Light to Head Ledgemont Unit

With the opening of 1956 campaign of the General Jewish Committee rapidly approaching, Judge Frank Licht has been appointed chairman of the Ledgemont division of the annual fund-raising drive.

Judge Licht's appointment was announced by Benjamin Brier, general campaign chairman, who also named Arthur Kaplan, Nathan Samors, Daniel Jacobs, Maurice Fox and David Meyers as associate chairmen of the Ledgemont Division.

This is the third year for the special Ledgemont Division which was originally formed after the authorization of the Board of Governors of the Ledgemont Country Club because of its contribution of a worthwhile program for the members of the country club. Officials said that the division's definite success during campaigns of the past two years led to its formation once again to aid in the annual campaign.

Judge Licht, who has been active in past GJC campaigns, last year served as chairman of Initial Gifts. All of the associate chairmen also are active workers. Kaplan last year headed the Ledgemont division with Samors serving as associate chairman.

Plans are being made immediately for the important role the

Potters See Great Courage in Israel Help Must Come from GJC Drive

By Elaine Hill

"At the time we went to Israel, thousands of tourists were cancelling reservations because of the ominous headlines in the U. S. Fear is contagious. Once you're in Israel, however, the courage and optimism there is just as contagious and in less than a day you are infected with its indomitable spirit," observed Dr. and Mrs. Charles Potter who just came back from their first two week tour of Israel.

All through the land, the most impressive thing to these tourists is the air of dynamism, the vitality, the selflessness of the people. A typical example was a truck driver the Potters picked up on a trip back from Ashkelon going to Tel Aviv. He seemed tired and was unshaven. He told them that two nights before, he had been summoned to report with his truck to Beersheba to transport material for the army. He'd been driving almost nonstop for 48 hours, and was being allowed to return to his family with the proviso that he leave his truck and secure a substitute. When they questioned if he felt imposed upon by being summoned as a civilian, he said he did it willingly, and no sacrifice was too great to make for Israel, for if it weren't for Israel, he'd have no truck, no business, and no home. Everything these people are or have stems from Israel.

There are 45,000 more North African Jews in desperate situations to whom Israel will mean the same when they arrive this year; but, first there are problems of finding homes and work for them, providing medical care, and education. The Israelis cannot do all of this at the present time, but it has to be done. The General Jewish Committee spreads its funds over numerous agencies devoted to the integration of these Jewish refugees into Israel's economic and social life.

"It was painful to see how much of the resources of the land and the people is being diverted into the nonproductive activity of defense. All the people give one week of their much-needed two week yearly vacation for defense work in the sparsely settled outlying borders. At the Kibutz S'de Nehemya which is inhabited by Austrian Jews, the Potters saw an underground cement bunker, large enough to hold 300 people, built as an emergency shelter and hospital in case the people are forced underground in a war. It seems a shame that the energies of the Israelis are put into hauling tons of cement, digging miles of trenches, and stringing yards of barbed wire, instead of being used to further industry, agriculture, essential building, education—all the things that make a great nation. Israel's existence depends on defense work, and the wonderful courage of its citizens, but its future as a leading nation depends on these other things. They are doing their job, and doing it well, but they can't do it

JFCS Annual Meeting September 18

Irving Gertsacov has been designated to serve as chairman of the 27th annual meeting committee of the Jewish Family and Children's Service, it was announced today by Dr. Nathan A. Bolotow, board president. The meeting has been set for Tuesday evening, September 18.

Mr. Gertsacov stated that a well known personality will be the main speaker of the evening. This will be a regular evening meeting in contrast to the dinner meetings which have been held over the past two years.

Mr. Gertsacov and his committee are interested in attracting the broadest audience possible since it is his feeling that "too few of our people avail themselves of the wonderful services offered by this voluntary agency."

He indicated that there have been many changes in the agency program as well as in the clientele served.

Further details will be announced shortly. The general public will be invited to attend.

Irving Gertsacov

Assisting Mr. Gertsacov on the Committee are the following: Dr. Nathan A. Bolotow, ex-officio, Mrs. Esther Pritsker, Mrs. Bertram L. Bernhardt, Maurice Fox and Arthur J. Levy.

Zionists Score Appeasement

NEW YORK—Several top Zionist leaders have criticized the State Department for appeasing Egypt's President Nasser.

Dr. Emanuel Neumann, chairman of the Zionist Organization of America executive committee, charged that "our foreign service has long been infested with pro-Arab and pro-Nasser apologists who have done their best—or worst—to build him up as a pacific and constructive statesman with pro-Western sympathies."

"They have done their utmost to sell him to the uninformed public," he declared.

He told 300 Zionists meeting at the Hotel Statler "every concession and conciliatory move we made served only to embolden Nasser, to increase his appetite, raise his prestige, and inflame his ambition."

