Arab Behavior Hints At Possible Peace

NEW YORK—UN diplomats are asking whether a shift is beginning in the Arab attitude toward Israel.

Arab leaders have begun talking "peace" with Israel.

Some observers discount this talk as a tactical maneuver designed to shift to Israel the onus for rejecting a settlement. But others see the Arabs as opening a campaign to prepare Arab opinion for talks with Israel.

These observers believe a noteworthy feature of the Security Council's discussion yesterday of the Syrian complaint against Israel concerning the Huleh bridge was the moderation of the statement by Iraqi representative Dr. Moussa Al Shabander.

His rhetoric was restrained and his call for action fell short of what Syria had requested. Iraq is the only Arab country on the Council. Even more interesting, therefore, were these curious remarks about peace with Israel:

"We know and we admit that the history of Israel is full of miracles, old ones and new ones," Dr. Shabander said, "but unfortunately they did not achieve the most important miracle and that is understanding and peace between the nations."

"Turning bits of desert into gardens may be very useful and very interesting, but it is very interesting to have peace and stability in the Middle East."

"What we need is not really geology: What we need is psychology in the Middle East."

Dr. Shabander made this statement knowing full well that time and again Israeli representatives have offered to begin peace talks with the Arabs.

The most recent Israeli appeal was made by Mrs. Golda Meir, Israeli foreign minister in the General Assembly March 1. Announcing Israel's decision to withdraw from Gaza and Aqaba, she appealed to the Arabs to join Israel in making a new start toward peace and stability.

Shabander's performance was similar to that of the secretary-general of the nine-nation Arab League in Baghdad last week. Abdel K. Hassouna, Egyptian

Reports Confirm that Soviets Persist in Biased Policies

PARIS—The continuing reports of an upsurge of anti-Semitism in Russia and some of her satellites were confirmed this week by diplomatic messages to Western European capitals, according to an International News Service report by Elie Maissi.

Maissi said the embassies have discovered that Russia tried to force Poland to return a number of Jewish refugees who escaped from the USSR. Conflicting reports as to the success of the Soviet pressure are reaching the west, he wrote.

Maissi claimed that the issue of anti-Semitism was raised at a recent "Warsaw Pact" meeting. He said that a Soviet leader at the meeting criticized the Polish policy of allowing Jewish emigration to Israel.

Try Eliminating Journalists

The INS correspondent also charged that there has been an open Soviet demand to eliminate Jewish journalists from the profession in Poland.

He wrote, "About a month ago, the Soviet Embassy press attache in Warsaw summoned the secretary of the Polish newspapermen's union and submitted to him a list of names, all Jewish journalists belonging to the union. The Soviet diplomat asked that these reporters be expelled from the union as "reactionaries." No action has been taken on the matter so far, Maissi stated.

The INS correspondent also corroborated reports that some Russian Jews who escaped from the USSR are managing to take advantage of the more liberal Polish emigration laws to go to the West and to Israel.

Maissi stated that the Russians are trying to get Poles to limit Jewish emigration, but that so far the Polish government has not yielded to the Soviet demands.

Want Amendment Of Proposed Law

JERSEY CITY—A decision to fight for a provision in proposed Sunday closing legislation guaranteeing the right of Sabbath observers to keep their places of business open on Sundays, has been reached by the Rabbinical Council of New Jersey, meeting at Congregation Mt Sinai here.

Sunday closing legislation is now in committee. Assemblywoman Emma Newton (R., Passaic), who heads the committee, has thus far refused to call a public hearing on the proposed law. The Rabbinical Council called upon the legislature to hold such a hearing.

To Be Guest Speaker — Dr. Bernard Mandelbaum, Dean of Students of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, and editor of the Seminary's TV series, will be guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Temple Emanuel Friends of the Seminary on Monday at 8 P. M. at the Temple. Abraham E. Goldstein is chairman, and Alexander Rumpel is honorary chairman of the meeting.

