New Miriam Hospital to Open on January 5 Dinner to Open Dedication Program

ALVIN A. SOPKIN
Dedication Chairman

Guided Tours Start Monday

Dr. Jack Masur, assistant surgeon general, and Chief of the Bureau of Medical Services, U. S. Public Health Service, will be the guest speaker at a dinner this Sunday evening, at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel, which will mark the beginning of exercises dedicating the New Miriam Hospital.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the new hospital, located on Summit Avenue, at Fifth and Sixth Streets, will be open for inspection by the general public. Visitors will be taken on specially planned guided tours on those days from 2 to 5 P. M. and from 7 to 9 P. M.

Following the dedication period, hospital officials plan to conduct a series of tours for various groups throughout the city to acquaint them with new techniques and methods of operation in the newly built hospital.

Benjamin Brier, as president,

BENJAMIN BRIER
Hospital President

and Alvin A. Sopkin, as dedication chairman, this week issued a cordial invitation to all members of the community to visit the new hospital, and to take the specially guided tours.

New Bowling Assn. Gets Under Way

Delegates representing nine Jewish men's bowling leagues took preliminary steps toward the formation of a city-wide bowling association at a meeting held Sunday morning at the Jewish Community Center.

All that remains for the new bowling organization to be formally established is approval by the leagues of the work and the accomplishments of the delegates last Sunday and a clear-cut go-ahead sign to their own delegates. Each delegate was to inform his league during this week and seek his mates' approval.

Represented at the opening meeting were the following leagues and their delegates: Providence Fraternal, Charles L. Wagner; Cranston Jewish Center, Ed Lang and Morris Cofman; Temple Beth El Brotherhood, Nat Alterman and Murray Trinkle; Fineman-Trinkle Post, JWV, Burton Himelfarb and Philip Feldman; A E Pi Fraternities, Sid Dressler and Jerry Freiberg; Post 23, JWV, Charles Stern, Morris Rose and Harry Fellman; What Cheer Lodge, Knights of Pythias, Harry Rubin and Irving Zaidman; Beth-David, Sam Kopel and Milton Miller; Temple Beth-Israel, Esmond Lovett and Sam Segal. Syd Cohen was the Herald's representative.

Trinkle served as temporary chairman Sunday, and later was elected president of the association, which has not yet been named. Other officers are Lang, vice-president; Zaidman, treasurer, and Dressler, secretary. All other delegates will comprise the board of governors. Alterman was secretary pro-tem Sunday.

Potential aims and purposes of the association were outlined at the meeting, with the emphasis on providing more opportunity for the average bowler who does not own a top average, to get his chance at tournament play. Plans for a series of tournaments were included in the suggestions.

Named to the tournament committee to consolidate these ideas were Lang, chairman, Freiberg, Feldman, Segal, Alterman and Fellman.

Another meeting will be held this Sunday at the Center at 10 A. M. Delegates are expected to attend with their leagues' approval or disapproval; then the association will begin to operate.

Jewish Leaders Oppose Released Time Program In Public Schools

The controversy over the proposed program of released time in the Providence public schools drew considerable opposition this week on the part of Jewish religious and lay leaders, several of whom carried their arguments to the public hearing conducted Monday evening by the School Committee.

Taking part in the hearings were Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen of Temple Emanuel, Rabbi Morris Schussheim of Temple Beth Israel, Sidney L. Rabinowitz, prominent attorney who represented Roger Williams Lodge and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, the American Jewish Committee and American Jewish Congress, and Mrs. Archibald Silverman, noted Zionist leader.

Rabbi Schussheim opposed the proposal on the grounds of its inadequacy and its implications.

"Implicit in the proposal," he said, "is a tacit admission of failure on the part of the school, the home, and the church to fulfill adequately their sacred trusts."

"Jewish homes are good American homes, and our parents have not suddenly reneged their sacred responsibilities, that the school must be asked for an hour a week to save the integrity of the American family.

"Nor can the church accept this single hour a week for religious instruction without tacitly acknowledging its own failure to perform its God given task. The consecrated men and women who have dedicated their whole lives to the service of God and man are ample proof of the vitality of the church.

"Nor can we say the school has failed, and is godless or secular, for learning, itself, is Jewishly considered, the most sacred of all

GJC Professional Division to Meet

Meyer Levin, American novelist and newspaper correspondent, will speak in behalf of the United Jewish Appeal at the annual dinner meeting of the GJC's Professional Division next Wednesday evening, Dec. 17, at the Narragansett Hotel. The meeting will begin at 6 P. M.

The Professional Division—composed of lawyers, doctors, dentists and accountants—is a unit in the GJC's current fund-raising drive.

Heading the various groups making up the Division's framework are these chairmen: Lawyers; Judge Phillip C. Joslin; Doctors; Dr. Nathan Chasnet; Dentists; Dr. James C. Krasnoff; Accountants; Samuel Gereboff.

