Israeli Delegates Confer—Mrs. Golda Meir (left) Foreign Minister, and Israeli Ambassador to UN, Eliahu Ezer, (right) UN Secretary-General.

NEW YORK — A delicate negotiations are under way this week between UN Secretary-General

U Thant and Israeli Ambassador

Eliahu Ezer, concerning the next phase of the discussion developed in Hammam-ma, following the visit of the Israeli delegation to the UN.

That is the meeting of the Arab League, which is being held in the city of Agaba.

The discussion was in two stages,

the first being a general discussion of the situation in the Middle East, and the second being a more detailed discussion of the blockade of the Suez Canal.

The meeting was held in the presence of the UN Secretary-

General, who is expected to leave the city of Agaba on Friday.

UN Talks

were expected to continue through the week.

Although a spokesman for Ham-marskjold had said in advance of this week's meeting that it would only be concerned with the with-drawal resolution, the long talk indicated that an understanding was being sought on the arrange-ments in Sharm el-Sheikh to fol-low an Israeli withdrawal.

The ambiguity of the resolutions adopted and the conflicting inter-pretations given them by the spon-sors made such an understanding essential.

So far as the public record throws any light on the situation, what the UN is asking of Israel on the Aqaba issue is an act of faith that Egypt, in deeds if not in words, will acquiesce to freedom of navigation after the Israelis withdraw.

Obituary

WILLIAM R. SKLUT
Funeral services for William R. Sklut, of 76 Sabra Street, Cranston, a retired tailor, were held last week from the Max Sugarman Funeral Home. Burial was in Lin-coln Park Cemetery.

Mr. Sklut, husband of the late Polly (Benamovitz) Sklut was born in Russia, and had been a resident of Providence and Cranston for more than 50 years. Mr. Sklut was a member of the Cranston Jewish Center and Branch 14, Workmen's Circle. He operated a tailor shop in Olneyville from 1904 until his retirement in 1955.

Survivors are three sons, Irving of Pasadena, Calif., and Harry and Eli Sklut of Providence; four daughters, Mrs. John Wilson, Miss Stella and Miss Bertha Sklut, and Mrs. Bernard Hittner of Cranston; 11 grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren.

MRS. JOHN FISHMAN
Funeral services for Mrs. Lillian M. Fishman, 45, wife of John Fishman, of 62 Tyndall Avenue, were held last week from the Max Sugarman Funeral Home. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Born in Providence, she was a daughter of Zalman and Annie (Pink) Bernstein and had lived in Providence most of her life before moving to Kew Gardens, Flushing, N. Y., eight years ago. She recently returned to Rhode Island.

Mrs. Fishman was secretary of Mizrahi, a member of the Jewish Center and Hadassah. Besides her husband and parents she is sur-vived by a daughter and two sons.

WALTER P. MISCH
Funeral services for Walter P. Misch, of Newton, Mass., were held last Monday afternoon from the Max Sugarman Funeral Home. Burial was in the Congregational Sons of Israel and David Cemetery.

Mr. Misch was born in Brook-lyn, N. Y., July 11, 1891, a son of the late Caesar and Marion (Sim-on) Misch. He had been a resi-dent of Providence for over 50 years, moving to Boston about 16 years ago. He was a past master of Redwood Lodge P. & A.M.

Survivors include three sons, Donald and Robert of Newton, Mass., and Richard Misch of Providence and two daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Winer of Nashua, N. H.

LOUIS SCHMELZ
Funeral services for Louis Schmeltz, of 140 Dexterdaile Road, a World War I veteran, were held last Tuesday morning from his home. Burial was in Beth-El Cem-etery.

Born in Providence, March 14, 1897, he was a son of the late Jacob and Fannie (Schwartz) Schmeltz.

He is survived by two brothers, William S. of Providence, and Syd-ney Schmeltz of Barrington, and three sisters, Mrs. William Wol-koff, Mrs. William Heywood and Miss Dorothy Schmeltz, all of Providence.

