Charges 'Preposterous' Jailed Newsman's Wife Stands By Husband, Pleads Release

ST. PAUL (AJP)—The Jewish wife of imprisoned William N. Oatis loyally stood by her husband's side this week, though mystified by the swift events which led to his arrest on so-called "espionage" charges in Czechoslovakia and a 10-year term for "spying".

"I don't want to say anything that's going to make it tougher for William over there," the wife of the Associated Press' Prague bureau chief said. Oatis' imprisonment is under fire from the State Department, the AP, and other major news gathering agencies, as a blow to the free press.

Mrs. Oatis lives with her mother, Mrs. M. R. Zack, widow of the late Dr. Zack, pioneer dentist of Duluth, at her St. Paul home. She plans to retain her job as an advertising copy writer at the Golden Rule, the wife told Louis Greene, columnist for the American Jewish Herald, local English-Jewish weekly.

"It was a much-coveted assignment," Laurabelle said, when Oatis left to cover Prague for the AP on June 23, 1950. "His weekly letters were very cheerful. He enjoyed life in Prague very much, and wanted me to go back there with him to live after his tour of duty ended.

"But from his dispatches," she added ruefully, "I gather there wasn't much doing there. So they cooked something up."

Mrs. Zack only commented: "Bill is such a passionately truthful person, he couldn't do anything dishonorable. The charges are preposterous."

Laurabelle said "the State Department has kept in touch with me constantly on every aspect of the situation," and promised to seek the release of her husband. She went to New York to talk to AP executives, and they also reassured her.

She married Oatis in London a year and a half ago following a four-year courtship. They met in New York, where both worked for the AP but, had fate so willed it they might have come together at the University of Minnesota, where she studied journalism at the same time as Oatis did, as a GI student here.

Wins Award Honoring Late Philosophy Head

NEW YORK CITY (AJP)A — Jewish student, Myron Weiner, of Brooklyn, was awarded the first annual Morris Raphael Cohen Memorial Scholarship at City College here last week. The scholarship was created by a group of 45 students at the college to help a deserving senior finance his way through graduate school.

The first student-created scholarship in City College history, the award was named in honor of the late Morris Raphael Cohen.

Anti-Semitic Fans In Chicago Quieted In Fight at Ball Park

CHICAGO — The incredible Chicago White Sox are continuing to amaze the baseball world, but some bigoted fans at Comiskey Park can't seem to swallow the fact that Jewish and Negro players have contributed to the phenomenal record of a team the experts picked to finish in the second division.

Two of the White Sox leading pitchers are Sol Rogovin and Marvin Rottblatt, Jewish players. Recently those two players had become the target of vituperation by a group of fans who somehow managed to get seats near the home team's dugout. Whenever those players left the bench, the fans would pounce on them with abuse, calling them Jews, kikes and other unprintable names.

A group of Jewish fans to whose attention the incidents had been brought decided to defend the honor of the Jewish players. They purchased tickets in the area where the hoodlums were known to concentrate and when the bigots started to abuse the Jewish players, the Jewish fans challenged them to keep quiet. The ruffians replied with insults and threats of beatings. After a brief verbal clash the two engaged in a fist fight. Two of the hoodlums were placed under arrest and three others were taken to the Mercy Hospital for treatment. The rest of the gang fled before the police arrived. Three of the Jewish boys were slightly injured in the scuffle.

The White Sox management promised to take action against the recurrence of abuse against Jewish and Negro players. While

To Take Release Time Before Supreme Court

NEW YORK (AJP) — Two parents of Brooklyn school children, one a Jew and the other a Protestant, prepared to carry the fight of school release time for religious instruction to the highest court in the land after the State Court of Appeals ruled 6-1 in favor of New York City's release-time program.

The disclosure that the parents would appeal the decision rendered in Albany last week to the United State Supreme Court was made by Kenneth W. Greenawalt, attorney for the two parents who have battled the release time system for two years.

Both parents maintain that the practice of excusing public school students for one hour each week to attend religious instruction is unconstitutional because "it does violence to the basic American principle that the state should not subject any of its citizens, young or old, to compulsion in matters of religion."

The parents are Tessib Zorach, a Protestant, and Mrs. Esta Gluck, who is Jewish. Both have children enrolled in religious schools, but outside the public school system.

the fight was on, the fans cheered the Jewish boys for defending the honor of their people and the game.

Cantor for 30 Years at Ahavath Sholom Has New Job at Home

Cantor David Einstein recently terminated a service of close to thirty years at the Congregation Ahavath Sholom. At the farewell tendered in his honor, Mr. Einstein was presented with a gold watch and gifts from the Sisterhood.