Levin won fame while attached as a correspondent to American Army units which liberated many of the Nazi concentration camps during World War II. His newspaper dispatches to this country were among the first to describe the horrible condition of Jewish survivors of Hitlerism.

On the basis of his war experiences, Levin wrote "My Father's House," recognized as the classic story of the European Jewish refugee who finds a home in Palestine. This novel later served as the theme of the first Jewish film made in the Holy Land. His later work, "The Illegals," also was filmed and exhibited widely throughout America.

Old Hospital to Close December 24; Moving Operations Are Described

BY SYD COHEN

How does a hospital move?

By what complicated methods do the staff members continue their vital services at an existing hospital, while at the same time transferring records, equipment and supplies to the new, and setting up operations so that suddenly—on a given day—the new hospital is in full operation and the old is empty and closed?

Since such a dramatic and highly unusual event is shortly to take place at the old and the new Miriam hospitals, the inside story on the transfer from the old building on Parade Street to the magnificent new structure on Summit Avenue is presented herewith for the first time publicly from plans prepared under the guidance of Michael S. Grobsmith, executive director.

Actually, the process of changing the location of the Miriam Hospital will be detailed, but not complicated. A schedule of operations has been established which will lead to an orderly transition from one building to another without disrupting in the least the normal service that a hospital must be prepared at all times to render to its community.

The important date on the Miriam's calendar is Monday, Jan. 5. That is the day on which the new hospital will open its doors for the first time to admit patients. The plan that will unfold in succeeding paragraphs is hinged around this basic date. It—the plan for moving the hospital—has been evolved so that an efficient operation that will lead to the utmost conservation of the finances of the community will be assured.

Closing the Old

"Operation Miriam" will get under way officially on Wednesday, Dec. 17. On that date the old hospital will start to limit admissions. From then on, only emergency cases will be accepted—and even those according to a definite time pattern—until December 24, when the hospital will be finally closed to all cases.

Only patients requiring no more than seven days hospitalization will be admitted on December 17. The next day only those requiring six days or less in the hospital will be admitted; on the 19th, five days; on the 20th, four days; and so on until the 23rd, when only overnight cases will be accepted.

By the 24th, the hospital will have discharged its final patients. Then the doors will be closed and the staff transferred to the new hospital.

That will mark the beginning of the moving operations. Trucks will pull up at the Parade Street building and start loading supplies and equipment for transfer to the new hospital. Such vital functions as the oxygen and laundry systems, autoclave, sterilizers, giant X-Ray machines, intricate electronic laboratory devices and the like—already installed—will swing into operation.

Technicians will set up all equipment, mechanical as well as movable, and start to become acquainted with their new quarters and facilities.

Along with the shifting of personnel from the old hospital to the new will come the lengthy task of engaging new personnel. Grobsmith estimates that up to 180 persons will be integrated into the hospital system and ready to serve 82 beds, by opening day, January 5.

From that point on, and at a steady pace thereafter, more beds will be opened and additional personnel will be employed.

The size of the New Miriam, and the extent of its operations, is best emphasized by the fact that a staff of more than 300 persons will be required to man the hospital when the full complement of 150 beds and 30 bassinets is at the service of the community.

Maternity Schedule

It is important to note that while January 5 is the official opening date of the New Miriam, that date does not include maternity cases. "Storkland" will not be ready to admit prospective mothers, and, in turn, their infants, until May 1.

Explaining the full four month interval that will elapse between the general opening of the hospital and the admission of maternity cases, Grobsmith explained: "We at the Miriam will need that much time to properly professionalize a department of that type."

"The matter of maternity reservations also enters into the picture," the executive director declared. "Prospective mothers usually make their hospital reservations from five to six months in advance. Such reservations have not been accepted for the New Miriam, because the exact date of opening was undecided until very recently.

"Because of this, we have no maternity waiting list, and personnel now serving in that section will be free to assist in other phases of the transfer from the old hospital to the new."

Since the old hospital must be closed by degrees to free the personnel and permit transfer of equipment, a time limit also had to be set for admission of maternity cases at the Parade Street structure. The effective date for this operation was December 8, just four days ago. From now on, no maternity cases will be accepted.

Other Hospitals Help

The personnel involved in the operation of this section now will be transferred to the new hospital to help set up the vital medical and surgical departments.

Women who have reservations for later than December 8 need have no concern, Grobsmith said. He pointed out that these cases will have their deposits refunded; while reservations will be or already have been made for them

BULLETIN

Mrs. Albert Pilavin of 601 Elm Grove Avenue has been named chairman of the National Women's Division of the United Jewish Appeal for 1953, according to an announcement in New York today by Edward M. M. Warburg, general chairman of the UJA. In that post, she will guide and coordinate the fund-raising activities of thousands of American Jewish women in more than 200 communities throughout the United States during the coming year.

'Workers For The Center'

(To bring the Jewish Community Center into closer public focus, the Herald presents the third in its series of articles on lesser known leading workers at the Center.)