ZOA President Mortimer May said "the relations of the Western world with the Arab rulers have given every indication that we are again pursuing a policy of plain and unvarnished appeasement."

"One bit of firmness to enforce the free use of the Suez Canal when it was denied to Israel would in all likelihood have averted the crisis," he said.

The members of the National Zionist Administrative Council, ruling body of the ZOA, rejected a plan to condemn the Republican Party for not supporting U. S. arms shipments to Israel in its platform.

Instead the Council "warmly welcomed the declarations in the Democratic and Republican platforms in defense of Israel's security and independence."

The Council also called upon President Eisenhower to "authorize first the immediate shipment of the arms required by Israel."

was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Born in Russia, a daughter of the late Jacob and Anna Brody, she came to Providence at an early age. She was a member of the Anshe Kovner Synagogue.

Survivors are five daughters, Mrs. Albert Berlinsky, Mrs. Benjamin Berger and Mrs. Anna Schoenfeld, all of Providence, and Mrs. Fay Sonn, of Miami, Fla., and Mrs. Bernard Daum of Newtonville, Mass.; two sons, Joseph and Jacob Kessler, both of Providence; one sister, Mrs. Harry Cohen of Providence; 14 grandchildren, and nine great-grandchildren.

DIRECT DISTANCE DIALING of Telephone Calls. Coming September 16th

WHAT IS DIRECT DISTANCE DIALING?

Direct Distance Dialing is a new, fast, accurate method of dialing out-of-town calls. It enables customers to dial station-to-station calls direct to telephones in certain places as easily as they dial locally. In the future, Direct Distance Dialing will be extended throughout the United States and Canada.

WHO WILL USE IT?

Starting September 16, most dial customers in Rhode Island will be able to dial many out-of-town calls.

LINED AND DOTTED AREAS may dial to each other, and to: COVENTRY, HOPE VALLEY* and NO. TIVERTON, at regular Local or Long Distance rates, as well as to many points in Eastern Massachusetts, including:

BOSTON AND VICINITY	FALL RIVER	NEWBURYPORT
CANTON	HAVERHILL	NORTON
CONCORD	LOWELL	ROCHESTER
DIGHTON	LYNN	TAUNTON
	NEW BEDFORD	WESTPORT

*Exception: Narragansett will call Hope Valley through the operator.

LINED AREAS may also dial direct to NEW YORK CITY and PHILADELPHIA and vicinity.

HOW TO USE IT

1. Check the dialing area.

Refer to the list of places in the Direct Distance Dialing booklet that has been sent to you:

- (a) to determine whether the place you wish to call is dialable from your exchange.

2. Obtain the number.

If you do not already know the number, dial "Operator" and ask for the Information Operator at the place you are calling: (for example: "Boston Information, please"). The Information Operator will tell you what the number is. Replace the receiver momentarily; then lift it and dial the number.

3. Dial the call.

- (a) To dial numbers in Rhode Island and eastern Massachusetts, just dial the two letters and five figures of the number.
- (b) In those Central Offices that may dial to New York City and Philadelphia and vicinity, an area code must be dialed before the telephone number. New York City's area code is 212. To call EXchange 5-4500 in New York, dial 212-EX-5-4500.
- (c) In Narragansett, Scituate, No. Attleboro and the Oxbow office of Cumberland, before dialing any Long Distance point, the number 112 must be dialed before the rest of the call.

4. Give the operator your number.

After you have dialed, an operator will usually ask for your number. Be sure to give her the number of the telephone you are using.

5. Report wrong numbers immediately.

It is important to dial correctly, but if you reach a wrong number:

- (a) find out what place you have reached.
- (b) if the place is outside of your free-calling area, dial "Operator" immediately and tell her what happened so that you will not be charged for the call.

TELEPHONE USERS in all Providence Central Offices may dial to Rhode Island and Eastern Massachusetts points.
... in addition ...

Telephone users in ELMHURST 3, GENEVA, EDISON, HOPKINS 3 and WILLIAMS 4 may dial to New York City and Philadelphia and vicinity in addition to Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

For Additional Information about Direct Distance Dialing, call your local Telephone Business Office.

Justifies Nasser's Suez Canal Grab

NEW YORK—The West has reacted to Egypt's seizure of the Suez Canal with a "hysteria," according to Alfred M. Lilienthal, counsel for the anti-Zionist National Committee for Security and Justice in the Middle East.

Lilienthal said that the U. S. and Britain "forced Nasser to seek new revenue" by withdrawing their offer to finance the Aswan high dam.

He charged that Nasser was being attacked by the French because of his position on Algeria and Tunisia; by the British for his opposition to the Baghdad Pact and "his wooing of Britain's subsidized Jordan and his encouragement to the Cypriots," and by the United States "for not making peace with Israel on Israeli terms."