The Temple Emanuel Friends of the Seminary was organized to help support the program of the Seminary, including the training of students for the rabbinate, the field of Jewish education, and the cantorate.

Levy To Represent GJC At Conclave

Joseph Levy, general chairman of the 1957 General Jewish Committee campaign; Mrs. Levy and Joseph Galkin, executive director of the GJC will represent the Greater Providence Jewish community at the National Rescue Conference of the United Jewish Appeal on Saturday and Sunday at the Hotel Roosevelt in New York City.

The conference is being convened by the UJA in response to the call for $50,000,000 in Cash-for-Rescue to insure the continued flow of more than 100,000 Jewish refugees to Israel and other free countries during 1957. Israeli officials have issued an urgent appeal to the United Jewish Appeal for immediate funds to enable her to maintain and continue her emigration and rehabilitation program for refugee Jews.

Levy will present a check in excess of $100,000 to the UJA as part of the GJC share in the Cash-for-Rescue program. GJC officials said this was made possible by the increased number of payment of pledges during the past two weeks.

Boyman Slated For Re-election

Alter Boyman has been renominated as president of the Bureau of Jewish Education, according to the report of the nominating committee to be submitted at the annual meeting of the Bureau on Tuesday evening in the vestry of Temple Emanuel at 8 o'clock. Other officers nominated for the forthcoming term include Judge Frank Licht, Professor Israel J. Kapstein, Mrs. Charles Potter and Irving Brodsky, vice presidents; Dr. Joseph Smith, secretary; and Nathan Temkin, treasurer. Max Winograd is honorary president of the Bureau.

Dr. Judah Pilch, executive director of the American Association for Jewish Education will present a citation to the General Jewish Committee for outstanding service to the cause of Jewish education in the Greater Providence area. The General Jewish Committee sponsored the study on Jewish education which led to the formation of the Bureau of Jewish Education in 1952. In addition to being a former president of the National Council on Jewish Education, Dr. Pilch is at present the chairman of the Executive Committee of the nationally known Religious Education Association.

Announcement of awards and

scholarships to Hebrew camps and to Israel will be made at this meeting. The nominating committee report will be submitted by Bernard J. Margolis who served as chairman. The committee included Saul Abrams, Jack Felder, Sydney Fox, Abraham Goldstein, Joseph Finkle, Mrs. Leonard Mandell, Aaron Roitman, and Nathan Temkin.

Raps Anti-Zionist On Use of Letter

NEW YORK—Rabbi William F. Rosenblum, former president of the Synagogue Council of America, has accused anti-Zionist author and lecturer Alfred M. Lilienthal of falsely claiming the rabbi's endorsement of one of his books.

Rabbi Rosenblum made the charge in a letter to Lilienthal, one-time American Council for Judaism member, in which he described Lilienthal's activities as "really a heinous affront to, as well as attack upon, our people in Israel, whose right to life, liberty and existence I fervently espouse."

Rabbi Rosenblum made the charge following an appearance by Lilienthal on a New York radio interview program, during which the lecturer said Rabbi Rosenblum had endorsed his latest anti-Zionist book.

In his letter, Rabbi Rosenblum referred to "my letter to you of some years ago." The rabbi bluntly demanded that Lilienthal stop using the 1953 letter "in any of your addresses and appearances. All I did then was to say you had a right to present your views. Your use of my letter in some advertising since then . . . creates the impression that I am backing you, rather than the right of free expression."

Terming Lilienthal's pro-Arab views "unwarranted," Rabbi Rosenblum said, "I do not wish my name in any way associated with them."

Discover Synagogue At Israeli Farm

JERUSALEM—Discovery of an ancient synagogue at a farm settlement on the border of the Gaza Strip was announced this week by the Department of Antiquities.

According to experts, the synagogue indicates the existence of a prosperous Jewish community in the ancient town of Maon. The main hall of the synagogue is paved with colored mosaic, and two of its aisles are paved with polished limestone slabs.