Harold Winsten is a relative newcomer in the affairs of state at the Jewish Community Center. Nevertheless, he speaks with a voice of authority when he discusses the Center, its accomplishments, its progress, its needs.

To Winsten the Center is a living thing. It has had a favorable effect on his life in the past; it exerts a strong influence on him now; and he looks for his family to benefit from future activity within its walls.

"I am vitally interested in the Jewish Community Center," says Winsten. "Maybe that interest stems from a selfish point of view, but it is none the less real. The Center after all, is the place where I shall send my children..."

To that the young attorney might add that the Center extended a helping hand in his marriage. It was through meetings of a discussion group at the JCC that Harold and the former Anita Horowitz launched their courtship. The couple are now expecting their first child.

Active In Community

It may be well to explain here that Winsten's talents and clear-thinking have been recognized both at the Center and elsewhere throughout the community. At Center he is serving his second year as a member of the Board of Directors. He is chairman of the Adult Activities Committee, and a member of the Executive, Personnel and Program Co-ordinating committees.

He is active, too, in the affairs of Congregation Ohave Shalom in Pawtucket, where he resides, as well as the Jewish War Veterans. The Congregation's new by-laws, adopted only last Wednesday, are the result of Harold's labors. Two years ago he served as State Commander of the JWV, and he was president for one year of the R. I. Veterans Council, state organization for all veterans units.

Winsten's recognized ability even led to an unusual assignment with the U. S. Army during World War II. He was sent to Yale University for a year to learn the Japanese language — which he mastered—and then was assigned to the staff of Navy Admiral Chester Nimitz as a Japanese interrogator and interpreter with Naval Intelligence in such historic and far-off places as Pearl Harbor, Guam and Japan.

As Winsten sees it, the entire principle and the concept of the Center have changed in the last three years. The objectives of Center that were adopted at the annual meeting in June, 1951 illustrate to him this change, involving as they do the democratic integration of all the Jewish people in the community into the Center.

"These objectives require that a structure be set up within Center so that the fullest participation may be obtained by all interested persons," he explains.

This change in emphasis, Winsten declares, is best illustrated by a view of the constitution as it was originally written and then comparing it with what is presently going on within Center.

"The present constitution is a document based on the principle that the officers should have the greatest possible latitude in the direction and operation of Center — so that, in effect, the officers as individuals ran all facets of the Center program.

New Committee Structure
"From this beginning we now have a wonderful committee structure arising, so that all decisions on programming, and every other facet of Center operation, now are committee decisions, involving many points of view and arrived at by democratic discussion and voting."

"The one-man committees" of the old days and the "self-perpetuating Board of Directors and officers" are bowing out as they recognize the basic strength of this movement, Winsten asserts.

"Since Center is now emerging into a mature, community-wide community service organization, the problems of self-education and self-study of its functions and services are becoming more important.

"However," Winsten continues, "many of the members of the Center who fostered and developed our present Center from the germ of the idea many years ago find it difficult to accept the new concept of democratic Jewish living which is beginning to typify our Center."

Tracing further the new concept, Winsten points to the events at either the Roger Williams General or Providence Lying-In Hospitals, according to the choice of the prospective mother.

"These hospitals also have kindly consented to provide temporary privileges to our doctors, to enable them to attend their private patients in these institutions," Grobsmith noted.

"This example of inter-hospital co-operation demonstrates that the New Miriam Hospital has made its impact on the community even before the doors of its new home have been opened. The spirit of unity that is evidenced in the fine helping hand being extended to us by these other hospitals must, by its very example, be the forerunner of a closer inter-community relationship.

Inside the New

Among the sections to be organized in the new building are administration, nursing, engineering and maintenance, purchasing, admitting, medical records and library, dietary, housekeeping, department of laboratories, department of X-Ray, and the maternity and surgical departments.

In addition, the new hospital will contain a coffee and gift shop, which will go into operation this Sunday. This important enterprise will be run completely by the Women's Association, which will be responsible for purchasing, of November, 1949, "when Morris Kritzman (executive director) urged—and the Board moved—that a census of the Jewish population be taken, and that a group work study be instituted.

"At that meeting it was moved that a special committee be created to establish the way in which Center could best operate, and to set up budgets for each activity—and also, to study the feasibility of having a program co-ordinating committee.

"At the present time, we have the latter two; but the Personnel Committee has just begun to study the structure of Center itself.

Winsten points to one specific obstacle that has been overcome. That is a former weakness of the Center in community life which led to Center's taking a back seat to other organizations, whether in conducting building campaigns, various program functions or interpreting matters of policy.

All this was changed, Harold recalls, at the Board meeting of December, 1949, when the Directors clearly enunciated that the Jewish Community Center is an autonomous organization, and that it must program and act as it sees fit within the objectives of Center.

