Egypt Defies U.S. Stand On Freedom of Waterways

WASHINGTON — Egypt this week defied the stand taken by the United States last week that the Gulf of Aqaba is an international waterway and that Israeli shipping must not be molested there or in the Suez Canal. In a broadcast from Cairo Aly Sabri, Col. Nasser's chief political aide, challenged the U. S. view and said: "If Israeli ships try to force their way through the Suez Canal or the Gulf of Aqaba, we will prevent them. If Israel attempts to obtain foreign assistance in such a move, the outcome will be the same as the outcome of the tripartite invasion."

The attitude of the U. S. Government with regard to Israel's right to use the Gulf of Aqaba and the Suez Canal was made known by the State Department in a note to 11 Arab nations. The note rejected the Arab contention that Egypt is within its rights to bar Israeli shipping from the Aqaba and Suez waterways. It was a reply to a demarche delivered by diplomats of the 11 countries to Secretary of State Dulles on May 24.

The United States reply supported Israel's rights to passage through the Suez Canal and said this country does not believe Egypt has any rightful claim to barring Israeli shipping under a "self-defense" provision of Article 51 of the United Nations Charter which Egypt has been citing.

On the Aqaba matter, the U. S. note also supported Israel and reiterated that American ships would use the waterway in the course of normal commerce and join with others to secure general recognition of this right. The note was addressed to Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Syria, Tunisia and Yemen. It was delivered through diplomatic channels.

The United States called for solution of differences in accordance with the spirit of the United Nations and said this country would take into account any future decision by the International Court of Justice regarding the Aqaba Gulf. The note said the United States "supports the continued stationing of the United Nations Emergency Force at the Straits of Tiran believing that the force contributes importantly to peace in the area."

The United States called attention to the Charter of the United Nations which speaks of settlement of disputes "in conformity with the principles of justice and international law."

Women's Division To Hold Meeting

Peretz Halpern, commentator on international affairs and world traveler who has recently returned from an extensive tour of Jewish communities in all parts of the world, will be guest speaker at the first planning meeting of the General Jewish Committee Women's Division, 1957 campaign. The meeting will be held next Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the home of Mrs. David Meyers, campaign chairman, at 266 Slater Avenue.

Mr. Halpern was traveling in Pakistan and Iran when the Egyptian-Israeli hostilities broke out in 1956. He went to Israel and met with top government and military officials and toured the Sinai battle area as a guest of the Israeli army.

Initial plans will be made at this meeting for the forthcoming fund-raising drive. All officers and members of the board of directors of the Women's Division will attend this meeting. In addition to the presidents of the organizations, each group has also been invited to send a representative. There will be no solicitation of funds.

Must Perpetuate Judaism As Force To Combat Uniformity

PHILADELPHIA — Judaism as "a force combatting uniformity" must be perpetuated for its strengthening impact on mankind, B'nai B'rith president Philip M. Klutznick told a graduating class of Hebrew teachers at Gratz College.

Mr. Klutznick cited the present challenge by "our era of great conformity." He stressed that "in the stiff-neck quality that has always permeated Judaism, there is hope for others to combat conformity.

"As Jews we are a tiny minority professing a faith which appears almost eccentric to our neighbors," he said. "But this is our strength — and this is the contribution we make to the world." He addressed the 57th commencement exercises of the pioneer institution in the United States training teachers for Jewish religious schools.

Mr. Klutznick warned that laymen must undertake greater roles in "shoring up and improving" our systems of Jewish education. Weaknesses in Jewish education in America today, he said, reflect a low level of aspiration and Jewish living prevalent in the American Jewish community. It reflects for laymen, he said, "our failure to read Jewish books and periodicals, our indifference to Jewish art, our lack of sensitivity to religious values."

Until more laymen emerge "who are versed in Jewish lore, more positively Jewish in their actions, more deeply concerned with the problems of our people," he added, the need for more funds and teachers will not be forthcoming for Jewish education.

Pope Informs AJC Leaders That Anti-Semitism Must Go

ROME — An American Jewish Committee delegation was enroute to Tunisia this week after visiting Pope Pius XII in the first audience of the Pontiff with a Jewish group during which the Pope condemned racial discrimination and persecution of Jews.