It also has an Ark of the Law area and an exterior apse in which were found about twenty tiny bronze and silver rolls bearing Hebrew letters. In front of the Ark there is a seven-branched menorah, above which is an Aramaic inscription which has not yet been deciphered.

Coins found on the site belong to the reigns of Justinian I and Tiberius II, thus indicating that the synagogue was built some fourteen centuries ago.

German Groups To Tour Israel

JERUSALEM—A several-week-old secret decision by the Israel Cabinet to admit organized parties of German tourists to visit Israel was revealed this week by local newspapers which reported that the first group was due to arrive in July.

When a tourist applies for a visa to enter Israel he must present a certificate issued by the Bonn Government that he had not been an active Nazi.

It is understood that the reason for the Cabinet's secrecy is not a matter of principle but of security for the visitors. Individual travelers from Germany have already entered Israel, but it is thought that large groups might receive an unfriendly reception from the Israeli people. Some estimates of the number of German tourists who could be expected to visit Israel this year range as high as 1,000.

Hints at Peace

spokesman of the league, convened a press conference to propose that Israel accept the 1947 UN partition resolution as a basis for peace talks.

Between the Lines

There again many observers dismissed the proposal. Hassouna, they said, knew Israel would never accept the 1947 resolution which the Arabs rejected and sought to nullify by armed attack.

Others, however, evaluated the Hassouna's statement somewhat differently. Made as it was in an Arab capital, they considered it primarily a message to the Arab world to face up to realities—that Israel was in the Middle East to stay.

A reporter asked Hassouna whether his proposal was not a retreat from the previous Arab stand of refusing to recognize Israel.

"It was natural that all should oppose the state of Israel in the beginning," he replied. "Now Israel exists and is a member of the UN."

The apparent change in Arab attitude is attributed to two basic causes—the humiliating trouncing Israel gave Egypt in the Suez campaign and alarm at the growing inroads Soviet Russia is making with Arab public opinion.

Russia, the Arab world is realizing, is the chief beneficiary of the Arab-Israel antagonism. The Council session yesterday provided a good example of this. Soviet Ambassador Sobolev alone agreed with the Syrian demand that the Council "condemn" the actions of Israel in the Lake Huleh demilitarized zone area.

Some Arab sources date the shift in Arab attitude back to King Saud's visit to Washington. They assert that Secretary Dulles repeatedly urged King Saud to use his influence to bring about talks with Israeli. In return Dulles was said to have promised the U.S. would back the Arabs in obtaining substantial concessions from Israel in such negotiations.

The bride was graduated cum laude from Boston University School of Public Relations and Communications, class of 1956.

Israel's Ben Gurion Prefers Informality in Manner, Dress

JERUSALEM, Israel Sector — David Ben-Gurion is possibly the only prime minister in the world who eats in the kitchen and helps his wife dry the dishes.

Even in the current Middle East crisis, Ben-Gurion sticks to the old slipper informality of manner and dress.

Of late he has taken to wearing a necktie for public appearances, but usually prefers his white open collar sport shirt. On one rare occasion when he appeared in formal diplomatic attire he apologized for putting on his "working clothes."

Ben-Gurion is at one and the same time a man of his people and their leader. As creator of the state of Israel he is regarded by many of his countrymen with a reverence reserved for the Biblical prophets he frequently quotes.

Government officials and plain people refer to him as "B. G."

Recently a policeman stationed in front of his home remonstrated with a woman for allowing her small son to play noisily nearby. "B. G. must get his rest," the policeman said.

An Israeli leader once described him as a radical who advocates all his policies with extremism. But right wing political opponents in Israel charge he is not militant enough.

His name, literally translated from Hebrew, means "Son of the Lion."

Ben-Gurion is seldom given to humor or small talk. He has few close friends although he is deeply loyal to old ones.