Cantor Einstein came to this country in 1922 from the city of Odessa, in Russia. There he shared the cantorial service with the famous cantor Roitman, in the Great Shlashne Shul. The Shlashne Shul was a show place in Odessa, and was widely known in Europe for the high standards of the liturgical music, and for the artistic interior of the Shul.

Cantor Einstein came to the pulpit of Ahavath Sholom on his arrival to this country, and has served the congregation without interruption until now. When the new synagogue on Rochambeau Avenue was erected, Cantor Einstein followed the congregation to the new place of worship.

All through his years Cantor Einstein earned the highest respect from the congregation and from all who came in touch with him, both for his melodious traditional singing, as well as for his scholarship.

Mr. Einstein will resume the duties of cantor and reader at the Synagogue at the Home for the Aged on Hillside Avenue.

Israel Village Switches Name To 'Hamptown'

NEW YORK (AJP) — An Israeli village recently altered its name to 'Hamptown' in a tribute to Negro orchestra leader Lionel Hampton who recently donated royalties from several recordings including "Eli-Eli", to settlements in the Jewish State, the "Amsterdam News", a Negro weekly disclosed this week.

Hampton recently recorded several modern tunes accompanied by the Yemenite vocalist Shoshana Damari.

Goldin Appointed Exeter Chaplain

Rabbi Aaron Goldin, of the Ohawe Sholom Synagogue in Pawtucket, was this week appointed Jewish Chaplain at Exeter Institution, it was announced by Edward P. Reidy, director of the Department of Social Welfare. Rabbi Goldin's duties will include the holding of religious services for the Jewish residents of Exeter and to assist in their mental and physical rehabilitation.

Rabbi Goldin on being advised of his appointment stated that he would be available to parents and guardians of children at Exeter for assistance in their problems.

Rabbi Goldin, spiritual leader of his Pawtucket Congregation for 11 years, has been active in social service work for many years.

Small Jewish Charities Victimized

NEW YORK (AJP) — High-pressure solicitors who keep most of the charity funds they collect have victimized some of the smaller Jewish charitable and welfare organizations, the American Jewish Press was told this week.

This fact was revealed as representatives of Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish charitable and welfare organizations met here to work out a city code to stop such activities.

Columnist Walter Winchell said that "racketeers" were using Jewish slogans and labels in street fund-raising near Lindy's and other places frequented by Jewish customers, and then using Christian appeals in the theatre district.

THE WORLD'S YOUNGEST DEMOCRACY which three short years ago was battling against overwhelming odds for its very existence, is hard at work in the summer of 1951 building new industries to provide modern tools and jobs for newcomers to the Jewish State. The vast gains in Israel's industrial "growing-up" process are shown in this photographic report just arrived from the Jewish State. (1) A newly American established watch factory at Ramat Gan produces 34,000 alarm clocks annually; (2) Just like in the States—pretty exhibit and all, Israel is producing modern refrigerators. The factory, another American investment, is turning out 1000 refrigerators monthly; (3) Another view of the Ramat Gan alarm clock factory and its modern tools for making the tick-tocks beat right; (4) Now immigrants to Israel from Shanghai invested capital to open a modern workshop in Jaffa to manufacture auto spare parts; (5) Radios for the local market and for export are being manufactured by a factory set up in Israel by a group of French investors; (6) An Israeli mechanic checks over a new Kaiser-Frazer model before it rolls off the assembly line at the Haifa plant. First shipments of the cars are already enroute to Finland as part of Israel's growing export trade. (American Jewish Press Photo)

Kirkpatrick To Attend Bankers School

Donald Kirkpatrick, vice president of Plantations Bank of Rhode Island, 61 Weybosset Street, has been accepted for enrollment in the 1951 class of the Bankers School of Public Relations, sponsored by the New York State Bankers Association, in cooperation with Syracuse University.

The fourth annual resident session of the School will be held on the Syracuse University campus July 23 through 27. Classes will be held in the Maxwell School of Citizenship.

Relations with the most powerful force in any business, "The Customer", will be the subject of nineteen intensified courses on customer service and new business development.

The Bankers School of Public

Relations is the first school of its kind in the nation. The School is staffed with the finest talent available from the various faculties of the University, namely, the College of Business Administration, the School of Journalism, the College of Liberal Arts, University College, Utica College, the School of Speech, and the Radio and Television Center, as well as public relation specialists from the banking industry.

Enrollment is limited to about 75 bankers from the 870 odd financial institutions throughout New York State. For one week each year for two years these bankers become students and lead the academic life of the University.

Small Jewish Charities Victimized

A spokesman for the Jewish group said that some Jewish charity groups had been involved through acceptance of the "services" of the promoters, who frequently kept as much as 70% of their collections.