Lilienthal said his organization is going to urge both the major political parties to adopt campaign planks for an agreement between the Presidential candidates "to take the Middle East out of domestic politics."

Women's Advisory Committee Meets

A meeting of the advisory committee of the Women's Division of the General Jewish Committee's 1956 campaign and co-chairmen of the Initial Gifts division was held last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. David Meyers, general Women's Division campaign chairman.

Plans for the Initial Gifts dinner were reviewed and last minute changes made for the campaign “kick-off” affair to be held September 23 at the Sheraton - Biltmore Hotel.

Mrs. Meyers announced that no efforts are being spared to make the dinner one of the most successful events ever conducted by the Women's Division of the GJC.

Ledgemont division is to play in the forthcoming campaign, Judge Licht said. He announced that there will be no separate dinner for the Ledgemont Division this year because of the early opening of the campaign soon after the high holiday period and the importance of having all persons attend the campaign Initial Gifts “kick-off” dinner on September 23 at the Sheraton - Biltmore Hotel.

Ledgemont Division workers will handle cards of members of the Ledgemont Country Club. Judge Licht asserted that the utmost is being done to assure 100 percent attendance of Ledgemont Country Club members at the “kick-off” dinner.

To the Voters of the First Senatorial District

HAROLD S. MOSKOL

262 WATERMAN STREET

PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND

August 28, 1956

Dear Friends:

As you by now undoubtedly know, the appointment of Judge Frank Licht to the Superior Court by Governor Dennis J. Roberts created a vacancy in the Democratic Party for the Senate in our District. It, therefore, naturally became the duty of the Democratic Party to select its candidate for the Senate from this District. Acting through its District Committee, the Democratic Party considered all the eligible candidates and after due deliberation, chose and endorsed me to be the candidate for the Senate in the coming election.

I deem it a great honor and privilege to be so chosen and I welcome the opportunity to once again represent the people of this community—this time as your Senator. I most earnestly solicit your support in this endeavor to the end that the high ideals and principles most recently brought to this office continue uninterrupted.

With every good wish for the coming New Year, I am,

Sincerely,

HAROLD S. MOSKOL

Dr. and Mrs. Potter

all. We can't tote guns, but we can help build a great Israel by giving to GJC."

Despite the austerity and tension, the Israelis are not ignoring the constructive aspects of civilization. Dr. and Mrs. Potter noted that the desire for higher education is so great, that at the new Technion, as each new building is completed, the students and faculty can't wait to move in and get to work. The universities are filled, although campus conditions are not always good. Hebrew University situated on Mt. Scopus with temporary quarters scattered throughout Jerusalem is badly in need of money for maintenance to continue producing scientists, doctors, teachers, lawyers, and agricultural experts. This, along with the education of 20,000 immigrant children in the lower grades, is one of the beneficiaries of your donations to the General Jewish Committee of Providence.

Dr. Potter spent a morning in the Hadassah Hospital with Dr. Bernard Zondek, the renowned Chief of Obstetrics and Gynecology. He noticed the vigor with which the members of Dr. Zondek's staff carried out research, because they felt that with their scientific publications they had a window to the Western world. Dr. Potter noted, "I was impressed with the difficulties under which they were working, not only because of the temporary dilapidated buildings, but there is even a language barrier. I saw patients from places like Cochinchina, China with whom they could not communicate. These teachers are giving themselves totally with absolutely no regard for personal comforts or monetary gain." In the next year alone, this hospital, and others like it helped by American contributions through the United Jewish Appeal, will give medical and institutional care to 27,000 immigrants.

Dr. and Mrs. Potter are natives of Providence. Mrs. Potter, the former Lillian Kelman, is a graduate of Classical High, while Dr. Potter graduated from old Technical High. Both are graduates of Brown, where Mrs. Potter also received her Master's Degree in Education. They've been married for fifteen years, and now live in a most attractive home on Fosdyke Street with their three daughters, Eleanor, who is thirteen, Debby, 11, and Betsy, 8½.

Mrs. Potter summed up her trip with these words. "All through Israel, you feel almost an embarrassment of your riches, when you see so many people in every walk of life who devote themselves so completely to the future of their

Receives Letter of Seminar Winner

Mrs. Charles Potter, chairman of the Hebrew Culture Council, announces the receipt of communications from the Israel Summer Seminar winners of 1956. She stated that the students wrote enthusiastic letters about their visit to Israel.

One of the students, Sheila Berger, writes: "In all my dreams I never pictured Israel to be so beautiful. The most impressive sight was approaching the harbor and seeing Mt. Carmel with Haifa nestling at the bottom." Regarding Hebrew studies the Seminar winner writes: "Our teachers spoke little English and so we have many of our lessons in complete Hebrew. As a result I found myself slowly picking up more words and I found it easier to understand Hebrew . . . I can't begin to express my sincere thanks to you for all that has been bestowed upon me".