SAMUEL SCHECHTER
Funeral services for Samuel Schechter, 56, of 287 Sayles Street, a machinist for the Grinnell Corp., were held Wednesday from the Max Sugarman Funeral Home. He was the husband of Mrs. Irene (Cohen) Schechter.

Born in Providence, April 3, 1900, Mr. Schechter was the son of Lena and Mendell Schechter. He was a member of Jenks Lodge of Masons and a former member of the Jewish War Veterans and Ca-hill Post, VFW.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Adele Alberts of Miami, Fla., and two sons, Mar-vin and Laurence of Providence; a sister, Miss Frances Schechter, also of Providence, and a brother, Charles Schechter of New York City.

MAURICE L. WEIN

Engaged — Mrs. Florence Babson Cohen of Brighton, Mass. announces the engagement of her daughter, Jacqueline to Mr. Lawrence Robert Orleck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Orleck of this city. Miss Babson, daughter also of the late Mr. Joseph Babson, is a graduate of Hickox Secretarial School. Mr. Orleck attended Bryant College, served with the U. S. Navy during the Korean conflict and is now studying at Boston University. An October wedding is planned.

Engaged—The engagement of Miss Selma L. Rosenthal, daughter of Mrs. Sadie Rosenthal, of 154 Camp Street, to Robert H. Lipsey, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lipsey, of Sunset Terrace, Cranston, was announced this week. Miss Rosenthal is a graduate of R. I. College of Education. Mr. Lipsey attended Bryant College. The wedding is planned for April 13.

Second Child Born

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Stern of 25 Waterman Avenue, Cranston announce the birth of their second child and son, Howard Frederick, on Dec. 31. Mrs. Stern is the former Hannah Sackin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sackin of Sumter Street.

Weintraub-Smith

At a 3 o'clock ceremony on Jan. 27 at Temple Emanuel, Miss Deborah Ann Smith, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith of 281 Olney Street, became the bride of Gerald David Weintraub of Washington, D. C. Rabbis Eli A. Bohnen and Morris Schussheim officiated at the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the Temple. A family dinner was held late in the Garden Room of the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel.

Dr. Arthur Einstein was organist, and Mrs. Abraham Percelay, soloist. Cantor Jacob Hohenemser provided other music.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a gown of Alencon lace over white satin with a fitted bodice and a full skirt ending in a short train. Her veil of tulle was attached to a small headpiece. She carried a Bible with markers of white orchids and stephanotis.

Mrs. Eugene Richard Baker was matron of honor for her sister, and Miss Jean Blazar was junior maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Philip Weintraub and Miss Barbara Ann Mason. They were gowned in blue peau de sole and carried cascade bouquets. Matching floral headbands completed the attendants' ensembles.

Philip Weintraub was best man for his brother, and ushers were Charles Smith and David Smith, brothers of the bride; David Okun, Irwin Yellowitz, Eugene Baker, Lawrence Wynn, Martin Buskin and Stuart Volin.

The bride, who attended Pem-

Rep. Anfuso, who made the letters public, suggested that President Eisenhower call a conference between President Nasser of Egypt and Prime Minister David Ben Gurion of Israel to discuss their dispute in his presence. In response to Rep. Anfuso's suggestion, Harlow wrote, "It appears doubtful that a moment when Israeli forces remain on Egyptian territory would be an auspicious time to attempt to bring the President of Egypt and the Prime Minister of Israel together at a meeting with the President."

Ellen to Norman Bader, son of Mrs. Ruth Bader and the late Mr. Max Bader.

A one o'clock ceremony, officiated by Rabbi Abraham Jacobson of Temple Beth David took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Ferdman, 525 Pleasant Street, Pawtucket, R. I., aunt and uncle of the groom.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore an oyster white jersey dress trimmed in satin. Her fingertip veil was capped by seed pearls. She carried a white muff covered with orchids and stephanotis. Mrs. Mitchell Tock, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. Howard Bader, brother of the groom, was best man.

A wedding reception was held at the Admiral Inn for fifty members of the immediate family.

The bride's mother chose peacock blue peau de soie. The groom's mother wore a periwinkle blue pure silk sheath. Both mothers wore corsages of camellias.