"This concept of autonomy, of developing programs to meet the needs of the people of Providence as such needs are recognized, without reference to other committees or organizations, is in the process of being accepted and understood by the members of the Board."

"But it is a slow process," Winsten adds, "in that the former modus vivendi hangs on in the minds of many."

Discusses Budget

The Center budget, long a bone of contention, comes in for some critical Winsten analysis. Harold believes JCC officials are doing a fine job in this regard.

"Center has been making tremendous strides in the development of old programs, adding new programs, and assisting in the creation of special activities," he notes. "Yet it appears that the Budget, even though increased each year since 1949, still is inadequate.

"But the administration of this budget to the benefit of the people of Providence was recognized at the March 18, 1952 Allocations Committee meeting of the General Jewish Committee, which was attended by the Center's officers and executive director.

"At this meeting, Alvin A. Soppin, GJC president, told our group: 'Even though in past years we have looked at your budget with skepticism, this year we have confidence in your leadership, and feel that you are sincere and that your budget represents the minimaintainance of stocks, storage, engagement of required personnel to staff the shop, and delivery of necessary articles to patients."

The gift shop will serve patients and visitors, and profits will be used for the hospital.

Healthy Attitudes

After the New Miriam Hospital goes into active operation on January 5 and the old hospital ceases to exist, what then? What kind of hospital will the Miriam be? What are the attitudes toward the new building, its equipment and facilities, on the part of the men who will comprise the medical staff?

According to the executive director: "The medical staff looks with enthusiasm on the high standards of facilities and services that will be available to their patients and the community."

"It is extremely gratifying to me and to the Board of Trustees," Grobsmith added, "to have such a display of clarity of purpose, and devotion of time and energy on the part of these outstanding physicians toward our hospital.

"These medical staff members deserve the praise of the entire community for their untiring assistance in helping to plan and create the new hospital, and for their devotion to its ideals.

"We already are well on the way toward making the Miriam a truly scientific hospital in the modern sense."

mal needs for the proper operation of the Center's program."

"The officers, together with Mr. Kritzman, cannot be praised highly enough on a remarkable achievement such as this," Winsten adds.

"While there has been much pressure because of the expanding program and its concomitant increased expense, Mr. Kritzman has repeatedly said that there should be a core of service to which Center members should be entitled upon payment of their membership dues; and that payments for new services or activities should be required only in special instances.

Recognizing that there still exists considerable grounds for improvement within the Center structure, Winsten treats next with its problems. Here is what he says:

"The problems that we do have actually are those of a growing family, and given time, and objective thought and discussion, will soon resolve themselves; they arise mainly from (1) personalities, (2) lack of proper understanding of the respective roles of the Board of Directors and of the professional staff members."

Winsten believes that the studies now being conducted within the Center will be of material assistance in aiding the process of self-education on the part of the Board members and officers. The Personnel Committee studies and recommendations that will be based thereon and forwarded to the Board of Directors will do much to aid each person in understanding his particular role in the Center picture.

"In that way, the various activities of each individual Board member and officer and general member will become clear; this will point up the self-restraints required of the Board to direct and establish policy, and to enable the Executive Director to administer their policies, and the professional staff and lay leaders to carry out their duties without conflict.

"This will lead to a greater efficiency, and better relationship among all persons involved, enabling the Center to offer to the community an even more integrated and comprehensive program."

Jewish Leaders Oppose Released Time Program In Public Schools

religious deeds." Rabbi Bohnen in his statement, denied the charge repeatedly made by proponents of released time that without religion the public school is a "Godless" institution. "I would regard the introduction of Released Time as a backward step," Rabbi Bohnen said. "My forefathers and the forefathers of other Jews came to this country to find here the kind of religious liberty they had never known in lands beyond the sea. Here they found an opportunity to worship God in their own way, not as a matter of indulgence, but as a matter of right.

"We have found from experience that religious liberty flourishes when the agencies of religion and the agencies of the state respect each other but do not trespass or encroach upon each other's province. Once the state becomes a partner with religion or religion with the state, religious liberty inevitably suffers. This liberty is too precious a thing to place in jeopardy, even when those who do so have the best of intentions and the highest of motives. The majority may have the power to do what it wants to do. The religious liberty of Jews has always depended on those of the majority who believed that the rights of the minority were important in a democracy."

Rabinowitz' prepared statement also listed the following objections: it would have a divisive effect upon the children, and accentuate within their minds the differences between them; it would tend in many instances to substitute this one hour of weekly religious instruction for the real religious education now provided; it would encourage truancy; and it would impose a heavy administrative burden on the public school system.

Mrs. Silverman, whose remarks were quoted extensively in the daily press, also emphasized the "divisive" effect of released time.

190 Willard Avenue
Providence, R. I.

Dear Sir:

Congratulations on your purchase of "Prize Winning Cattle" sent to you today. Also on the fine selection you made.

No doubt you are giving careful thought to the preparation of displaying these outstanding cattle of the 1952 International Live Stock Exposition to your discriminating customers.