Israel Summer Seminar winners were Miss Berger and Betty Brown. Nathan Temkin is chairman of the Hebrew Scholarship Fund, which made it possible for the students to join the Israel Seminar.

Manischewitz Head Advises Dieters

Edith Stoffer, head of the service department of the B. Manischewitz Company, has embarked on a campaign to dispel the all too common notion that low-calorie menus leave something to be desired in the way of enjoyment.

For Summer menus, where a light touch is particularly welcome, Manischewitz gefilte fish and borscht, Miss Stoffer contends, form the basis of a low-calorie meal that can be relied on to gratify the taste and appetite of non-weight watching members of the family as well.

Leave Prejudice Out of Politics!

With politics getting hotter as election time grows nearer, we urge all party chiefs and candidates to pay heed to the non-sectarian appeal of the leaders of the three great religious faiths "to reject political arguments based on racial and religious prejudices."

Spokesmen for Judaism, Catholicism and Protestantism made a constructive proposal that "nonpartisan and nonsectarian committees" be established in every community to "keep a watchful eye on campaign activities and call to the attention of political leaders any instances of appeals based on religious or racial prejudice."

"Nothing is healthier for self-government than outspoken political discussion, but nothing is more harmful to a self-governing people than confusion of the issues by base appeals to racial and religious bigotry," declared Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, president of the National Council of the Churches; Archbishop Edwin V. O'Hara, of the Catholic Diocese of Kansas City; Rabbi Abraham J. Feldman, president of the Synagogue Council of America; Mrs. Mildred McAfee Horton, chairman of Christian Life and Work of the Council of Churches; George N. Shuster, president of Hunter College, and Irving M. Engel, president of the American Jewish Committee.

"In the light of the pre-eminent role which the United States is playing, it is incumbent upon us to prove that in our democracy men of all races, creeds and national origins participate in our Government, to take all necessary measures to prevent any expression of racial or religious bias by their adherents and to condemn publicly and emphatically every occurrence thereof. . . .

"Let us make certain that our election campaigns are in every sense free and worthy of a nation founded on the principles of brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God."

President Eisenhower added the weight of his prestige in condemning those who invoke racial and religious prejudice in the forthcoming elections. He spoke at his press conference against those who incite racial and religious hatred for personal political advantage.

"I believe," he said, "that anyone that stirs up racial hatreds and other antagonisms that are based upon race or religion or differences in basic philosophy—it is always a mistake. It is a very grave error and a disservice to the United States. Extreme statements of this kind can do no one any good."—Intermountain News

As We Were Saying:

Debby Rabinowitz's $2 Gift; And Israel's Aid for Arabs

By ROBERT E. SEGAL

Well, a cat can look at a queen; and Deborah Rabinowitz, 8, of New York, can write a touching letter to Premier Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt. Chances are, though, that the queen was sweet enough to smile back at the cat; but when innocent little Deborah sent Colonel Nasser $2 the other day "to buy some clothes for the Arab children," the Cairo dictator couldn't pass up the chance to slip the child a monkey of Arab propaganda.

Acknowledging her touching gift with thanks, he referred to Arab refugee children as youngsters "dissipated by Israel."

Wouldn't do much good here to remind Brother Nasser that Arab refugees came to be refugees because their warlords let loose a holocaust on Israel and because those same military leaders urged the Arabs of Palestine to flee on the strength of the promise that they would return later as masters of the land.

Nor would it help much to point out again that among the 350,000 Jews who have immigrated to Israel from Iraq, Syria, Egypt and Yemen, thousands and thousands had their property confiscated and were driven out by Arabs.

The Essential Question

But it might do some good to answer the question often raised but somehow completely lost in the emotional tug of war arising from the plight of the Arab refugees.

That question is: "What has Israel done and what is Israel willing to do for those refugees?"

A few answers that might be worth pasting in somebody's file follow:

Israel has:

Offered to compensate the refugee Arabs for their abandoned property. Israel is "probably assuming a heavier financial commitment in the Arab refugee problem than any other single member government of the UN, notwithstanding the fact that the problem itself was created through a deliberate Arab attempt to destroy Israel."

Has leaned over backward in contributing $2,800,000 towards the Reintegration Fund and by releasing frozen Arab bank accounts. And this at a time when Iraq, in addition to hanging Jews in the public square, had confiscated all Jewish property. Israel stands ready to do even more in this direction if Arab lands will stop their economic boycott against Israel and will give Israel shipping passage through the Suez Canal. (Arab boycotts against Israel have already resulted in the loss of $280,000,000 to Israel.)

Has integrated some 45,800 Arab refugees into Israel, thus removing them from the UN relief lists and thus also bringing Israel's Arab population up to approximately 200,000.