After a wedding trip to the Concord, the couple will reside at 86 Ninth Street.

Closeup By OLIVER PILAT

Louis Lefkowitz, who knows thousands of persons by their first names, has a rule about returning every telephone call by the end of the day.

Even on Jan. 10, 1957, when he was sworn in as the new State Attorney General, he lived up to his old rule. This was an heroic accomplishment, in its way.

Calls had been pouring into his office by the score while he was out taking the oath, meeting the press and attending various conferences. It was late afternoon before he reached the stack of message slips on his desk.

By then, Lefkowitz seemed almost exhausted from the weeks of tension and intrigue which preceded his selection by the GOP-controlled Legislature as the successor to Jacob K. Javits, who had resigned, rather tardily, to take a seat in the U. S. Senate.

In between calls, he would occasionally bang the sides of his head with his palms in a characteristic gesture of weariness. Nevertheless, he kept at his self-imposed task of phoning, well into the evening.

After his telephone operator went home, Lefkowitz did his own dialing. With each person reached, his manner was apparently relaxed and affectionate. Where callers had already left their offices for the day, he tracked them home by phone or placed explanatory calls early the next morning.

From Lefkowitz' point of view, the procedure was routine. The State's new lawyer is conscious of being a former boy from the Lower East Side of Manhattan who has done quite well in life. Friendship paved his road to the top, and he has no intention of being ungrateful.

Disarming, perhaps, is the word for Attorney General Lefkowitz. Slender and alert, he looks younger than his official 52 years. He stands five feet eight and weighs 152 pounds. His shadowed, almost tragic, brown eyes are balanced by a quick smile.

AS A BOY, LOUIS PLAYED A LIVELY GAME OF basketball at the Boys Club, 10th St. and Av. A, on the Lower East Side where he was born. As a young man, he played a lot of handball. Nowadays a swim and a rubdown at the Crystal Health Club, in the Woolworth Building, two or three times a week, suffice to keep him in physical shape.

Even so, there are times when weariness piles up. Then Lefkowitz waits for the first available moment and skips off somewhere, with his wife, for a couple of days of fresh air and sleep. He stole such a relaxing week-end at Atlantic City after attending to the primary chores of his new office.

The Attorney General is a neat, rather dapper man, fond of subtle shades of blue. His breast-pocket white handkerchief rides horizontally. He wears a tie clip and a belt. He always carries a spare pair of gold-rimmed bifocals.

Clothes are a major extravagance, he concedes. He would never dream of taking his wife along to pass judgment on a new suit. "I think you annoy the salesman that way," he says.

An almost scholarly man in his profession, Louis Lefkowitz tends in ordinary conversation to be reasonably lowbrow and slangy. His anecdotes revolve more around persons than ideas.

Recently he and his wife Helen took up the opera. "Some months ago," says the Attorney General, obviously enjoying the story in advance, "we went to the Met for the first time. Judge Albert Conway of the Court of Appeals (Friend No. 1) was there, and he said it was the most relaxing thing he knew."

Judge Conway said he came alternate Fridays. I got hold of Lowell Wadmond (Friend No. 2) and he got tickets for us. Now we go alternate Fridays, too."

The immediate struggle in Attorney General Lefkowitz' life involves smoking. Three months ago he gave up the panatellas which had been his constant companions for years. They were bad for his health, he decided. In the moments of strain preceding his selection as Attorney General, however, he fell off the nicotine wagon. In another week or two, when things quiet down, he says, he is going to swear off smoking again, forever.

Louis Lefkowitz is accustomed to Scotch on the rocks with a twist of lemon peel, before dinner. He enjoys social dinner parties, movies like "Around the World in 80 Days," old-time music records and Guy Lombardo's kind of dance music, for listening and for dancing.

In baseball and football, he roots for the Giants. Almost any Saturday or Sunday in the summer he can be found up at the Polo Grounds, with a friend or two, yelling himself hoarse. He attended that recent championship football game between the Giants and the Bears, when it was so cold that a fan in the bleachers lit a bundle. Lefkowitz survived largely as a result of a thermos bottle of hot coffee thoughtfully prepared in advance by his wife.