The Pope told the group he was with them in their fight for the rights of men everywhere.

In a prepared statement, Pope Pius declared his solidarity with the AJ Committee fight. In appealing to all governments to aid refugees, the Pontiff singled out anti-Semitism for condemnation. He thanked Irving M. Engel,

Hahn Bequest to Speed New Construction at Miriam Hospital

Plans for the expansion of the Miriam Hospital—its physical properties and facilities—were made known this week in the wake of the $150,000 bequest received on July 5 from the estate of the late Judge J. Jerome Hahn. Officials of the hospital revealed that a building program has long been contemplated by the Board of Trustees, and that the Judge Hahn bequest will be used, in accordance with the late jurist's will, for enlargement and improvement of the hospital's facilities. It was indicated that this program includes new construction.

Toward that end, it was announced that the Greater Miriam Hospital Planning and Development Committee has such a plan under advisement, and that this group now is studying the needs of the hospital with regard to building.

Miriam Hospital also will establish and maintain an appropriate memorial to Katherine M. Hahn, late wife of Judge Hahn.

Presentation of the bequest took place last Friday in the chambers of Superior Court Judge Philip C. Joslin, a trustee of the Hahn estate. Judge Joslin gave a check, totaling $150,683.33, to Alexander Rumpfer, president and Dr. I. Herbert Scheffer, executive director, of Miriam Hospital.

Israeli Arabs Hopeful of Talks

TEL AVIV — Israel's 200,000 Arabs, kept under strict observation since the creation of the state nine years ago, today welcomed reports that a solution to their problem may be found.

Their hopes were raised in the wake of an Israeli Foreign Ministry statement yesterday which said that Israeli representatives had been in contact with Palestine Arab refugee organizations in Rome.

Among the subjects said to have been discussed was a plan to resettle the nation's Arab population in a North African Arab country in need of manpower.

The project is said to have received a promise of financial support from the U. S.

The problem of what to do with the Arab population of Israel has plagued the government ever since the fighting between the Arabs and Jews ended. Almost 1,000,000 Arabs fled the newly created country and settled in neighboring Arab states.

Those who remained were settled in three military government districts along the Israeli-Arab borders. They were not allowed to leave their areas without special permits and their young men were not required to serve in the Israeli Army.

Mrs. Julius Irving

Appoint Mrs. Irving As Vice-Chairman

Mrs. Julius Irving has been appointed to the post of vice-chairman of the Initial Gifts of the Women's Division of the General Jewish Committee's 1957 campaign.

Mrs. Irving's appointment was announced today by Mrs. Norman M. Fain, Initial Gifts chairman. This position was newly established because of the importance this year of the Initial Gifts phase of the annual fund-raising drive.

An active worker and member of Hadassah, Mrs. Irving was one of the organizers of numerous Hadassah chapters in Rhode Island and nearby Massachusetts cities and towns. She also has been active in the Council of Jewish Women and at present is co-chairman of Life Members of the Women's Division of Brandeis University.

Mrs. Irving said she was extremely happy and honored to be chosen to serve as vice chairman of Initial Gifts and was looking forward to working in behalf of the numerous worthy causes that benefit from the annual General Jewish Committee campaign.

To Allow Pilgrims To Proceed To Mecca

JERUSALEM — The rulers of Jordan and Saudi Arabia "know full well that Israel will permit pilgrims to Mecca to proceed unmolested," an Israel Foreign Ministry spokesman said this week in comment on declarations by King Hussein of Jordan and King Saud of Saudi Arabia ordering their subjects not to use the Gulf of Aqaba route to Mecca. The spokesman charged that the monarchs' declarations were motivated by "internal considerations." The spokesman pledged that any Arab citizen of Israel who wished to make the pilgrimage to the Moslem Holy City would receive immediate permission. He noted, however, that Israeli Arabs had been denied transit visas by the Arab states despite repeated requests.

The radio station also claimed that Nasser is again purging suspected members of the Moslem Brotherhood.

'JACS' Program Begins Monday

The Jewish Community Center will begin its 1957-1958 Junior Aides' Training Program at the Main Center Building this Monday with a near-capacity enrollment.