Has gone out of its way to reunite Arab families in Israel.

Has carried out pledges of political equality contained in the Israel Declaration of Independence. Arabs have full citizenship in Israel. Eight serve in Knesset—an interesting contrast to such Arab strictures against Jews as the refusal of visas to American Jews and Jews of other nations who may merely want to visit Arab territory.

Has published its Official Gazette in Arabic as well as in Hebrew, has inscribed its currency in both languages and has sponsored regular Arabic broadcasts.

Has helped Arab farmers in Israel raise the value of their farm produce sixfold since 1948. (The general death rate among Arabs in Israel fell from 11.54 per thousand in 1962 to 8.46 in 1965; nearly 27,000 Arab pupils attend school in Israel fell from 11.54 per thousand eligible to vote participated in the 1955 elections; Israel is the first state in the Middle East to grant suffrage to Arab women.)

Other Millions of Refugees

Has repeatedly made overtures for a peaceful resolution of the broader issues leading to a refugee problem.

And speaking of refugee problems, why is the press of the world so silent these days about 15 million refugees in India and Pakistan, the 13 million in West Germany, the 2,500,000 in South Korea, the 400,000 in Finland?

Why is there so little mention of the failure of Arab governments to make use of the $350,000,000 annual oil royalties to aid people made homeless by a war started by Arabs?

Why did the Syrian government forbid any of the Arab refugees to accept Canada's offer to absorb them in 1955? Why did Syria refuse Point 4 assistance? Why did $64,000,000 earmarked for Arab refugees by the Mutual Security program lay untouched in 1953?

"Our mission is one of peace," Colonel Nasser wrote Deborah Rabinowitz. The child is only 8. Sure! Why not substantiate what you say by discussing peace with Israel? And why not make it clear to Deborah that you didn't mean what you said a few months ago when your own papers quoted you thus: "It is utterly inconceivable that Egypt should ever consider peace with Israel. . . . A man can forget everything except blood, vengeance and honor."

11 Years After Hitler

The Nazi War Criminals

By THEODORE KAGHAN

"The Nuremberg trials," an American Jewish lawyer who was on the prosecution staff of the International Military Tribunal told me in Germany with bitter emphasis, "were a flop. We set out to establish a precedent. We didn't succeed."

"Denazification," said the half-Jewish Sen. Joachim Lipschitz in Berlin, "was an American failure. It should have been left to the Germans."

"The trouble with you Americans," a German publisher told me in Frankfurt, "was that you started out hitting all the innocent little fellows and by the time you got around to the big guilty ones, your tempers had cooled off."

Judging from opinions I picked up all over Germany and from the number of ex-Nazis and ex-war criminals who show no penitence, the decontamination process, in which we invested so much of our dough, sweat and fears, was one at which the West, particularly the Americans, labored almost in vain. Germany may be on a new road, but she is not decontaminated.

Perhaps we aimed too high after destroying the Nazi state. Perhaps, in our moralistic enthusiasm we tried to spray our ideological delousing powder into too many small unimportant crevices. Perhaps, considering the time, the early postwar atmosphere and the permeating odors of crematories, we did as well as could be expected and owe nobody, including ourselves, any apologies. And perhaps we're making more mistakes now than we made then.

"One week after Gen. Sepp Dietrich, was released on parole," a disenchanted German employee of the U. S. government told me in Bonn, "he showed up at the Bavarian hunting lodge of a friend, driving a new Cadillac."

The case of Sepp Dietrich is as good an example as any of how lofty intentions can leave troublesome scars. Dietrich, whose release a few months ago created a furor in the U.S., was sentenced to life imprisonment by an American war crimes court for supposedly having issued the orders leading to the massacre of 142 captured Americans at the Malmedy Crossroads in Belgium during the Battle of the Bulge.

That charge against Dietrich was, in point of legal fact, never proved. No documentary evidence was ever produced that he had issued orders to kill prisoners. The best the prosecution could do was to hold him responsible for the combat group which, under Col. Joachim Peiper, carried out the massacre.

Parole Is a Part Of American Justice

It must be noted too, that the Dietrich case was handled by U. S. military authorities on the basis of the Geneva Conventions governing violations of the rules of land warfare. It was not a case tried at Nuremberg by the International Military Tribunal, as were those of the Nazi leaders, and there appears to be some ground for doubt that strict adherence to the laws of evidence was always respected by the zealous soldier-investigators involved.

In any event, Dietrich's sentence was later reduced to 25 years and Peiper's commuted to life imprisonment and then to 35 years. Peiper still is in Landsberg Prison but supposedly has applied for his parole.

The parole system, as a result of which Dietrich is now a free man, was established in 1953 partly through the insistence of the Prisons Board of the U. S. High Commission.