The thought has come to us that your trade may desire some information regarding the breed of these animals. They are known as Aberdeen Angus and have won more honors in beef competition than any other breed. This breed is uniformly black with a short head, a compact low-set body, and is naturally hornless. It was imported into America about 1873 from Eastern Scotland and it has found the most favor in this country by people of discriminating taste, because of the fine texture and quality of these cattle.

We are enclosing a Blue Ribbon certifying that the meat you have purchased from us came from the International Live Stock Exposition held at Chicago.

Permit us to thank you for your order and to hope that you will feel free to call upon us about any matter in which we may be of service to you.

Very truly yours,
Louis Levine

The Shamos That Wouldn't

(A Chanukah Story for Children)

By BERYL SEGAL

Tonight, and on every Chanukah night, children are sure to receive holiday gifts. When the Chanukah lights are lit, and the family gathers around the table, the children of the household find gifts from father and mother, from uncles and aunts, from friends and relatives. And there is always a gift from Zeide and Bobe.

What is Chanukah without gifts for children?

But my story on this Festival of Lights is not about gifts for children. Rather, it is a story about a gift for the Shamos. It is a story about a Shamos who wouldn't kindle the Chanukah lights in the Menorah until he, too, gets a Chanukah gift like the children.

A Chanukah gift for the Shamos? A Shamos asking for a gift?

That's a strange story. Who would ever think of a gift for the Shamos? He hardly counts! He merely lights the candles, and is all but forgotten. The other candles are important. It is by them that we count the days of Chanukah. Over them we chant the blessings. To them we sing the songs. But the Shamos? Why, we hardly know that he is around!

The Shamos knew all this, but he insisted on a gift and wouldn't bestir himself to make ready for the kindling of the lights, though the hour was getting late, and the time for the blessing of the Chanukah lights was almost at hand.

On the mantelpiece over the fireplace, all bright and cheerful, stood the Menorah of reddish copper. In the Menorah, the eight little candles held up their pure white wicks, waiting for the touch of the flame that would bring life to their pale thin bodies. But the flame did not come, because the Shamos wouldn't bring the flame to them.

The Shamos stood by the side of the Chanukah Menorah, and he muttered to himself:

"Year after year, for hundreds of Chanukahs, I, the Shamos, faithfully carry the flame to the candles. Without me, the candles cannot be lit. Without flaming candles, the Menorah remains in darkness. Without a lighted Menorah, Chanukah nights are no different than all the other nights of the year. No Chanukah, no Festival of Lights, no gifts! I bring the lights, the holiday, the gifts.

"But what is my reward? Am I ever noticed? No sooner are the candles in flame, than they put me aside, and I am completely forgotten. Not so this Chanukah. This year I will not let them forget me. I want a gift, as I will deserve, on the Festival of Lights, for from me comes the light!"

The Shamos is right, thought the children. He surely deserves a gift. But what gift does a Shamos want? What will the Shamos do with a bicycle? What good is a camera to the Shamos? Or is it an electric train he wants?

When Zeide heard of this, he smiled and he said:

"These are not gifts for a Shamos. The Shamos wants a story."

Well, if it's a story he wants, who but Zeide can tell a better story to please the Shamos?

The Zeide then gathered the grandchildren around the fireplace, and he looked up to the mantelpiece where the Shamos and the eight candles stood in a row ready for the last night of Chanukah, and he began his story for the Shamos, for the eight little candles, and for the children, too.

"In the dark mountains, deep in the dark forest, by a muddy stream, under misty skies, there stood a small village. The sun was kept out by the thick branches of the tall trees, and the village was always in the shadow of the mountains. The stars and the moon could not get through the mist, and the nights in the village were black and gloomy. And the people of the village walked around, and did their work in the dim streets, and in the even dimmer houses, and their faces were grim, and their eyes were grim, and their eyes were full of sadness.

But when the mist and the gloom and the dark were too hard to bear, the people of the village said:

"Let us go forth to look for more light. Somewhere beyond these mountains and outside of these woods, we will find light. Let us, then, go in search of light that we may bring it back to our homes in this village."

And they started out on their journey toward light.

Some climbed to the top of the mountain and over the crags above the clouds.

Some cut a path through the thick woods to reach the wide plains at the end of the forests.

Some followed the course of the stream that it may lead them to the seas, where light must be abundant.

After many days and nights, and long weeks and months, the travelers returned to the mountains and to the forest. They returned with empty hands, and their heads hung low, and their eyes were even sadder than on the day when they started out on their journey, because the journey was in vain.

They brought no light with them for their homes, for their village in the forest.

At the edge of the forest, night overtook them, and the mists were heavy, and their feet were tired, and they dared not enter the woods in the black night. So they lay down to rest and to await day-break before they would return to their homes.

Then a star appeared in the skies overhead, and soon afterward, the tired travelers saw a tiny light below, not far away. They were pleased with the star overhead, but the little light nearby was even more pleasant to their eyes. This little light may lead them to the shelter of a home.