The new Committee on Public Solicitation of the Welfare Council of New York was set up after city officials reported widespread complaints.

Charles E. Keegan, Acting City Council Majority Leader, said that the committee was moving cautiously because they did not want to hurt the legitimate charities.

The committee may recommend state and national legislation.

HEBREW U. GETS CHECK

LONDON — A Damon Runyon Cancer Fund check for $10,000 for the Hebrew University Medical School and Hadassah Hospital in Jerusalem, was presented by Sugar Ray Robinson, American Negro middleweight boxer, to a representative of the British Friends of the Hebrew University.

The presentation was made at a dinner at Windsor given by Jack Solomon, British fight promoter. Other checks were presented to cancer research foundations in England and Ireland.

Fund Campaigns Passing '50 Totals

NEW YORK—The Jewish communities in the United States are successfully meeting their 1951 overseas and domestic obligations and many of them are running ahead of comparable 1950 results, it was announced here by the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, on the basis of a report by its president, Julian Freeman.

Mr. Freeman disclosed that many communities had already raised more than their final 1950 totals. Included among these communities are: Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati, Atlantic City, Memphis, Miami and San Diego.

"The past few months," Mr. Freeman declared, "have been a period of substantial achievements for our communities. Israel, strained under the terrific impact of the flood of refugees, will get more dollars than it received last year from Spring welfare fund campaigns. For tens of thousands in Europe and the Middle East we have met the deadline of escape. At home our sick and aged, our children, our young men and women in the armed forces, the immigrants who have come to our shores, our own security, will benefit from what we have achieved."

Claim Summer Resorts Show Bias

NEW YORK — A complaint that summer resorts in New York, New Jersey and New England are violating the civil rights law of this state was lodged by the American Jewish Congress with the New York State Commission Against Discrimination.

In its complaint, the AJC alleged that 49 resorts were circumventing the advertising policies of New York City newspapers by substituting the phrases "near churches", "near Christian churches", and "Protestant and Catholic churches nearby" for the terms "selected clientele", "restricted clientele" and other phrases declared unlawful.

Similar complaints were directed to the New Jersey Civil Rights Commission, the Massachusetts Committee Against Discrimination, the Connecticut Commission on Civil Rights and the Rhode Island Fair Employment Practices Commission, urging them to investigate and take action against hotels over which they have jurisdiction.

Stars to Aid Bond Program at Narra. Pier

From Aiding Haganah to Korea Jewish Ex-School Tutor Home From Six Months In Korea

NEW YORK (AJP) — The only civilian in the year-old history of the Korean War to win the 'Bronx Star'—and a Brooklynite, too—returned home this week adding another chapter to an adventurous career which began nine years ago when as a school teacher he decided it was time to go out and actively practice what he tutored to his students.

Since that day in 1942 when he closed his instructor's book for the last time, middle-aged, bald Samuel H. Varonok's travels have taken him to the battlefields of Europe as a Red Cross field director; the hideaways of Czechoslovakia where as a Jewish relief director he helped the Haganah smuggle trapped Jews out of Poland, and most recently, the front lines of Korea.

Varonok is home on a brief furlough after serving six months as a Red Cross Field Director assigned to the Fifth Cavalry Regiment of the First Cavalry Division in Korea. He is waiting reassignment to his domestic assignment—at Camp Kilmer, N. J., after a career in which he served as a field director with the 76th combat infantry regiment in Europe and as a social worker aiding Jewish displaced persons in Austria.

The stocky, gruff-voiced Jewish ex-school teacher became the only Red Cross man in the Far East, in fact the only man anywhere to be awarded the 'Bronx Star', during special ceremonies staged at the forward command post of his regiment as he was leaving Korea.

The colorful citation (now in a trunk enroute back to Brooklyn) was written in a humorous and friendly view, was for "meritorious service" and it was a token of earthly commendation from a grateful regiment for a job well done. Varonok kept the First Cavalry division men supplied with comfort articles, stationery, reports on home situations, (frequently delivered under fire to men in actual combat) and that indefinable factor called morale.

The Order of the Bronx Star cited him for his work in accord with the "highest traditions of the International Red Cross of Brooklyn, New York." It was presented by the commanding officer in a ceremony at a forward command post in Korea. Varonok's prompt action in coming to the aid of officers in the bachelor officers quarters (a Korean shack burned flat by enemy mortar fire) with a replenishing supply of toilet articles inspired the citation.

PRIVACY FOR VISITORS

THE great inspiring dignity of owning a private family burial lot in beautiful Sharon Memorial Park gives visitors a feeling of pride, a sense of peace and comfort which is impossible to attain in old type cemeteries.