"These guys," a friend of mine who was on the board told me in Bonn, "are criminals. They ought to be treated as criminals. In the U. S., criminals come under a parole system. In Japan, Gen. MacArthur established a parole system for war criminals in 1950. Unless these German war criminals were to become a cause celebre here as political prisoners suffering discrimination, we owed it to ourselves to apply fully our own system of justice, not just a part of it."

There are of course, people curdled with a suspicious turn of mind who will tell you that the forethought of the Prisons Board was matched by forethought in other quarters which saw in the proposal another kind of future advantage.

"By the time this thing was set up," a cynical old-timer in U. S. government service said, "it was obvious we were going to need the cooperation of the German military and the flag wavers.

war crimes. To a certain extent the hope has borne fruit. The Germans have participated. How deeply and permanently they are committed remains to be seen.

The cynical old-timer I talked to wasn't betting, but, he said: "Just wait. Before this problem is liquidated the Germans will be in complete charge of these babies and with one fine act of patriotic whitewash the whole Landsberg contingent will free men.

"Time," he added with a sarcasm distilled by more than twelve years with the Germans, "has already created one German 'wunder.' It can create more."

It was this same cynic who warned me: "Watch the Russians. Don't be surprised if their new love for the good, the beautiful, the just and the expedient brings forth a proposal to release all the Nazi big shots still confined in Spandau Prison in animosity against Americans, no complaints about his treatment in Landsberg. We were all on one team now against communism was the theme of his new outlook, and we ought to forget the past. He looked much more filled out than the pictures of him in the dock at Nuremberg.

Ten years in Landsberg, the general said, was enough for any of these so-called war crimes, and everybody in ought to be let out now and the whole thing written off.

Wasn't anybody guilty of anything, I asked him. Was everybody in Germany innocent of all crimes before the bankruptcy of the 1,000-year Reich?

That, said the 67-year-old gray-haired general, was a difficult question. He would rather not answer that.

The July 20 plot against Hitler? One could argue both sides, but he'd rather not. One could have participated in it for reasons of "idealism" or rejected outright participation for reasons of "realism." All these things, the general pleaded, were foot into the Krupp offices or trying to run what was left of his family empire until he had met certain stipulations about deconcentrating it.

Things have changed since then. Just recently Alfred Krupp, now a lean handsome 46, played host at his 200-room Essen mansion, Villa Hugel, to 95 second-echelon diplomats brought up by special train from Bonn for an enlightening inspection of the vast Krupp operations. Special buses brought the diplomats' wives up later in the day for an evening of fun and frolic. It was the most brazen attempt at public relations ever seen in Germany; reorientation in reverse, as it were.

It Isn't That Krupp 'Wants' to Make Guns

When the tired but impressed company boarded the special train at two o'clock of a Sunday morning to return to Bonn, with useful steel souvenirs like cigar lighters, flasks, etc., they found handsomely printed multilingual brochures recounting the historic role of the Krupp empire in the service of Germany lying carelessly on every seat. It was almost enough to make a strong man weaken, I was told when I arrived in Bonn a few weeks later, and indeed it may well have accomplished its aim.

Its aim, in few words, was to circumvent the agreement reached between Krupp and the Allies at Bonn in March, 1953, whereby he must sell about half his family's concentrated holdings and break up the empire by 1958. He's supposed to shed, among other things, coal and iron mines and steel mills, divvy his shipping and chemical interests and get along with just a few things like locomotive works, machine works and some lesser elements of what used to be Hitler's very efficient war machine. The part he is supposed to sell employs about 43,000 people, almost the same number as the part he does not have to sell.

Somehow or other practically nothing is getting sold except the argument that breaking up the vast concentration is an Allied trick to make the family business less "rational" and thereby a less effective competitor in foreign markets.

It is an open secret, for example, that Berthold Beitz, Krupp's general manager, has called in the directors of the many different holdings and has warned them that anything they may do to help carry out the Allied deconcentration order will be held against them when the old family "togetherness" is eventually restored. Beitz can and does point with assurance to other German industrial combines ordered broken up by the Allies but which, by hook and crook, have managed to take on that old, efficiently concentrated look.

It isn't that Krupp wants to make guns. Where he's making the most money these days is in foundries and steel mills made to order for needy places like India and Africa. Never, said Krupp as he shook the dust of Landsberg Prison from his shoes and focused his eye on new markets, will I ever willingly make guns.

He might, however, if he could retain the family empire intact, be persuaded, the Germans think. The Americans are, after all, in a hurry to rearm the country.

Somebody figured a parole system couldn't hurt the cause."

The result, eventually, was the Mixed Board, comprised of three Germans, one American, one Frenchman and one Briton. Its legal status and its parole responsibilities were established in the Bonn Conventions bestowing sovereignty on the Bonn government, and presumably all the U. S. Senators who voted in favor of sovereignty voted also for the principle of parole.