The leadership training and recreation program for boys and girls 14 to 16 years old, the Center's JACS program, has attracted national attention. The season's schedule includes a five-week combined education-recreation program during the summer months, to be followed by a monthly workshop series in the early Fall and a year-round volunteer service program.

Teen agers enrolled in the program will attend workshops, classes and discussion programs dealing with the following subjects: Orientation to the Jewish Community Center and social group work, role of the group leader, group mechanics, problem children, health and safety practices, crafts, music, games, dramatics, nature lore, pioneering, campcraft and many others.

Swimming, sports, sightseeing trips, horseback riding, hikes and picnic outings, theatre parties, sleepouts and other activities are included both as learning experiences and "pure fun" for JAC trainees. In addition, sessions designed to promote social growth and personal development and a keen sense of Jewish identification are included in the five-week full time program.

Trainees who complete the training program and who amass a total of 100 volunteer service hours during the coming season will graduate at ceremonies in June, 1958 and become eligible to apply for Counselor-in-Training positions at Camp Centerland, where their training experiences are continued for another summer.

The program will be conducted by Arthur Eisenstein, JCC assistant director, Sol Kutner, JCC branch director, and Mrs. Leo Borenstein. Others whose services will be included in the program are Nathan Sklar, executive director of the Jewish Family and Children's Service, Alfred Hawkes, field representative for the Rhode Island chapter of the National Audubon Society, Dr. Herman Marks, pediatrician, Matthew Millman, director of Camp Centerland, Leonard Katowitz, New England field secretary for the National Jewish Welfare Board and Miss Beatrice Parks and Prof. Louis Lowy of the Boston University School of Social Work.

GREENFIELD PARK, N. Y.—Dr. Samuel Kahane, director of the Ministry of Religion in Israel, told the National Council of Young Israel "that Israel's religious denominations enjoy complete freedom of religion."

Recognizes Only Orthodox Judaism

NEW YORK—The Agudath Israel of America concluded its three-day convention at Greenfield Park with a proclamation to American Jewry rejecting any recognition of Reform Judaism and Conservative Judaism.

"Three wings of Judaism is baneful to the Torah view," the proclamation stated. "There can only be one concept of Judaism: that which is based upon total subjugation to Torah law," it emphasized.

Resolutions adopted at the convention expressed "solidarity with the entire Jewish people in deep concern for the security and stabilization of Israel." At the same time they called for an expansion of the Agudist housing projects in Israel for immigration and support of the independent Agudist school network there.

TEL AVIV—Many children and teen-agers brought to Israel recently, have developed deep personal problems as a result of the sudden awareness that they are Jews, Moshe Kol, head of the Youth Aliyah movement reported here. Mr. Koll declared that some of the youngsters who did not know they were Jews, until brought to Israel by the child rescue movement suffered from psychological shock. For those who cannot cope with this shock, the Youth Aliyah leaders continued, individualized attention is provided in Youth Aliyah centers.

Refer Resolution To Committee

WASHINGTON—President Eisenhower would be called upon to terminate within a year any existing agreement with a foreign nation which discriminates against U. S. citizens on a religious basis, under a proposed House resolution which has been referred to the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The measure is pending before the committee. It may be assigned to a subcommittee for hearings. The resolution would have the President proclaim to all nations that the U. S. regards religious discrimination against American citizens incompatible with relations that should exist among friendly nations. The target of the resolution is the barring by Saudi Arabia of U. S. Air Force personnel of Jewish faith from the Dhahran air base.

Identified as House Concurrent Resolution 211, it was introduced by Rep. Henry S. Reuss, Wisconsin Democrat. Rep. Reuss said the House Foreign Affairs Committee should act promptly "so that the sense of Congress may be unequivocally expressed in protest against our government's failure to defend the rights of its citizens." He referred to Saudi Arabian anti-Jewish measures and said: "This shocking discrimination against U. S. citizens has existed since 1951, and despite the pious words of the State Department, no effective protest was made even this year when our air base agreement was renewed."

School To Hold Parents' Open House

The Jewish Community Center Nursery School will conduct a parents' "Open House" program at the main Center building this afternoon, July 12, beginning at 2:00 o'clock, it was announced by Mrs. Harold D. Fine, chairman of the Center's Nursery School committee.

