations, which are a survival from the British Mandatory regime.

THE TWENTY-THIRD ZIONIST CONGRESS is scheduled to open in the new Convention Centre on Mount Herzl on August 14, before 495 delegates representing 1,900,000 Zionists in 45 countries. Israel will elect its 210 delegates on June 13. The principal issues confronting the Congress are the field of work for the Zionist Organization, relations between the movement and the Government of Israel, organizational changes and the future of the Zionist funds.

THE INITIAL ROUND IN THE KNESSET election campaigns has been a slugfest between the General Zionists (right-wing) and Mapai (moderate labor).

Israel Press

Ben Gurion Visit to U. S.

DAVAR writes that the visit to the U. S. of the Israel Premier has been an event of primary importance for the Jewish nation and is likely to have a considerable effect on Jewish life in the U. S. The paper stresses the significance of the fact that the 5,000,000 Jews of the U. S. are free to demonstrate their identification with and admiration for the Jewish state.

HA'ARETZ also believes Mr. Ben Gurion's visit has been "a special event" in the life of American Jewry. Only with the arrival of the Prime Minister, it says, did the Jews really believe in the miracle of a sovereign and independent state of Israel. The paper goes on to point out that the Jews of the U. S. now have full equality with other communities in that they have their own state to symbolize their best original traits; they are thus at last equal to all other Americans not only in citizenship but as immigrants. In conclusion, the paper attributes the successful opening of the Independence loan campaign to Mr. Ben Gurion's appeal.

AL HAMISHMAR believes that the main purpose of Mr. Ben Gurion's visit is not to encourage the Jewish masses there to assist in the development of Israel but to bind Israel politically, economically and militarily to the "imperialists."

Syria

HATZOFEH warns that there are limits to Israel's willingness to make concessions to Syria for the sake of peace: she is not willing, for instance, to relinquish her rights to execute essential reconstruction projects in the demilitarized zone along the Israel-Syrian frontier. Not even temporarily, it states, will Israel relinquish such rights "for the sake of compensating Shishakli and his cronies for the failure of their latest belligerent adventure."

AL HAMISHMAR asserts that the failure of the UN to take action against Syria is a further illustration of the world organization's activities in this country. The paper goes on to accuse the various powers concerned of using the present argument over whether or not Israel is to be permitted to continue her reclamation work in the Huleh as an opportunity to "play politics." It states that while France is "shamelessly" supporting Syria in order to increase her influence in the Levant, the U. S. stand is typical of the anti-Israel pro-Arab bias of the State Department, and is particularly noticeable in view of the recent pro-American pronouncements of Israel Ministers.

HABOKER warns against any policy of conciliation which, it believes, will be interpreted as weakness by the Arabs and will be followed by further attempts at blackmail.

Season of Plenty

JERUSALEM POST: "Driving through the Emek in May, you get that sensation of plenty, of blessed fruitfulness, that is all too rare in this austere landscape. The sown with eager fingers grapes right into the stony hills and the woods of Galilee, and rolls in wide sweeps into the plain as far as the eye can reach. The barley stands proud and feathery, ripe for cutting, the wheat moving in emerald waves sucks in the sun to swell its grains, round if not as plentiful as last year, the maize covers with tender shoots the land ploughed only a short time ago; and everywhere the hay is being harvested... A combine and a hay-press at work, looked at with eyes that see, can be marvels of romance in the Emek, where less than 30 years ago the Bedu camped in poisonous swamps."

As Ein Gev held its music festival: "Run and file a complaint with the UN," says the Syrian officer. "Those notes are coming across the border!"

SYD COHEN:

Are the Umpires Blind?

Several years ago I outraged some Red Sox fans by suggesting that I saw Bobby Doerr miss tagging second base while completing a double play. It happened several times that season, and I finally stopped commenting about it, since no one believed me.

Two Sundays ago, I saw the Washington second baseman relay a throw to first for a double play and not come within two steps of second base while in possession of the ball. Yet the force was allowed.

Now comes an article in Sport Magazine, entitled: "Wanted: Standardized Umpiring," in which this situation is discussed. The writer deploras what he calls the "epidemic of automatic double plays," where the middle man tags the bag without having the ball in his possession, sometimes misses the bag entirely, and actually does not make the force play at second. The base umpires, he says, just won't call the infielders' guilt. They close their eyes to the violation and call the double play.

Most interesting, to this writer, was the added comment that American League umpires "are more lax on this infraction". Makes me feel better. I was beginning to be worried about my optical illusions in the vicinity of second base.

From another source, I learned that the umpires are not blind to the situation, that they permit the second baseman and shortstop to get away with it as compensation for the beating these players take from base runners who deliberately hit them while trying to break up a double play.

This blocking off of an infielder to prevent him from throwing to first for the double play, or to cause him to drop the ball, has baseball executives worried. There is a rule forbidding the play, but there are no teeth in it. Many infielders take a really murderous beating, and the question is how do they stand up under the punishment, and continue to sparkle as they do.

Chances are that it will take a serious and maybe permanent injury to some second sacker or shortstop before baseball gets around to doing something about it.

Yet, you will find baseball "experts" who will tell you what sissies and pampered darlings the present generation of ball players have become. With that second base situation, plus the current epidemic of bean balls, their argument doesn't sound too strong.

Meanwhile, watch the start of those double plays at second base. You may see the infielders get away with murder.

Talk to the average baseball fan, and he will swear up and down that you cannot fool him on any of the rules. He knows the game, besides which all the rules are standardized and simple. Just try and fool him.

Actually, it isn't too difficult to stump the fans, for many of these rules are tricky—and that goes for the rules that we think we all know.

For example, stop right here and see if you know how the infield fly rule works. Chances are that you don't know the complete rule, as common as it is. If you do, you rate a baseball bouquet. Now let's see how well you did.

With men on first and second—or first, second and third—and less than two out, the batter is automatically out on an infield fly. That much is simple and easily understood. The purpose of the rule is to prevent a double or triple play from resulting as an infielder deliberately drops the pop fly, then rifles it to the other bases to trap the base runners who are forced if the ball hits the ground.

But that is not the extent of the infield fly rule. How do you determine what is an infield fly, or whether any particular pop fly is too difficult to be an infield fly? You may have heard one of the baseball announcers tell about it, but the chances are it didn't make too much of an impression unless you are rules conscious.

The infield fly rule is called when, in the judgment of the umpires, the pop fly can easily be caught by an infielder facing the infield. That, of course, depends upon the umpire. It doesn't matter whether the ball is on the skin of the infield or on the outfield grass. Obviously, if the shortstop has to race out 100 feet or more to get into position, the infield fly rule does not apply.

Even that does not tell the whole story. How about the base runners? Are they automatically frozen to their bases when the infield fly rule is called? Is the ball dead as soon as the umpire calls the play? The answer to both questions is NO!

The ball is in play, and the runners may move—but at their own risk. That is, if they want to play safe, they may stand on their respective bases. The batter is automatically out, and there is no opportunity for the force play. However, if the runner moves off his base, a play may be made on him; and conversely, if the runner sees the chance to advance a base as the infielders mishandle the ball, he may go.