LINCOLN IS HIS IDOL. HE READS OTHER BIOGRAPHIES, but not much fiction. He never misses the advance sheets, the late decisions of all courts.

Every night, in bed, Lefkowitz reads a mystery or a Western for an hour or so, as a way of inviting sleep. He does no legal reading in bed. He tries to be asleep by midnight or 1 a.m. and is up bright and early by 6:30 or 7 the next morning.

Louis Jacob Lefkowitz was born July 3, 1904, at 118 E. 6th St. He never uses his middle name. His parents, who were immigrants, worked in sweatshops to support a family of several children. Louis struggled for his education, in the classroom and at every conceivable outside job. He won his law degree from Fordham with honors in 1925, before he was old enough to vote. Lefkowitz was admitted to the State bar in April, 1926. That June, he went with some other East Side boys to a vacation camp in Mountain View, N. J., and met a Brooklyn girl who became his wife five years later.

Louis Lefkowitz

"I'm Entirely Satisfied with My Legal Attainments"

"It wasn't until after I was elected to the Assembly in 1927 that I started making a couple of dollars at the law," explains Lefkowitz.

Louis and Helen Lefkowitz have two children, a married daughter of 23, who lives in Rochester, and a 19-year-old son, Stephen, now at Yale, who talks vaguely of becoming a lawyer, like his father.

Lefkowitz' political mentor was the late Samuel S. Koenig, a Republican district leader on the East Side and eventually GOP county leader. Koenig was a man of imposing presence, who thought nothing of bringing President Theodore Roosevelt to dine with him at Little Hungary on E. Houston St.

"To get close to him and shake his hand was a great thing for a young man in those days," says Louis Lefkowitz, fondly. "Sam Koenig was by far the greatest influence in my life."

Lefkowitz upset a Democratic incumbent to get into the Assembly in 1927, as its youngest member. He did it by "organizing the settlement house and boys' club vote," he says. He had many friends, even then; they helped. Some of those friends, men like Leonard Farbstein, Nathaniel Helman and Jack Markowitz, were so encouraged by Lefkowitz' triumph that they also entered politics—but as Democrats.

IN THE ASSEMBLY, WHERE HE SERVED SEVERAL terms, Lefkowitz was a pre-New Dealer, introducing anti-injunction legislation, bills to help indigent mothers and reform elections.

Then, paradoxically, the New Deal tide came in and rendered election of Republicans in the areas below 14th St. almost hopeless.

Lefkowitz kept the political faith. For two evenings every week for many years, he sat in the backroom of his local political clubhouse, accepting contracts—bids for favors—from the boys.

For a while, by appointment from Mayor LaGuardia, he served as a Municipal Court Justice. Later, also by appointment, he was a City Court Justice. Year in and year out, except for time on the bench, he worked as law committee chairman for the New York County and State GOP organizations.

In his capacity as party lawyer, Lefkowitz won as many friends among the Democrats as he did among Republicans, because of his courtesy, fairness and good humor. They called him the politicians' politician. Lefkowitz served as counsel to State Legislative committees. He performed other chores, and waited for the dawn, which never seemed to come. People frequently used to say that Louis Lefkowitz deserved more from his party than he had received, or was ever likely to receive.

Even Lefkowitz grumbled a bit, among friends. Then along came the vacancy for State Attorney General.

THERE WERE MANY CANDIDATES. FORMER

Gov. Dewey and State GOP Chairman Morhouse wanted Presiding Justice David Peck of the Appellate Division, and Senator-elect Javits, who praised Lefkowitz, spoke of settling on a candidate "of the caliber of Justice Peck or Solicitor General Moore."

When it was all over, and the friends of Louis Lefkowitz had carried the day, Justice Peck agreed to administer the oath of office.

Before an audience of hundreds of lawyers, judges and public officials gathered in the marble halls of the Appellate Division, Justice Peck officiated in a manner smoother than eggnog. He read messages from Dewey and Javits praising Lefkowitz' acumen and competence.