At Sharon Memorial Park, there is complete privacy for visitors, away from industrial developments, busy thoroughfares and the hustle bustle of the noisy city. Sharon Memorial Park, the first all-Jewish garden cemetery in New England, will, through the generations of the future, stand as a fitting and perfect tribute to the devotion we bear our dear ones there at rest.

Plan a visit to Sharon Memorial Park with your family. See for yourself why so many foresighted Jewish families have already purchased family burial lots in this beautiful garden cemetery which presents "the better way."

Flays MacIver Report Critics; Urges 'Serious' Study of Report

The once "top secret" MacIver Report, a suggested blueprint for improving the structure of Jewish defense agencies; continued in the news this week with a member of the NCRAC committee charged with preparing the report flaying critics of the Report and representatives of welfare funds in America's 12 largest cities urging a "serious, objective" study of Dr. MacIver's findings by "all responsible groups."

Lewis Weinstein, vice-president of the Jewish Community Council of Metropolitan Boston and a member of the Special Committee on Evaluative Studies of the Nat'l Community Relations Advisory Council, attacked attempts to discredit the MacIver Report as "unobjective" and as "attacks on Orthodox and Jewish education." Admitting that the study report would "provoke discussion and will not meet with universal agreement," Weinstein contended that "it is inconsistent with sound community relations and it is unfair to try to discredit the report and its author before its publication and to attempt to influence pre-judgment by those who have not read its contents."

The MacIver Report was flayed by Judge Meier Steinbrink, national chairman of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, as "unobjective". Writing to members of the board of directors of the ADL, Judge Steinbrink contended that "large portions of it (the Report) are invalid and many sections reveal a lack of understanding of Jewish life or history."

Meanwhile at a weekend meeting in New York City, the Large City Budgeting Conference urged all responsible groups to afford the MacIver Report careful study and said it would "help facilitate this process." LCBC representatives, the group said, plan to conduct local discussions with "their respective boards and responsible committees so that the LCBC brief will reflect the reasoned views of the local leadership in each community."

The LCBC, together with major defense agencies and local community relations councils, is scheduled to submit its views on the Report to the Evaluative Study Committee of the NCRAC, sponsors of the survey.

San Quentin Cons Want Lessons in Hebrew--Really!

LOS ANGELES—(AJP)—“Shalom” and other familiar Hebrew words may soon become part of prison lingo as a number of convicts at famed San Quentin prison prepared to pore over their Aleph-Beth primers.

The unique trend came to the B'nai B'rith Messenger, local English-Jewish weekly, in the form of a letter from the warden requesting a supply of back issues of the Messenger's weekly Hebrew lesson in column form.

The warden explained that the issues would be appreciated by a number of convicts who expressed a desire to learn Hebrew.

Famed Jewish Composer Dies at 76

LOS ANGELES (AJP) — One of the world's greatest composers who left Germany in 1933 on his own accord because of Hitler's oppression of the Jews—Arnold Schoenberg—died here this week after a long illness. He was 76.

Schoenberg, a composer and teacher who invented the controversial twelve-tone system in music, was considered a revolutionary in music. Though his works created some of the stormiest reactions in conservative musical circles, Schoenberg's contribution to musical theory was widely accepted as being among the greatest of the era.

The Jewish composer broke away from the established harmonic rules and instead formulated a twelve-tone system by which all twelve tones of the chromatic scale were of equal value. Born in Vienna on Sept. 13, 1874, Schoenberg played the violin at the age of 12 and despite conditions of poverty turned to self study of music. As a youth, Schoenberg was converted to Christianity, but following his successes in later years and on the eve of Hitler's advent to power in 1933, the composer re-embraced Judaism and on his own accord left Germany in protest to discrimination against Jews.