Mrs. Augusta Lamont, director of the Center's summer nursery school program, announced that admission to the program would be open to parents of children enrolled in the summer program and parents whose children are already listed for the school's Fall semester.

The afternoon's program will include a visit to the school from 2:00 to 3:00 P.M., to observe school activities and a demonstration of children's work, followed by a coffee hour for parents at 3:30 P.M.

Hahn Bequest

the substantial gift, Mr. Rumpler, speaking for the trustees, issued the reminder that this money is earmarked specifically for construction and enlargement purposes, and that it does not diminish the Hospital's constant need for further contributions.

He pointed to the hospital's substantial free work, and its education and research programs, as examples of the projects now in effect, that require a ready flow of funds.

"We are looking to the Community for continued support as in the past," Mr. Rumpler stated. "We still need funds to carry on the various projects that have been instituted in the hospital during the last few years, and to meet the operating deficits that still will be with us."

Miriam Hospital, he asserted, has no other sources of income but the community.

Mr. Rumpler added the hope that the Hahn bequest will encourage substantial giving by other individuals and estates.

Soon after The Providence Institution for Savings opened in 1819, it came to be known popularly as "The Old Stone Bank". The building's imposing architecture made this choice of name a logical one. Time has proven it an appropriate name as well.

Since 1819, The Old Stone Bank has maintained an uninterrupted record of consecutive dividend payments. No depositor has ever lost a cent deposited in The Old Stone Bank.

Such stability is the result of many built-in banking safety measures. Because The Old Stone Bank is a Mutual Savings Bank, it is owned by its depositors and operated for their benefit.

We have never lost sight of this fact.

Mrs. Louis Cokin

Name Mrs. Cokin Division Chairman

Mrs. Louis Cokin has been named chairman of the Women's Division of the Blackstone Valley United Jewish Appeal Campaign, it was announced by Israel Resnick, general chairman of the drive.

Blackstone Valley has pledged to raise its share of the United Jewish Appeal's Emergency Fund over and above its share in the regular UJA Campaign in 1957.

Sums sought for the Emergency Rescue Fund will go to save at least 100,000 Jews fleeing danger in Egypt, countries of Eastern Europe and North Africa. Funds raised in the regular campaign will go for the welfare and rehabilitation needs of hundreds of thousands distressed men, women and children in Israel and other countries.

A leading figure in many civic and philanthropic activities, Mrs. Cokin has been active in all UJA Campaigns, has served as president of Hadassah for two years, regional vice-president of Hadassah for three years and is now serving on the executive boards of the Women's Division of Brandeis University and Miriam Hospital.

General Zionists Postpone Merger

TEL AVIV—After a sharp internal fight, the centrist General Zionists closed its annual convention recently with a decision to put off indefinitely the issue of merger with the right wing Herut party. The merger issue was disposed of by a secret ballot vote to turn the problem over to a special committee which suggested that the party's "new executive could study the possibilities and conditions for such merger."

Another dispute, this one involving organizational differences between two factions, was settled by a compromise. The groups were the Popular faction, headed by Joseph Saphir and Joseph Serlin, which had a heavy majority in the convention of 600 delegates, and the Union faction, headed by Peretz Bernstein and Israel Rokach.

The compromise substituted for the single party chairmanship a chairman and an executive chairman. The compromise, however, gave veto power to the chairman. A third group, the Union faction, rejected the compromise because the convention had by-passed a vote on merger with Herut, the primary objective of the Union faction. Mr. Bernstein was elected chairman and Mr. Saphir was named chairman of the executive.

The delegates approved a resolution to contact all elements favoring national centralization and free initiative for Israel's economic life with the goal of coordinating such elements. Another resolution criticized Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion for "belittling" Zionist organizations. The delegates also urged lower taxation among a number of economic demands.

JACOBS FAMILY CIRCLE

The Jacobs Family Circle held its annual picnic on June 30 at Korman's poultry farm in North Attleboro, Mass. Guests were present from Vermont, New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island. Barney Kaplan was in charge of the affair.

Dulles Denial

Secretary of State Dulles' rapid fire denial last week of this nation's alleged role in settling the Arab refugee problem would have been humorous were it not so tragic.