Then Tom Curran arose, the Manhattan county GOP chairman, one of Lefkowitz' oldest and closest friends. In a couple of sharp sentences, he tore wide open the pretense of unanimity.

"In the last week or two," snapped Curran, "some people seemed to be intent on requiring a Cardozo or an Oliver Wendell Holmes for this job."

"There is no invidious comparison between those names and this man, Louis Lefkowitz. A great party has chosen as able and distinguished a lawyer as possible for Attorney General."

At his first press conference, Lefkowitz gently evaded efforts to get him to quarrel retroactively with Javits, on any theory that his predecessor had hoped for a more distinguished successor.

"I am entirely satisfied with my own legal attainments," said Louis Lefkowitz.

Then, in the mildest manner, the new Attorney General indicated he was quite conscious of the necessity of making his own record.

A reporter complained that the press conference was yielding very little news. It was good just to become acquainted, countered Lefkowitz, the man of many friends.

"Instead of getting my name in the papers seven times a week," he said, "I'll be satisfied with once a week—for something good."

Know Thyself Have You Analyzed Your Thoughts?

—By Wells Carr—

You, like nearly everyone else, do more thinking, directly and indirectly, about yourself than about anything else. And because you are your favorite subject, let us analyze what you think about yourself—if your thoughts are healthy, constructive or otherwise.

Instead of questions in this test, there will be "stream of consciousness" statements—as if you were seeing them flash across someone's mind. You add to your score each time one of these sentences or something very similar has frequently crossed your mind. (Score 3 for each familiar thought recognized.)

1. "... I never get a decent break." ()
2. "... no matter how hard I try nobody appreciates my efforts—they just take me for granted." ()
3. "... if other people had my troubles, they'd really have something to cry about." ()
4. "... if I had his luck, money, and connections, I'd be a success, too." ()

5. "... I know it's weak and I swore I wouldn't—but just this one last time." ()
6. "... I wish I could run away from it all." ()
7. "... they deliberately pick on me; they want to hurt me, to humiliate and frustrate me." ()
8. "... I'll get even some day." ()
9. "... I enter a contest, win the big jackpot prize, and ... " ()
10. "... why do I go on—life is so dull, futile?" ()

If your total lies between 21 and 30, your thoughts about yourself tend to be somewhat unhealthy and destructive—you are rather morbid, insecure, self-pitying and an escapist! A rating bracketed between 9 and 18 indicates that you are a little too introverted, somewhat immature, and have several hampering inferiorities. Less than 9 lets you know your thoughts about yourself don't go too far in the wrong direction.

Festival Lecture Set for Wednesday

The Tu Beshevat Festival Lecture of the Cranston Jewish Center, originally scheduled for Jan. 16 and then postponed, will be held on Wednesday, Feb. 13, at 8:30 P.M. at the Cranston Center. Rabbi Theodore Lewis of Touro Synagogue, Newport, will deliver the lecture, the second in a series. His subject is "Jewish Life on the Emerald Isle."

The series is scheduled and arranged by the Center's adult education committee, Melvin Finn, chairman. The public is invited to attend.

Old Colony Reports 1956—'Best Year'

Substantial increases in assets, volume of savings, and earnings for the 12-month period ending Dec. 31, were reported by Ralph R. Crosby, president of Old Colony Co-Operative Bank at the annual meeting of shareholders on Jan. 30 at Old Colony House on Weybosset Street.

Citing 1956 as the greatest growth year in history for Old Colony assets, savings and earnings, Mr. Crosby credited the marked increase in the institution's savings with providing a steady and ample flow of funds for mortgage lending.

Mrs. Gerald David Weintraub, the former Miss Deborah Ann Smith, who was married on Jan. 27 at Temple Emanuel.

Sugarman Heads Hebrew Free Loan

Rubin Sugarman was elected president of the Hebrew Free Loan Association of Providence at the organization's 54th annual meeting held Sunday at Temple Beth Shalom.

Other officers elected are John Newman, first vice-president; Philip Gitman, second vice-president; Benjamin Weiner, secretary; Charles Rosenfield, treasurer; Sol Wald, custodian.