Since the existing five Liberal congregations in Israel have never been accorded official status by the Orthodox Chief Rabbinate, the formation of the new organization assumes special significance. It may challenge the monopoly of the Orthodox Rabbinate and the Israel Government may be placed in a position where it will have to take an official stand in the matter . . . Naturally, American Reform Rabbis, among whom there are many active Zionists, are behind the new rabbinical group in Israel . . . Communal Trends: Something new has been started in American Jewish communal life. Following the evaluation report on the activities of the Jewish organizations engaged in combatting anti-Semitism, another "evaluation report" has now made its appearance, this time on the services for Jewish Community Centers rendered by the National Jewish Welfare Board . . . And in Philadelphia, an overall survey has been initiated by the Allied Jewish Appeal on local Jewish educational activities . . . A special committee there will examine overlapping programs, administrative efficiency, besides determining the neglected areas of Jewish education . . . The "evaluation report" on Jewish Center work is the result of several years of discussions of the need for an intense analysis of the functions and program of the Jewish Center Division of the Jewish Welfare Board . . . The evaluation of the activities of a number of other American Jewish institutions is now being requested by some of the larger Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds. Incidentally, no action on Prof. R. M. McIver's report, evaluating the work of the Jewish groups active in fighting anti-Jewish prejudice, will probably be taken until after the General Assembly of the Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, which is scheduled to take place at the end of November . . . In the meantime, the report is becoming a major issue in American Jewish communal life because of its blunt recommendations. In this connection, it was revealed this week that the six national agencies evaluated by Prof. McIver spent a total of $5,672,000 last year, which is about $1,100,000 less than in the previous year . . . Adjusting these figures for changes in the price level, the drop was 22% . . . There were variations among the agencies.

Flimsy Disguise

A new organization made its appearance this week with a great blast—a whole page advertisement in the New York Times. The name of the organization is the American Friends of the Middle East. The head of the organization is Dorothy Thompson. It is significant that among the sponsors there is not a single Jew, but the list does include a number of leading anti-Zionists.

The purposes of the organization, as professed in the page advertisement, is "to break through the curtain of obscurity and distortion by writing and publicizing material designed to broaden understanding in the United States of Middle Eastern peoples." The advertisement goes on to say that most Americans "have never had an accurate picture of the Middle East." In appealing for contributions, the advertisement further says, that it seeks American support "free from political pressure and racial and religious discrimination."

One might say that the American Friends of the Middle East is a wolf in sheep's clothing, but for the fact that no wolf sensibly would dare disguise himself in such flimsy clothing. It does not take any seventh son of a seventh son to see that the Thompson organization is merely designed to fight Israel. Once upon a time, Miss Thompson was a kind of Zionist Joan of Arc herself; but something in her soured. She has a right to change her mind, but somehow we would appreciate this advertisement more if it were a little more honest and boldly stated its true purposes. Certainly no organization which purports to represent the whole Middle East genuinely would omit some representative of the Zionists. The American Enemies of Israel might be a more appropriate name for the new organization.

Gaer's Splendid Novel Heart Upon the Rock:

Those who have read Joseph Gaer's "How the Great Religions Began," published more than 20 years ago, have reason to expect good writing and a good plot in his new novel, "Heart Upon the Rock," published by Dodd, Mead & Co., 432 4th Ave., NYC. They won't be disappointed.

Mr. Gaer narrates the story of the Bessarabian Jewish widow Hannah and her family. The story may well be called a tragedy—but for that matter the life of all Jews in Bessarabia, as in all of Russia, in the era described, was tragic.

"Heart Upon the Rock" is the

Claims Israel Balks On Return of Arabs

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — Israel was charged this week with failure to implement a Security Council resolution asking for the return of Arab civilians removed by Israeli forces from the demilitarized zone between Syria and Israel.

The charge was contained in a report to the U. N. from Lt. Gen. William E. Riley, chief U. S. observer in Palestine. General Riley also informed the U. N. that Israeli police contingents had not been withdrawn from the demilitarized zone, another security council request.

story of a struggle for life, for retention of ideals for perpetuation of Jewish values. And Hannah, like the heroine of old, is courageous. Part of the family is in America, a daughter left to study in Odessa and landed in Siberia after becoming involved in revolutionary anti-Czarist activities, and the young Daniel, too, is sent to America in order to divert his attention from Odessa and a possible repetition of his sister's fate.

The tragedy becomes evident when Hannah is told—without realizing the significance of it—that Daniel, who went to America in the hope of studying medicine, became an "operator". The struggle continued for the family even in free America.

But throughout the entire story there is a faith that is indestructible. Hannah is staunch on observance. Even the anxiety about her family in America is not permitted to stand in the way of Sabbath observance and she does not open the letters until Sabbath is over.

Mr. Gaer reveals excellent knowledge about Jewish traditions. His quoted prayers lend dignity and strength to his fine novel which deserves a very wide sale because of the wholesome plot, because of the compassionate theme is well executed, and because it throws so much light on life of Jews in Russia prior to World War I.

"JEWISH EDUCATION IN PROVIDENCE"

(This is the third in a series of articles specially prepared for the Herald by the General Jewish Committee of Providence, Inc. They are founded upon a recently compiled report which, in turn, is based upon the findings and recommendations of a committee appointed in November, 1949, to conduct a thorough survey of Jewish education facilities in Providence.)

The Jewish community of Lynn, Massachusetts this Fall will open the doors of that city's first Jewish Community High School as an extension of its present elementary Hebrew schools.