Cartoonists like to draw the uncombed tufts of white hair which jut from his bald head.

Ben-Gurion writes all his speeches, scribbling them on small pieces of paper in Hebrew longhand and giving them to his secretary to type.

His speeches, usually in semi-Biblical style, reflect a vast knowledge of the Old Testament, history and philosophy. His sole relaxation is reading, particularly classical Greek.

He has a good knowledge of Arabic, Greek, Hebrew, Yiddish, Polish, Russian, German, English and Spanish.

Ben-Gurion was born in Poland 70 years ago and first settled in Israel in 1906 as a youth of 20.

In 1948, while other leaders hesitated over the wisdom of trying to create a Jewish state, Ben-Gurion decided the time had come.

He was prime minister and defense minister from the founding of Israel until December, 1953, when he suffered an election reverse. He retired to a pioneer settlement in the Negev Desert to engage in farming and study. He rejoined the government as defense minister in February, 1955, and in November the same year became prime minister, too.

He is dedicated to the cause of Israel as a national Jewish homeland for "the gathering in of the exiles."

He believes the nation can receive many more than its present 1,800,000 population and can one day be made self-supporting.

He instituted a prize of 100 Israeli pounds ($56) for families of 10 children.

During a severe gasoline shortage he walked to work. He later turned in his large car for a smaller one that would consume less fuel.

He spends most of the week in Jerusalem and week-ends in Tel Aviv, where he has another home.

He usually rises at 7 A.M., listens to the radio while shaving, then reads the morning Hebrew newspapers.

Ben-Gurion arrives at his office at 9 A.M. and returns home to lunch at midday with his wife, Paula, usually in the kitchen.

Then he returns to his office to work until late evening.

His salary with cost of living allowance amounts to $633 a month.

Ben-Gurion appears fully recovered from two recent illnesses.

He was in bed with a virus infection and high fever the day his troops invaded the Sinai Peninsula. He got up to report to the Knesset (Parliament) on what he called a "glorious military operation." A few days later, in a hoarse and broken voice, he announced Israel had bowed to world pressure and would withdraw.

On that occasion he remarked "I have no time to feel ill."

Study Indicates Tight School Quota

NEW YORK—The possible return by 1965 of tightly restricted admission policies for medical schools in the United States, based on religious and racial quotas, is foreseen in a study made public here by the American Jewish Committee.

At the present time, although the "quota" system has been virtually abandoned in medical schools, discriminatory admission policies still exist particularly against Jewish students and Catholics of Italian descent. The "quota" system, devised more than 30 years ago when applications to medical schools increased sharply, allotted a quota of admissions to religious and ethnic groups in the U. S. based on each group's proportionate number to the total population.

The AJC study warned that "a likely result of the increased competition for medical school places" will be "the tightening up again of restrictive admission policies both through residential limitations and through ethnic and religious quotas." The present ratio of two applicants for each medical school opening is expected to rise to four each by 1965, from a total of 15,000 for 7,800 places to 36,000 for 8,650 openings.

The study disclosed that instead of arithmetical quotas, "personality" has become the device medical schools now resorted to in order to continue their discriminatory admission practices. Citing New York Board of Regents data, the study showed that among applicants with average grades, the ratio of rejection of Jewish students and Catholics of Italian descent was more than twice that of others.

Eyes on Moscow

The destiny of the Jews of the Soviet Union under the present Khrushchev regime is provoking a good deal of thought among responsible Jewish leaders throughout the democratic world. It is also one of the major subjects dealt with by Dr. Judd L. Teller in his latest book "The Kremlin, the Jews, and the Middle East," just published by Thomas Yoseloff.