Named directors for the one year term: Jacob J. Alprin, Cantor Karl S. Kritz, Joslin Oken, Meyer Jaffa, Irwin Priest and Benjamin Schuster.

Directors remaining to serve unexpired terms: Joseph Dubin, Barnett Pickar, Perry Rabinowitz, David Saltzman, Morris A. Schwartz, Irving Beranbaum, Harry Chorney, Milton M. Frank, Harry Mincoff, Benjamin Glantz, Samuel H. Wilk and Jack K. Stallman.

B'nai B'rith Women Plan Supper Party

Roger Williams Chapter, B'nai B'rith Women, will honor its new members at a supper party next Wednesday, Feb. 13 at 7 P.M. in the vestry of Temple Emanuel. This is the meeting that was originally scheduled for Jan. 17 but which was postponed because of a storm.

The event is open to all paid-up members. Entertainment will be presented by the Pembroke Double Quartet known as the P. D. Q.'s.

Mrs. Albert Weinberg is membership chairman and Mrs. A. Louis Rosenstein is program chairman. Mrs. Harry Goldman is in charge of hospitality, assisted by Mrs. Sidney Factor, co-chairman, and the following committee: Miss Gertrude Tarnapol, and Mesdames Leonard Mandell, William Hyman, Louis Bernstein, William Meyers, Joseph Cohen, Samuel Bomes, Irwin Cort, William Lipson, Aaron Caslowitz, Frank Queen, Aaron Gershkoff, David Litchman, Sydney Granoff and Harry Davis.

An End And A Beginning

Nearly three weeks ago, the Rhode Island Jewish Softball League presented its awards for 1956 achievement at a dinner held in Topps Gaylord. Despite truly miserable weather, which had forced the cancellation of just about every other social activity in the entire State that night, 30 men showed up for the festivities, making this easily the largest gathering anywhere on that particular day.

On that same night, the first trills of spring could be heard through the weatherbeaten air. The temperature might have been zero, the snow piled high, the roads icy, the populace shivering, all activity slowed to a halt—but when two ballplayers begin a warm argument as to which can run around the bases fastest, with each side lining up ardent supporters, then I say that the winter season is as nothing. These snows and icy blasts will pass. Spring is virtually here!

That's what happened at the softball dinner, which turned out to be an historic occasion in any case.

As for the awards, Lou Glaser, sponsor of the championship Technoprint team, was presented a trophy, while individual gifts were given to Howie Cohen, manager; Herb Mandell, Artie Rubin, Joe Green, Billy DeVecchio, Carl Lefkowitz, Don Schwartz, Sam Jarcho, Jerry Cerel, Allan Manekofsky, Howard Lipsey, Jay Krasner, Nate Snyder, Jerry Lobel and Marvin Manekofsky. There were, also, gifts for all the league's sponsors.

The dinner marked the end of one era and the beginning of a new one. With this closing of the books for the 1956 season, the R. I. Jewish Softball League as an independent body ceased to exist. Yet the softball league will continue as an active operation, and with a substantial increase in its power and vitality. The change comes about through a formal affiliation with the Providence Jewish Community Center.

The combining of forces that is represented in this affiliation is designed to help both elements—the JCC and the Softball League—and will result, it is anticipated, in a greatly expanded, year-round sports program under the JCC banner but with the supervision and organizational know-how of the Officials of the Softball League, along with members of the Center's health and physical education committee.

The Softball League winds up its independent existence on a sound financial and organizational basis. After nine years of continuous operation, it now yields its independence because the game of softball and other sports can best be presented to the community under an expanded setup such as the JCC makes possible.

Locally and around the nation, ball players are becoming an item of short supply. The post-war era of the past dozen years has seen such a wide and amazing variety of diversions, conveniences and facilities become available to the public that there has been a distinct letdown in the field of athletic participation.

Such a community institution as the famous Tim O'Neil baseball leagues has suffered much because of this trend of the youngsters away from active ball field competition. Despite the availability of all the sponsors, uniforms, equipment, officials and money needed to continue the amateur leagues on their pre-World War II scale, the Providence Journal, which now operates the program, has been forced in the past several years to cut down the number of leagues and the number of teams in the leagues. The reason—lack of sufficient numbers of ball players. It's a national trend. Every community has been affected the same way.