According to a newspaper article, the school's curricula will include Proverbs, Psalms, Talmud, Hebrew literature and grammar.

The significance of Lynn's action is two-fold: (1) For the first time, teen-agers on the high school level will be provided facilities for a comprehensive program of Jewish education; (2) All elements in the Jewish community have agreed, in general, upon the basic curricula of the school.

Last week's article dealt with the findings of the Committee on School Population and Facts—one of the three major sub-committees that recently completed an intensive survey of Jewish education facilities in this city under the sponsorship of the General Jewish Committee of Providence.

Pointing out that there is only one child of 14 years of age attending a Jewish weekday school—and very few of high school age in the Sunday Schools—the committee made this noteworthy observation:

"It is precisely at the age when the child has become the adolescent and is capable of intellectually appreciating the uniqueness of the Jewish relation—and the sweep, splendor and tragedy of Jewish history—that he severs his relationship with the Jewish school and formal Jewish learning."

Whereupon the study group advanced the suggestion of a consolidated high school for Sunday School graduates.

In both Lynn and Providence—as well as in other communities throughout the nation where similar studies have been made recently—it is noteworthy that, virtually without exception, recommendations are made that high school facilities be provided for the teen-age group.

Such unanimity of opinion, however, is not always to be found when the delicate matter is raised as to what subjects should be taught Jewish youth in this age group.

The importance of this matter was recognized by the General Jewish Committee when, in setting up its survey groups a year ago, it appointed as one of its major sub-committees a "Committee on Curricula and Standards of Performance."

Named chairman of this group was Professor Israel J. Kapstein, a well-known member of the Brown University faculty.

Kapstein's committee faced up, in realistic manner, to the question of curricula.

In its final report, it stated that it "recognizes the range of doctrinal differences which color and determine the goals and aims of the different Jewish schools—from those of the Providence Hebrew Day School to the liberal Religious School of Beth El."

In emphatic fashion, it went on to say that it "also recognizes that educational aims—Jewish or general—are also social aims, and that as such they affect directly and indirectly all strata of the community.

"Therefore, the committee wishes to assert that no one school—be it congregational or non-congregational—may deny the community some share in directing its aims."

Summarizing its position, Kapstein committee flatly stated:

"The committee wishes to make explicitly clear that it does not seek the elimination of the doctrinal or religious differences that normally exist among the schools—or the imposition of one dominant doctrine on all of them—or that the schools abandon their autonomy. It is our opinion that—while each school retains its own doctrinal emphasis—it accepts at the same time certain basic aims in the programs of all schools."

That phrase—"certain basic aims"—was broadly defined in these terms:

1) To develop in the young child a natural acceptance of his Jewishness; in the older child, an intellectual conviction of his worthwhileness.

2) To prepare the child to live as an honorable and useful member of the Jewish people so that, in maturity, he will help maintain the religious, philanthropic, cultural, social and other institutions developed by his community.

3) To foster in the child an appreciation of the historic Jewish heritage and a desire to cultivate it and to pass it on—enriched—to his children.

4) To make the Jewish heritage meaningful in terms of the larger American culture. (Here perhaps one of its most vibrant observations was sounded by the committee when it declared that "the Jewish school must strengthen the child's consciousness that the Jewish people's uniqueness is not only compatible with the democratic and humanitarian faith of America and the world—but is one of the roots that nourish this faith.")

5) To immunize the child against the spiritual ravages of anti-semitism with which Western civilization is tainted. Modern anti-semitism causes sharp conflicts within the Jewish soul. These conflicts, if not resolved, corrode the Jewish personality. The effective remedy that science offers against such corrosion is the building up of a strong sense of self-respect based on self-knowledge.

6) To build up and strengthen in the child traits of character and inner resources of faith in the betterment of the world and man which will enable him, in later years, to combat the anti-Jewish and anti-democratic forces which frequently press on the Jewish individual.

Few readers of this series of articles will deny that the above declarations of principle constitute one of the most keenly penetrating "summaries of faith" that has ever been arrived at by any comparable group.

(In the opinion of this writer, this declaration should be widely publicized throughout American Jewish communities. Its six basic aims embrace all shades and meanings of a rich, constructive, progressive philosophy in which the spiritual is intimately integrated with the realistic, everyday pattern of living.)

Kapstein's group was not content only to draft the blueprint of objectives of a well-organized curriculum for Jewish schools. In succinct language, it listed the practical elements of a "Code of Administrative Practices" for acceptance by all schools. This code, said the group, should be concerned with such matters as:

A definite city-wide registration date for all schools; a maximum age for admission into the schools; adoption of a uniform school calendar and length of school year; proper age-grading of the children; control of absenteeism; effective teaching methods appropriate to the different age-levels; regular annual promotions; scholastic achievement in relation to the public celebration of Bar Mitzvah; regular graduations based on merit and achievement; introduction of graded curricula on a minimum number of years; professional supervision of all schools; certification of teachers.