Dr. Teller, who is the political secretary of the Jewish Agency, points out that Khrushchev is "a primitive anti-Semite of the Ukraine peasant cast". And he stresses the fact that throughout East European history, the Ukraine was the site of the most frequent and fiercest pogroms. Certain pronouncements by Khrushchev on Jews give ground to fear that the present policy of the Kremlin against Soviet Jews in the economic and cultural fields may be intensified. Dr. Teller analyzes the considerations that may determine Moscow's future policy toward Jews, inside and outside Russia, and toward the State of Israel. And he comes to the conclusion that the Soviet policy will be dominated by the answers to three questions. First, how important is the influence of the Jews abroad. Secondly, how strong are Jewry's ties with Israel. Thirdly, of what significance is Israel to the Soviet scheme in the Middle East.

The author sees great danger for Soviet Jewry if the present Moscow rulers decide that the Jews are not a serious power and could be ruthlessly suppressed without outraging public opinion. He devotes a full chapter tracing the Soviet anti-Jewish policy since 1930, which culminated in the "liquidation," since 1948, of 238 Yiddish writers, 87 Jewish painters, 99 actors and many musicians, and in the closing down of all Jewish cultural institutions. The book is written and will attract the attention of readers interested in the Soviet problem, the Middle East problem, the Jewish problem and the problem of world peace.

The Three Paths

(A SHOYUOS STORY FOR CHILDREN)

By BERYL SEGAL

Shoyuos is the holiday of sunny skies, green woods, and flowers in abundance. At Shoyuos time, spring meets summer in the meadows and they walk the earth together. And birds and butterflies and children, too, come to the woods and the fields in honor of the day.

On one Shoyuos day three boys came to the meadows to pick flowers, and they entered the woods to follow the trail among the trees. The trail was dark and cool and narrow and the three boys walked one behind the other deeper and farther into the woods.

Said one boy:

"I am ten years old and I am not afraid to go in the woods by myself."

Said the second boy:

"I am ten and a half years old, and I can go as far as I want to go all by myself."

And the third boy said:

"I will be ten years old next month, and my mother will not worry about me if I come home late."

And the three boys walked on and on along the trail deeper and farther into the woods.

Soon they came to the end of the trail at the edge of a narrow brook, in a green valley. The trail was lost in the tall grass by the shore of the brook. And when the trail emerged from the water on the other side of the brook it spread out in three paths into the valley below. One path to the right, and one path to the left, and the third path led up a hill at the end of the valley.

The three boys were tired and hungry after the long walk, and they sat down on the soft grassy ground, and they leaned against three tall trees, and they ate of the food which their mothers gave them for the Shoyuos walk. All was quiet by the brook. Only the rustling of the leaves on the top of the trees, and the buzzing of bees shimmering in the sun, and the gurgling of the water spilling over a fallen tree, and nothing more was heard in the woods and in the valley.

Woods and brook and valley and three little boys dreaming in the shade of three tall trees.

Then said the ten-year-old boy:

"I had a dream, and in my dream I heard a small thin voice which said:

"If you take to the path on the right you will come to a spring of cool water at the foot of the hill. And anyone who drinks of the waters of the spring looks up and, behold, he is the fairest in the land."

And the boy said:

"Come, let us cross the brook and go on the path to the right and drink the waters of the spring that we may be the fairest in the land."

Then the boy who will soon be ten years old woke up and he said:

"I had a dream and in my dream I heard a tiny bell tinkling in my ears and this is what the bell said:

"If you choose the path on the left you will come to a cave in the middle of the hill. And any one who enters the cave will find treasures of gold and silver, and he may take of the treasure as his heart desires, until he is the richest in the land."

And the boy said:

"Come, let us go on the path to the left and we will enter the cave and take all the gold and silver that we may be the richest in the land."

Then the boy who was ten and a half years old rubbed his eyes and he looked to the hill ahead at the end of the valley, and he said:

"I had a dream, and in my dream I heard a soft still song, and this is what the song said to me:

"If you go on the path across the valley you will reach the top of the hill. And he who reaches the top of the hill can see the lands to the East, and the oceans to the West, and the mountains to the North, and the desert sands to the South. And all the world opens before him like a huge book, until he is the wisest in the land."