The travelers followed the flickering light through the mist, and sure enough, it brought them to the gates of a house. The travelers stood by the gate to see who are they who dwell inside, and would they be welcomed into their midst.

It was a small house, made of logs and of the stones that abound in the mountains, and the house nestled at the foot of the mountain. The flickering light that brought the travelers to the house came from thin little candles in the window.

By the window the travelers saw the father of the house holding a candle in his hand, and with the flame of this candle he kindled the others, the smaller ones, eight white little candles standing in a row on the window sill, casting a tiny circle of light all around the house. The children stood

Ten minutes elapsed, with nothing happening, when a voice suddenly said, in precise English—"Maurice, this is your grandfather. I'm in Heaven. It's wonderful up here. And it's wonderful talking to you. God Bless You!"

The day after the seance, Zolotow told a friend what had happened.

"Were you impressed?"—the friend asked.

"Not very much"—replied the writer. "You see, my grandfather was a Russian Jew—and couldn't speak a word of English!"

Isn't It So

The honeymoon is over when the wife finds more pleasure out of her husband's embraces—than in them... Producers of Yiddish-English musicals certainly have a sense of the bizarre, particularly when it comes to titles. First, there was "Bagels and Yox." Then, "Borshtcapades." Presently on the Coast, there's "The Farfel Follies." And now the latest in Brooklyn is—"Blintzes and Screams." Any day now, we expect to see a new musical opera, titled—"Latkes and Howls."... We like this apt description of the zingy radio and television show, called—"Reporters' Roundup"—"Where By-Lines Make Headlines."... Terry Moore, the lovely movie star, who is not Jewish, has been a tremendous worker for Jewish affairs. At present, she is Chairman of The Arts Committee for The Annual Charity Bazaar of The Jewish Sanitarium and Hospital for Chronic Diseases, in Brooklyn, N. Y. ... The world would get along better if human beings would stand aside—and watch themselves parade.

near their father, and with a gleam in their eyes, they watched their father lighting the candles, and the light in the eyes of the children was as warm and as bright as the light of the flames of the candles.

One of the children saw the strangers standing by the gate, and the father came out to invite them inside, to get warm, to refresh themselves, and to rest through the night.

The travelers entered the house, and they refreshed themselves with the food and drinks brought by the host, and they listened to the wonderful story of the eight Chanukah candles that brought them to this house.

And when the people of the village returned to their homes, they told of their long journey, and of their hard toil, and they said:

"We journeyed far over the mountain's, far beyond the forests, as far as the wide seas, but we did not find the light we were looking for. We searched everywhere, and we found none. But not a half day's journey from here, at the edge of our own forest, by the foot of our own mountain, we found the light that would brighten our homes, and would cheer our village."

And they told the story of the little flame of the Chanukah Shamos that led them to a home, to safety, and to a rest in the dark night.

And now, said the Zeide, as he stood up, now let us all bless and light the Chanukah lights.

The Shamos was pleased with his gift, because his flame leaped up, and he kindled the eight little candles in the Menorah. The candles liked the story, because their flames waved to and fro happily. The Menorah liked the story because it shone all red and golden in the light of the candles.

And the children liked the story, because Chanukah was here again and gifts are here again, now that the Shamos had the gift he wanted.

Foods To Remember

By LEAH W. LEONARD

Food customs of our people grow increasingly more charming and significant. For instance, the delightful association of Grated Potato Latkes (pancakes) with Feast of Hanukah which commemorates the heroic battle of the Maccabees in the year 165 B.C.E. (before common era). Along with the gleaming little lights and the general air of festivity, many home-makers have made it an occasion for a children's party. Mrs. Betsy Gruzud of Washington, D. C. whose husband is the genial editor of "B'nai Brith Monthly," invites as many as twenty little friends of their children in for a "Hanukah Latkes Party" at least once during the week of Hanukah. Others in many cities have written me they like the idea and will do likewise this year. How about you? The youngsters love it, especially if you tell them the story of the Maccabees, the little cruce of oil that was almost destroyed but magically contained enough to rekindle the light in the Temple and burned for eight whole days... the lighting of the little candles, one for the first night of Hanukah, two for the second night, and so on till eight bright lights burn in the Menorah on the last night of the festival. Make it as elaborate a party as you like, but be sure to make your Latkes as per the following recipe:

POTATO LATKES

12 medium size potatoes
1 large onion
4 eggs
1½ cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons salt

Vegetable shortening or oil for deep-frying.