In the same manner, the Jewish Softball League has gradually dwindled from a high of ten teams about eight years ago, to four teams in the 1956 season. The reason is easy to trace. When the league was young, most of the standout players were the so-called older, or veteran "boys" who had played ball before the War. Abelson, Moskol, Rabinowitz, Seltzer, Platkin, Schreiber, Weiner, Davidson, Warren, Ludman, Golden, Goldis, Cohen. — oh, literally dozens of them — were on hand to staff the teams.

The younger fellows—those who had been mere kids in pre-War days — were still too young to make the teams, or just didn't care to try. As the years rolled along, the older fellows gradually dropped out; and since the influx of new and younger players did not keep up with the loss, the number of teams began to decrease. This has been entirely in keeping with the national trend, incidentally.

Perhaps this is an unnecessary eulogy of the Softball League; but when so many of us have been so close to it, so active in it, and so involved in it, the passing of the League as an independent organization cannot be permitted to go unnoticed. The stars, the brilliant playoff games and performances down through the years, all will not be forgotten. Perhaps some day an historian can go back through the files and bring some of these superb moments back to life.

Despite the demise of the organization itself, the softball league now may flourish anew, through the tie-up with the Jewish Community Center. Players of vintage 1956 need not worry about the loss of the league; they will be able, if they choose, to pick up next month right where they left off in October. Last year's players are, in fact, welcome to continue their association with Sunday morning softball.

 In addition, the softball league is expected to be given a big play among the younger men in the Center's sports program. So, overall, a really impressive softball operation is likely to shape up in the spring.
 Another column will be needed to explain fully the new sports program which the Center expects to launch. The cooperation and participation of the softball league's officials and players are being counted upon to bring this ambitious year-round program into prominence in our community. More on this subject coming up.

Plenty of Words
 A week from next Monday — February 18 — Words Unlimited, the local association of sports-writers and sportscasters, will stage its annual sports dinner. The affair, which last year attracted an overflow audience of 325 diners, will be held at Rhodes-on-the-Pawtuxet. WU will present its annual awards to the men chosen as R. I. Athlete of the Year, Coach of the Year, and Schoolboy Athlete of the Year, in addition to several other awards for outstanding service to sports.
 As usual, an impressive list of guest speakers will be on hand to spin yarns from behind the scenes in sports. The dinner has always been a fine affair. This year's version should uphold that tradition. Tickets are available at Rhodes, or from any of the members of Words Unlimited. This column has a pocketful. Hope you can make it.

Golden Age Club
 Let me explain why we need the Golden Age Club of the Jewish Community. A person needs food for the body to live and recreation for the soul to exist as a human being. Children from three to five years of age, we send to the kindergarten. They play games; they get acquainted with other children. That prepares their mind to be ready for school.
 Elderly people are just like children. They need recreation in order to exist, and this is where the Jewish Community Center comes in. You know what they do for young children and adults, no matter what age, if you have ever been in the Main Building in Sessions Street.
 You have got to see it with your own eyes in order to know what they do for the Golden Age Clubs. They give us beautiful rooms for meetings, for games, for recreation. They get talent for us such as speakers, singers, and other things to fill out our program. Then comes the young women from Center's Women's Organization. They greet the club members with a wonderful and friendly smile. They give us transportation for those who cannot afford the expense. They prepare refreshments after the business meeting and program.

16 Camp Bauercrest Reunion Sunday

Camp Bauercrest, located in Amesbury, Mass., about 100 miles from Providence, will hold its 27th annual camp reunion this Sunday, Feb. 10 from 2 to 4 P.M. More than 400 campers, parents and friends are expected to be present.

Aaron J. Berenson of Lawrence, Mass., president, will address the gathering and explain the construction program planned for this year. Joseph Bloomfield of Cranston, camp director, will outline new phases of the camping program and introduce the counselor staff.

A social period, movies and refreshments will complete the reunion program.