And the boy said:

"Come, let us go up to the top of the hill and see the lands to the East, and the oceans to the West, and the mountains and the desert sands, that we may be the wisest in the land."

But the silence in the woods grew thicker and darker, for the sun was setting, and all the birds returned to their nests, and the bees were clinging to the bark of the trees, and the boys, too, hastened to the trail out of the woods, and into the meadow, and to their mother's home.

And whichever path the three boys took no one will ever know. But you know which path you would choose, don't you?

Which one would it be?

Tourney Time

Sign Here for Tourney

As reported last week, it is pretty well established that the Herald's golf tourney this year will be a one day medal affair. It will be held on Sunday, June 30, very likely at Louisquisset.

There will be awards for four divisions, as well as side events such as low gross (first and second), low net (ditto), longest drive on one hole, and drive closest to the pin on another. Details now are being worked out.

Golfers are invited to fill in and return the coupon on page 8, or otherwise communicate their intention to play. Names of committee members and other information next week.

Almost Unanimous

Never before has there been such unanimity of opinion among fans and writers as now exists in the case of the public vs Manager Mike Higgins. No team, especially this year's Red Sox, can afford the luxury of a solid .300 hitter warming the bench, yet that is Billy Goodman's status. And therein lies the rub.

The public remembers that Billy played his best ball as a first baseman. And how could you ever forget his persistent bat? Yet Goodman rides the bench, save for an infrequent pinch hitting effort. Mickey Vernon, who should be the team's ace pinch hitter, plays first base.

Last winter, in a series analyzing the Red Sox, this column urged that Goodman be traded while he was still sought-after, while he could bring something of definite value in return. If the Sox could not enjoy his talents any better than they had the last couple of years, I said, they would be better off trading him.

Goodman was not shipped away. Now he rides the bench. But after a season like this one, his value as a ball player will drop sharply, and Boston will get little or nothing in return for him when it does attempt a deal. This shapes up as a major tragedy. Unless, of course, a deal involving Billy is in the works now, before the trading deadline.

Everywhere I go, everyone I talk to agrees that Billy should be at first base. If only Stubborn Mike Higgins agreed, it would be unanimous. Instead, a wonderful ball player is rusting, his talents ignored, and his potential contribution to his club—directly or indirectly—is being wasted.

It has gotten so bad, this disgruntled criticism of Manager Higgins, that some diehard Yankee haters are openly admitting that the Sox would be much better off with "lucky" Casey Stengel at the helm. Casey, it is agreed, would utilize his bench to its maximum ability. He certainly would not permit such talent to go to pot.

Big League or Bust

The man who might possibly become the first Jewish manager in the majors is holding his own in his first season of Triple A ball. Andy Cohen, ex-Giants second baseman, has his Indianapolis Indians in the first division of the American Association, not far off the pace. The column will report on him from time to time.

Meanwhile, Jewish big leaguers are in short supply. With Al Rosen gone, the only important name around is Southpaw Sandy Koufax, who has come into his own as a solid hurler with the defending champion Dodgers. The American League has Catcher Joe Ginsberg of Baltimore.

At last reports, Koufax ranked fourth among National League pitchers with a sparkling 2.19 earned run average. And he is the only man in his league who has struck out more men than his total number of innings pitched. In 37 innings, Sandy had 44 strikeouts. Ginsberg, known as Joe although his real name is Myron, was batting at .255.

With baseball offering so much to its players these days, what with good pay and conditions, financial rewards away from the field, and a fabulous pension plan, it is surprising to find fewer and fewer Jewish boys attempting to make the grade.

Even the Landlord Moved
In the midst of all the confusion involving National League baseball in New York and Brooklyn, it may be surprising to some to note that neither of the metropolitan clubs owns its own ball park. Yankee Stadium belongs to the Knights of Columbus, who purchased it from Arnold Johnson, owner of the Kansas City A's. The Stoneham family never did own the historic Polo Grounds; while Eb-bets Field was sold, a few years ago to a Jewish real estate operator named Marvin Kratter.