Pare, wash and grate the potatoes into a large mixing bowl. Squeeze out the liquid. Peel and grate the onion into the potato, add eggs one at a time and mix lightly. Add the flour and salt by stirring in till well combined and a heavy batter is formed. The batter should be thick enough to fall heavily from the mixing spoon. Heat the shortening or oil in a heavy frying pan. The melted variety as well as the oil should be one inch deep in order to immerse the pancakes. Drop a spoonful of the potato mixture into the hot fat, keep the heat at moderate, and let the pancakes fry till nicely browned on the under side before turning with a pancake turner or fork. Let brown well before lifting out of the fat to drain well on a double fold of paper napkins. Keep pancakes hot in a moderate oven till serving time. Serve with applesauce, cranberry sauce, stewed dried fruits like prunes, apricots and/or pears, and/or a mixture of well beaten cottage cheese with sour cream. Serves 18 to 20.

POTATO KUGELACH

Use the above mixture for Latkes. Grease well the inside of muffin pans and fill 2/3 full. Bake 30 minutes at 350 F or till nicely browned and serve with gravy from stewed meat or poultry. For an added touch, tuck some chopped GREBEN (cracklings) into the center of each muffin before baking. May be kept hot in a covered container in the oven at low heat, or with the oven door open.

BETH-DAVID BOWLING

by Milton Miller

Sid Jacobson's 139 helped keep the Cranes in last place as the Falcons took two of three. Dutch Bellio's 122 and Saul Nulman's 112 helped. Joe Brosowsky's 115 helped salvage one game. The first place Hawks swamped the Swans in the last two strings after losing the first. Bill Snell's 117 and Joel Pressman's 116 won for the Hawks while Ernie Chernick's 107 led the Swans. Charlie Kilberg bowled 111, 117 and 141 for 369, as the Vultures took three from the Eagles. Ken Resnick's 119 and Lou Weinstein's 115 also helped. Al Greenberg's three of 354 was in vain.

Other good singles were Milt Miller 120, Al Snell 105, and Marty Goldshine 104.

CRANSTON MEN

by Phil Chopak

Hayvis Woolf's Red Sox shut-out Aaron Davis' Yanks. Moe Kessler's 335 sparked the win, while Lou Chase had 324 for the Davismen. by Jack Jacobson

Mort Kilbanoff bowled 150, 145, 145 for 440, breaking the previous record of 404 held by Harry Shore. This gave Mort a 112 average, which put him in first place in that category, and helped give his team 1587 for second place in the high team honors. Most important, it moved his team into a first place tie.

The White Sox went into a first place tie by taking 3-1 from the third place Dodgers. Leaders for the White Sox were Burt Himmel-farb 337, Phil Feldman 329, Norm Tillis 323; for the Dodgers Sam Feldman 341, Harold Golden 327, Marvin Greenberg 301 and Jerry Resnick 300.

The Giants jumped to second place, just two points behind the leaders. Captain Sam Tapper set the pace with 362, Merlyn Rodyn 336 and Phil Shaulson 301. Benton Goldblatt saved his team as he rolled 156, one point short of the record held jointly by Phil

This G. I. in Korea helped elect a president for the United States

Even though he was thousands of miles away this soldier sat under a Korean bush and marked his absentee ballot. Sent it winging its way to be counted with yours, to elect our nation's leaders for the next four years.

That's the way things are done in a democracy—everyone has a chance to help run the country. Everyone has a chance to help keep the country as free as it is and as strong, too. Of course some, like the man in this picture, are called on to do harder things than the rest of us. They keep America militarily strong. But we can all help to keep her economically strong—almost without knowing we're doing it, as a matter of fact.

Because just keeping ourselves and our own families financially secure is doing a big part of the job of keeping the whole country financially sound. And one of the best ways of doing that is by investing in United States Defense Bonds. For by bonds and other forms of saving we are building a backlog of national prosperity, keeping America strong. And we must remember, always, that peace is only for the strong!

So invest in Defense Bonds today . . . and do it regularly through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. Thousands say it's the one sure way to save—because it saves something out of every check before you have a chance to spend it. And you know, no matter how small your income, you can't afford not to save something for yourself! Join the Payroll Savings Plan today. Help your country and yourself by saving your money through bonds.

Here's how E Bonds now earn more money for you!

Now safe, sure U. S. Defense Bonds pay an even better return than ever before. . . thanks to 3 brand-new money-earning features announced by the U. S. Treasury.

1. Now every Series E Bond you get begins earning interest after only 6 months. It earns 3%, compounded semiannually, when held to maturity. It reaches full maturity value earlier (9 years 8 months) and the interest it pays is now bigger at the start!
2. Every Series E Bond you own can now go on earning interest for 10 more years after it reaches the original maturity date—without your lifting a finger!
3. During the 10 year extension period, every unmatured bond earns at the new, higher interest (average 3% compounded semiannually). Your original $18.75 can now repay you $33.67. $37.50 pays back $67.34. And so on.

Start now! Invest more savings in better-paying Series E Bonds—through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work or the Bond-A-Month Plan where you bank!