(The committee made it plain that it felt that such a code should be applicable to both the elementary schools and a school "for children of high school age.")

It is not surprising that Kapstein's group placed such heavy emphasis upon the development of desirable character traits as the primary objective of the Jewish school. From time immemorial, the world's greatest philosophers, statesmen and religious leaders have agreed upon this goal.

"Education has for its object the formation of character," declared Herbert Spencer. And, hundreds of centuries ago, Epicurus meaningfully observed: "Only the educated are free!"

Israeli Air Cadets Finish U. S. Training

LOS ANGELES (AJP) — Forty-six Israeli air cadets completed a year's training course of intensive training in airplane mechanics in nearby Glendale last week and prepared to return to Israel.

The youths, here under the leadership of Capt. Yariv Haran, received instruction at the Cal-Areo Institute near here, the B'nai B'rith Messenger, local English-Jewish weekly reported. Their training in the United States was sponsored by the Technion Society.

A farewell reception for the ground crewmen was held last week under the sponsorship of the Southern California Chapter of the American Technion Society.

First Jewish Pilgrims Braved Pirates, Sea To Sail For America

BY FRANK SIMONS

The phrase, "My ancestors came to this country aboard the Mayflower," is one of the best known stock expressions in American history. Little has ever been recorded, however, about the 23 Jewish 'Pilgrims' who in 1654, only 34 years after the Mayflower landing at Plymouth Rock, disembarked at Manhattan Island, then called New Amsterdam.

Leaving their homes in Europe to escape religious intolerance this band of Jews braved the perils of seas, faced capture by a pirate ship, were rescued by a French privateer and finally landed at the Dutch settlement in Sept., 1654, where they founded the first Jewish settlement and built Shearith Israel Congregation, the second religious structure in New York. Only the Dutch Reformed Church was previously organized.

In the years that followed, foundations for other synagogues were laid. In 1658 the Jewish settlement at Newport, R. I., began Touro Synagogue, which was dedicated in 1763. This beautiful structure has been designated as

Pawtucket Committee Chairmen Meet

Mrs. Harry Gershman entertained the committee chairmen of the Pawtucket Hadassah at her home in Barrington recently. Plans were formulated for the coming year.

Mrs. Samuel Cokin's lawn in Barrington will be the setting for the annual bridge, August first. Mesdames Max Alperin, Harvey Epstein, Harry Gershman and Morris Goldstein were appointed delegates to the National Convention in Atlantic City, September 16-19.

September 24 was set as the date of the opening meeting of the group, in the vestry of Ahavath Sholom Synagogue.

Discussion Group Begins Program

Dr. Aaron Nemtow, chairman of the Thursday Night Discussion Group of the Jewish Community Center, has announced that the group began its summer program on July 19, attending the Esplanade Concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

A picnic is planned for July 26, for which transportation will be provided for those who meet at the Court House on S. Main Street on that date.

Sid Lechan of Fall River will talk, August 9, on "Am I My Brother's Keeper?"

A social cultural program for young adults is the aim of the group, which is now in its third year.

Woman Wills Aged Jews Home $120,000

MILWAUKEE (AJP) — An estate expected to "substantially exceed" $120,000 was willed to the Milwaukee Home for Aged Jews here this week by the late Miss Regina Kaufer, it was learned this week.

Except for $1,000, which was willed to a cemetery association, the large estate will go in its entirety to the Old Home, the Wisconsin Jewish Chronicle, Midwest English-Jewish weekly reported. A long-time resident of Milwaukee, Miss Kaufer was a past president of the Women's Aid and a charter member of the Women's Aid of the Old Home.

SYD COHEN:

"Baseball Helps Julius Solters"

Maybe you skipped over it in the news almost two weeks ago, since it took place in Pittsburgh; but the party that was thrown on Monday of last week for Julius Solters is deserving of some comment.

The bare facts are well known, but there is a human interest story here that speaks well for professional baseball, which has been called many uncomplimentary names in the past.

Julius Solters, nicknamed "The Moose", came up with the Red Sox in the early 1930's. He was an outfielder, and a slugger, tall, well-built—that's how he got the name of "Moose". Not the classiest ball player in the majors, but good enough to stick around for several years.

Eventually, as Tom Yawkey reconstructed his ball club, Solters was sold to the White Sox, and it was while with the Chicagoans that the Jewish boy was struck on the face by a practice ball. As a result Moose became blind—totally blind—and his financial plight became desperate.