Kratter is Brooklyn all the way, as much so as the Dodgers, yet in his own actions he may have preceded the team out of

'Naughty Marietta' To Start Season

Mr. Rounseville and Miss Scott will be playing the roles which Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald popularized 20 years ago in their movie version of the light opera classic. The Three Paths

(A SHOVIOS STORY FOR CHILDREN)

By BERYL SEGAL

Shovuos is the holiday of sunny skies, green woods, and flowers in abundance. At Shovuos time, spring meets summer in the meadows and they walk the earth together. And birds and butterflies and children, too, come to the woods and the fields in honor of the day.

On one Shovuos day three boys came to the meadows to pick flowers, and they entered the woods to follow the trail among the trees. The trail was dark and cool and narrow and the three boys walked one behind the other deeper and farther into the woods.

Said one boy:

"I am ten years old and I am not afraid to go in the woods by myself."

Said the second boy:

"I am ten and a half years old, and I can go as far as I want to go all by myself."

And the third boy said:

"I will be ten years old next month, and my mother will not worry about me if I come home late."

And the three boys walked on and on along the trail deeper and farther into the woods.

Soon they came to the end of the trail at the edge of a narrow brook, in a green valley. The trail was lost in the tall grass by the shore of the brook. And when the trail emerged from the water on the other side of the brook it spread out in three paths into the valley below. One path to the right, and one path to the left, and the third path led up a hill at the end of the valley.

The three boys were tired and hungry after the long walk, and they sat down on the soft grassy ground, and they leaned against three tall trees, and they ate of the food which their mothers gave them for the Shovuos walk. All was quiet by the brook. Only the rustling of the leaves on the top of the trees, and the buzzing of bees shimmering in the sun, and the gurgling of the water spilling over a fallen tree, and nothing more was heard in the woods and in the valley.

Woods and brook and valley and three little boys dreaming in the shade of three tall trees.

Then said the ten-year-old boy:

"I had a dream, and in my dream I heard a small thin voice which said:

"If you take to the path on the right you will come to a spring of cool water at the foot of the hill. And anyone who drinks of the waters of the spring looks up and, behold, he is the fairest in the land."

And the boy said:

"Come, let us cross the brook and go on the path to the right and drink the waters of the spring that we may be the fairest in the land."

Then the boy who will soon be ten years old woke up and he said:

"I had a dream and in my dream I heard a tiny bell tinkling in my ears and this is what the bell said:

"If you choose the path on the left you will come to a cave in the middle of the hill. And any one who enters the cave will find treasures of gold and silver, and he may take of the treasure as his heart desires, until he is the richest in the land."

And the boy said:

"Come, let us go on the path to the left and we will enter the cave and take all the gold and silver that we may be the richest in the land."

Then the boy who was ten and a half years old rubbed his eyes and he looked to the hill ahead at the end of the valley, and he said:

"I had a dream, and in my dream I heard a soft still song, and this is what the song said to me:

"If you go on the path across the valley you will reach the top of the hill. And he who reaches the top of the hill can see the lands to the East, and the oceans to the West, and the mountains to the North, and the desert sands to the South. And all the world opens before him like a huge book, until he is the wisest in the land."

And the boy said:

"Come, let us go up to the top of the hill and see the lands to the East, and the oceans on the West, and the mountains and the desert sands, that we may be the wisest in the land."

But the silence in the woods grew thicker and darker, for the sun was setting, and all the birds returned to their nests, and the bees were clinging to the bark of the trees, and the boys, too, hastened to the trail out of the woods, and into the meadow, and to their mother's home.

And whichever path the three boys took no one will ever know. But you know which path you would choose, don't you?

Which one would it be?