Actually the Board doesn't have much to do in the British and French zones for the simple reason that our allies there don't employ our parole system in their prisons. But there are currently 194 war prisoners on parole from the U. S. Zone's Landsberg Prison. There are about 35 still waiting inside. This covers the most recent release of Navy Capt. Kurt Goebel a few weeks ago.

All the War Criminals May Soon Be Free

The idea that the parole system would reduce the future political problems in several ways was coupled also with the hope that by employing German parole supervisors and enlisting the cooperation of the government we could commit the Germans to acceptance of the principle of Berlin. This will be a new high in Soviet cynicism, but in Germany it will look good."

The Nazis still confined in Spandau under what is practically the only remaining four-power function in Europe are: Rudolf Hess, Hitler's deputy; the ailing Adm. Karl Doenitz, Hitler's heir apparent; Albert Speer, former munitions minister; Walther Funk, economics minister, and Baldur von Shirach, der Fuehrer's aging kingpin in the Reich youth movement.

I took the trouble to arrange an almost conspiratorial meeting with one war criminal, a general who had been sentenced at Nuremberg to 20 years and who was not too long out of Landsberg. His sentence had been cut to 12 years in 1951, and what with time served and time off for good behavior, he was now free to pursue his hobby, the history of art.

He lives on a government pension which he told me was enough to keep him well and comfortable. He and his wife, who used to work as a hat check girl in a gambling casino to make ends meet while he was brooding in jail, occupy part of a substantial villa near Frankfurt shared by several other tenants.

The general, who thought no purpose would be served by letting me use his name, had no over and done with, but there were people who insisted on keeping old hates alive.

There Is, for Example, The Case of Alfred Krupp

After all, the general said with a perfectly straight face, did we declare war on the French? No. The French declared war on us. And then the Americans came in and made war not against the state, but against the German people. It was all an ugly business, so why bring it up?

This plea, which ex-war prisoners and kindly disposed public citizens chorus in unison with increasing volume, is not concerned only with the military brotherhood. It is now being sung with seductive insistence by another type of convicted war criminal and we may soon be overwhelmed by the harmony of it all.

Alfred Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach is a case in point. Krupp, who claims he had nothing to do with the expropriation and slave labor activities of his father's vast industrial complex, nevertheless was found guilty of war crimes by the International Military Tribunal at Nuremberg and spent six years in Landsberg. When he got out in February, 1951, he was barred by the conditions of his release from putting

Out of the Crowded DP Camps...

By BENNETT SCHIFF

Four years ago at the age of 6, having spent almost all of her life as a Displaced Person in Europe, Florica Remetier, a soft-eyed, brown-haired little girl of great talent came to the U.S. to begin a second and different kind of childhood.

Today she is 10, and to see the little lights dance in her deep brown eyes as her smile expands a look of piquant interest and curiosity into an expression of joyous childhood is to know that her second experience with the young years has been something more than a simple success.

There is radiance in her, and if you ask her how it was traveling from camp to camp with homeless people she says she cannot remember.

By the time she came here she had already given five concerts, a tiny figure in an enveloping recital hall holding her diminutive fiddle with assurance and playing like an angel.

Her audiences were Italian and of the kind which know and assess the music they are listening to even if the source of the sound is a little child.

SHE PLEASED THE KNOWING AUDIENCES FOR she is an authentic musical genius, an example of the inexplicable combination of forces, design and balance which, infrequently, produces a creative artist at the age of 5.

But before the comparatively quiet time in Italy there had been the movement from camp to camp along with the hordes of dislocated people of Europe torn loose by wars and politics.

Her father, Marcel Remetier, a student of languages, was deported from his native Romania, a Russian satellite nation, to the Soviet Ukraine in 1940.

While there he met a fellow deportee, Theodora Feiga, who subsequently became his wife and Florica's mother.

After being returned to Romania the couple fled in 1946 and for six years wandered from camp to camp with their daughter until finally, through the efforts of the International Refugee Organization and the American Joint Distribution Committee the family was able to come here in 1952.

They are not years you would expect a child to remember, for at that age unpleasant things are quickly forgotten. They are years her parents remember too well, but prefer not to re-create with memory. They prefer to experience the present, which for them is full and rewarding.

Florica's striking talent was indisputable from the very beginning. When she gave her Italian concerts she had been playing the violin for less than a year.

And, as you might reasonably expect from a child with perfect pitch who played classical keyboard compositions with ease and fluidity she drew the bow across although it is true that her experience with music was not exactly spanking new.

She had been playing the piano, beginning at 4, for a full year before she looked at a fiddle her father handed to her one day.

She gently pulled the bow over the strings and produced a full, complete, normal tone without using the left hand.

This, experts say, is something that requires effort and study and practice.