Peace is for the strong . . .
for peace and prosperity
save with U. S. Defense Bonds

Keep Sunday Open

A week from this coming Sunday—December 21, to be exact—at 9:30 in the morning, breakfast will be served at the Jewish Community Center to the members of the Men's Association. That is not meant to be a startling pronouncement. The men of the community won't go hungry if they stay at home.

But this Men's Association breakfast will have a flavor all its own—a three-fold flavor—that cannot be matched by the little woman's ingenuity. First off, baseball's hot stove league will be in session in the ample but solid person of Hank Soar, now a veteran umpire of the American League. Hank can spin the yarns all day, and tell about your favorite club and players as he sees them in action.

Then, making a rare, for him, public appearance, will be Lou Pieri, owner of the Auditorium on North Main Street, owner of the Providence Hockey Reds and other enterprises. Pieri is now engaged in a life-and-death struggle with the governors of the American Hockey League to keep the Reds in Providence. He should have some interesting stories to tell.

And after the stories and the chuckles and the breakfast, the Men's Association will put on display a set of enlarged plans of the soon-to-be-constructed George Friedman Memorial Health Center. The plans will be explained, and the health center will start to grow before our eyes.

There may be more to it. Saul Geffner won't commit himself, but there is the possibility that the contract for construction will be let prior to the breakfast; which will mean that the community will know then how soon to expect the health center to be in operation.

It goes without saying that officials of the project will review the current campaign to sign up members for the health center, to insure that sufficient funds will be available to complete the center-within-the-center on schedule, and to put it into active operation.

The membership story is an encouraging one so far. Close to 200 members had been signed up in varying amounts as this was written, and the funds were starting to roll in. Naturally, as the talk turned into plans, and the plans became a definite commitment, public interest started to grow. Now the Men's Association can say to its members—and that includes every man who is a member of the Jewish Community Center: How about it? We are ready. Are you? Here is the project, all set up, ready to roll. Now let's see if you will help support it by signing up to take advantage of the facilities offered.

The health center committee has done its share. Men like Morton Zisquit, Charley Steingold, Ben Moskol, Leo Borenstein, Leon Temkin, Sherman Price and Sid Weinstein have been going like blazes. And when chairman Manny Lester unfortunately was laid low by serious illness a few weeks ago, Murray Burrows immediately stepped into the breach and has done a fine job in that short span of time.

They, and the entire Men's Association, deserve all the support they can get. But now is the time to put up, to show that you like what they are doing for all the men of the community who choose to accept it. The benefits of a health center are obvious to those who have lost their keenness of limb, the will and the energy to endure the aches and suffering involved in competitive athletic activity. There comes that time, you know!

This column is well aware that while the Men's Association will be pleased at this favorable publicity, and many men may be glad to have the matter brought to their attention, there will be others—including, no doubt, most of the younger fellows—who will read no further than the first few paragraphs and lose interest. I know they would rather read stories about baseball and football and the like. But there is added meaning to a boost in this space for a health center or a bowling association, even though they are desirable in themselves.

We are all proud of our new Jewish Community Center. Progress has been great. But the health center is only another step in the right direction. There is still much to be done. Ask the younger boys what they would most like to have at the Center, and they would cry with one voice—"A Gym!"

Well, to this observer, the construction of the health center brings us one step closer to a modern new gymnasium building. Let this project be successful, let the men of the community prove that they are willing to support worthwhile projects, and the stimulus will be aroused to look further, to make other plans.

It may come as a surprise to some, but talk of a gym and auditorium building is not new. Center officials have mentioned it, and the space where such a building would be erected has been tentatively designated. That is not to say that a gym will be our next project, or that we can look for it to arise in one year, or two, or three.

Yet, we are faced with a Center that is going ahead by leaps and bounds, and the men who have the desire, the enthusiasm, the inspiration to do better things for their community are working steadily toward the goal.

We must have a gymnasium of our own some day soon. The sooner the better, of course. A health center for the older fellows, a gym for all. The Center is not complete until that is a matter of actual existence, not of dreaming.

That is why I am happy to devote space to a project like the health center, and why I consider that it must take precedence occasionally over stories of sports teams and personalities.

That is why I am happy to add my bit to the JCC Men's Association's campaign for a fully endowed health center. It constitutes an important step up that ladder toward a new gym and other facilities.

The rates are reasonable enough for the service and convenience offered. Let's do a job on this one, and then we can go to work on something else. Let's speed the dedication day of the Friedman Memorial Health Center—and then immediately start all over again on another phase of our community building program.

Oh yes! Don't forget about Hank Soar and Lou Pieri on Sunday, Dec. 21. The breakfast charge will be very nominal for the interesting few hours that are in store.

DISCUSS FUND-RAISING

The Ways and Means Committee of the Cranston Jewish Center met recently to discuss fund-raising projects for the coming year. Saul Friedman, chairman, presided. The following are acting chairmen: Mrs. Arthur Siegel, Stanley Manne, Samuel Jacobs, Max White, Benjamin Mellion and Mrs. Joseph M. Potemkin.