A couple of years ago, the story came into public view when Solters was found attending major league games with his young son, who guided the ex-major leaguer to the park and told him what was going on out on the field.

That is the background for the magnificent gesture made last week by Branch Rickey and the Pittsburgh Pirates—the playing of a benefit exhibition game with the Cleveland Indians the night before the All-Star game, with all proceeds going to Solters.

The crowd wasn't large—in fact, the Pirates bitterly complained about the lack of interest on the part of the public—but it did result in a donation of $15,000 to Moose Solters.

This much you may have read in the papers. But the human interest story is yet to be told.

First item to be mentioned is that Pittsburgh, sponsor of the benefit game, never had any official connection with Solters. Moose was an American Leaguer all the way.

Certainly the Pirates were under no obligation to help a down-and-out ex-ball player. That alone is a commendation for hard-hearted, tight-fisted, money-mad major league owners. It just happens that Solters lives in Pittsburgh. That was enough for Branch Rickey and the Pirates.

Item 2—The game was played on the eve of the All-Star game, at a time when ball players annually get a three day vacation. So the playing of the contest meant considerable sacrifice to all personnel of both teams.

Item 3—Bob Feller, who had just pitched a no-hitter, and had been left off the All-Star team—this same Bob Feller, who didn't have to go out of his way for anyone—made a special flight to Pittsburgh, gambled against injury just when he is going good—and pitched five innings of the benefit. Then he flew to Detroit to see the All-Star game—from the grandstand.

So you see, on all counts, it was a very nice gesture, that benefit to Moose Solters. Maybe some day the baseball commissioner will decree that Solters is worthy of a pension or some kind of assistance. Maybe they could find a job for him at his home-town park, and then the story would really be complete.

Solters, who was a real power hitter, never won the acclaim that the ordinary Jewish player does today. His Jewishness was never even played up, despite his proximity to Dorchester and Roxbury.

He did have a handicap in that regard. A young giant named Hank Greenberg was just starting to take the baseball world by storm at that time. He was pacing the Tigers to a pennant, and Jewish eyes everywhere were on him. There just didn't seem to be any room for a second fiddler like Moose.

And so the tragic tale comes to its close. Unable to draw attention while at his peak as an athlete, Julius Solters becomes a public figure as a broken down blind man.

But thanks to the sport which has not forgotten him, Moose at least will not have to work with a tin cup.

Thanks to Branch Rickey, the Pittsburgh Pirates, the Cleveland Indians, and Bob Feller.

Don't forget, golfers, about the tournament now being planned. If you didn't fill out and mail that coupon last week, get at it now. Forget your score—this is a handicap tourney. Just mail the coupon and get your clubs ready.

Five Jews Receive Public Service Award

NEW YORK (AJP)—Five leading Jews were among the 25 men and women judged to be the private citizens who have done the most for government in New York in the past twelve months. The awards presented by a civil service journal were announced this week.

Among those awarded "in recognition of the outstanding contributions that private citizens are constantly making to the public

Sharon Plan Aids Israel Bond Drive

A plan to increase the purchase of additional State of Israel Bonds has been announced by Eric S. Marmorek, vice president of Sharon Memorial Park, Sharon, Mass.

"In addition to our regular Bond purchases during the present campaign, Sharon Memorial Park will set aside ten per cent of all gross sales during July and August for the purchase of State of Israel Bonds", said Mr. Marmorek.

"Each person who purchases a burial estate in Sharon during the summer months will in this way not only provide essential protection for himself and his family, but—at no extra cost—will indirectly aid the economy of the State of Israel. A Certificate will be issued to each new lot owner stating that through his purchase he has added to the support of the new Jewish State."

By setting aside ten per cent of its gross sales for these bonds, Sharon Memorial Park is demonstrating its faith and confidence in the future of the state of Israel, and at the same time is giving tangible support to this bulwark of democracy.

service," were Bernard F. Gimbel, department store magnate; Gen. David Sarnoff, of R. C. A. president of the Citizens Committee of New York City and Milton M. Bergerman, president of the Citizens Union.

Pickets Protest Hungary Evictions

NEW YORK (AJP) — Mass evictions by Communist Hungary of 50,000 persons, including 5,000 Jews, drew pickets to the Soviet Consulate here this week charging the Reds with "terrorism, mass evictions and Russian Communism" in Hungary.

Thirty-six members of the American Hungarian Federation participated in the four hour long protest demonstration. Questioned about the demonstration, a spokesman for the Soviet Consulate came forth with an amazed, "we don't see any pickets—it's none of our business."