Nor was it accident or coincidence for the little girl continued to draw perfectly shaped, round tones from the fiddle.

SHE DESCRIBES HER FIRST EXPERIENCES WITH a violin with the simplicity with which she began to play it.

How did you come to play the fiddle, you ask her.

"I started to play the violin in Italy when I was 5 years old but I had already been playing the piano since I was 4," she says as if that explains everything. And in a way it does.

She emphasizes the word "violin" because like all professional violinists she does not like to hear the divine instrument of Paganini and Stradivarius and Guarnerius called a fiddle. It is even worse than calling a ship a boat in the presence of a seaman.

Her father remembers it better. "She was fascinated with the instrument," he said and you could share with him his great, fulfilling pride in his child.

"She considered it a toy and played it as if it were a guitar at times and at least for a month she kept looking inside it."

Florica interrupted to say: "I found out what was inside—nothing. Wood."

It was just before they got their clearance to come to the U. S. that Florica's talent came to the attention of Maestro Giulio Bignani, a noted teacher of the violin attached to the staff of the famed Academia di Santa Cecilia in Rome. For a short while he took her under his wing for special instruction and then the red tape was unwound and the family left for the U. S.

She had by that time given her concerts and when her ship came into New York harbor the ship-news reporters and photographers who had come aboard from the cutter went looking for her.

She remembers that day well. It is a more pleasant and exciting memory than the crowded camps with the lost people.

She still speaks English with vestigial remnants of the Romanian and Italian which served her in Europe and there is a maturity and bearing about her which is more than you might expect from a child of 10.

"I wanted very much to see the Statue of Liberty when the ship came here," she said, "but I missed it that day. There were so many reporters and photographers that we had docked by the time I could come up on deck."

"I remember that they asked me what I would like most to have in this country and I said I would like a big doll and a big carriage and then a little boy came over and gave me a piece of bubble gum and I chewed it and liked it and I asked for a basket of bubble gum, too."

The Remetier family following the years of wandering finally found their home in Hartford when the Hartt College of Music there offered Florica a full scholarship after musicologists heard her play.

The Hartford Board of Education has given her special permission to attend public school for only morning sessions so that she can attend the Hartt College classes afternoons.

AT THE COLLEGE, WHERE HER FELLOW STUDENTS are all at least 7 or 8 years older than she, she takes a full course including composition and theory, advanced technical subjects for a child her age.

But there is no question that she is a child her age.

"I am very interested in sports," she tells you. "I like swimming, which is first; then comes biking and skating and I do acrobatics, too."

"This is the way I spend my days. I get up sometimes at 7 and sometimes at 9, depending on whether it is winter or summer. Then I do some acrobatics in my room and play a little at the piano and dress.

"I go to school and come home at 12 for lunch and then go to music school. Afterward I come home and practice and go out to play."

"In the wintertime I practice for three hours a day and in the summertime I practice for five or six hours a day."

She enjoys the practicing with the comprehension of a professional who realizes that it is necessary and good.

"She also enjoys reading 'fairy tales and stories which deal with science and true stories.'"

"True stories?"

"Yes. I have a little book of composers and how they grew up. Stories of Mozart and Beethoven and Bach and Brahms."

"Oh, that kind of true stories."

She has given concerts here, in Boston, New Haven and Springfield and she has appeared on radio and television shows, the most recent during which she played a duet with Sam Levenson on "Two for the Money."

AMONG THE COMPOSERS IT IS TCHAIKOWSKY, Beethoven and Mozart she admires most, and among the violinists it is Heifitz and Isaac Stern and Erica Morini, the lady violinist, of course.

Orchestras in Italy, England and the Scandinavian countries have invited her to appear with them there and when she becomes an American citizen in another year she plans to accept the invitations.

"She would like," her father said, "to play for people all the time but we keep her from this so that she can develop as a child and not as a prodigy."

Florica broke into this dull conversation with:

"How I came to swim was that I went to the pool in Hartford and I didn't know the water was six feet deep at a certain point and a little girl jumped into the water and I did, too, and I learned to swim."

Which was how she began to play the fiddle, precisely.

Suit for $50,000 Filed by Lawyer

FREEHOLD, N. J. — Ira D. Katchen of Long Branch, a lawyer, has charged in a $50,000 libel suit that a Locust woman made false and malicious statements about him and his work in the mental health field.

Katchen's suit says that Mrs. Marian M. Strack of Locust accused him in a letter of causing a predominant number of Jews to be elected to the Monmouth County Mental Health Association, of which Katchen was president and one of the organizers. The letter, which also said Katchen discriminated against Christian members, allegedly was written to Bayard D. Stout of Locust, the area finance chairman of the association.

The suit asks $25,000 punitive damages and $25,000 compensatory damages. Harry A. Green is representing Katchen.