In his sharp refutation of a rumor that Uncle Sam had begun talks with friendly governments on the feasibility of a new international effort to solve the refugee dilemma, Mr. Dulles struck a blow at "Egyptian propaganda," which seems to preclude such a possibility at this time.

The propaganda alleges that the United States, in collusion with Israel and friendly Arab nations is plotting a settlement at the expense of the refugees.

The rapid fire denial of the allegation, itself serves two propagandistic aims:

1. It assures pro-Israeli forces everywhere but where it counts—in Israel—that the sinister international aims of the Egyptian government do not go unrecognized;
2. It allays the general fear that, when the chips are down, Arab considerations will be given top priority—and at the expense of Israel if necessary.

But none of these aims takes into consideration the plight of the Arab refugees, themselves. Mr. Dulles' attitude was in reality, no different from that of the Arab leaders', who use the refugee situation to further their political ends. For these reasons, it could hardly allay the fears of Israel and her supporters, who see in this divisiveness further evidence of chicanery in Mr. Dulles' foreign diplomacy.

Bernstein, Gershwin Shared Compelling Creative Drives

A few months ago Times Magazine published an excellent comprehensive profile on Leonard Bernstein. Since then, Bernstein has won an "Emmy" for the greatest musical contribution of the year in television.

Time stated that the elder Bernstein didn't want his son to be a "klezmer," a piano player living from one free meal to the next. It made no mention of the fact that Sam Bernstein had built a prosperous beauty shop supply business with the proud resolve of seeing his son take over one day and carry his accomplishment further.

His father was so vigorous in his disapproval that his mother secretly paid for his piano lessons out of her weekly grocery money allowance. Living in a summer-house in the resort town of Sharon, Mass., Leonard even practiced away from home. He monopolized the piano for three or four hours a day at the local hotel called Singer's Inn.

Leonard's father treated his son's rebellion in a surprising fashion, when he found out. He became his first sponsor. He bought time on a local radio station in Boston to advertise his products. Piano entertainment on the program was provided by Leonard, then in his teens.

Sam was completely won over a short time later when he took his wife and son on a cruise. The ship's pianist fell ill and was unable to make the voyage. When Lenny told his father that the job was offered to him, Sam said, "You mean they're going to pay you for it?" His son could play the piano without being a mere "klezmer;" he would be paid for it. Samuel Bernstein withdrew all objections and Leonard was lost to the beauty supply business.

There is much similarity between him and Gershwin, whom Bernstein idolized as a young man. It is interesting that both shared not only compelling creative drives, but each had multiple talents. As a further outlet for his artistic energy Gershwin painted — Bernstein wants to write books and poetry. Like Gershwin, Bernstein excels as a pianist as well as composer. Gershwin once stated that he had no time for failure—he felt there was little enough time for him to accomplish his ambitions. Bernstein states that time is his only enemy.

There is, however, a great deal of contrast in the contributions of both these men. Their respective origins may be the strongest tributary factors. Gershwin spent his formative years in the slums, while Bernstein grew up in a prosperous middle class environment. Perhaps the type of music each has written festered in the early embryos of each. Gershwin's music is melodic, sad, almost melancholy—he needed only a mood to envelop him in order to produce his finest strains. Bernstein, on the other hand, is the technician who composes on a large canvas using broad sweeping strokes. He is, with equal ease, a dissonant jazz and a melodic classical composer. His critics believe that his happiness has made him too facile. Perhaps they would prescribe the youthful suffering that was Gershwin's, for him. It is too late for that, however.

People who knew him as a youth in Boston remember a magnetism about him that spelled genius. He was a young man to admire and respect. But because he has little time for them now, many believe he has grown arrogant and success-conscious. Actually, he was always success-conscious, but, in fairness to Bernstein, he has little time for even his present friends—for, in his own words, "time is my enemy."

He has been criticized for his violent gyrations while conducting an orchestra. He defends himself by saying that he feels music so keenly that he is not conscious of what he is doing with his body as a conductor. His innate extrovertism and desire for center stage extends beyond his music.

Leonard Bernstein is an intellectual Jew, as well as an emotional one. His feelings for Israel probably grew out of his father's Zionism. No matter how busy his schedule, periodically he expects to return to Israel to repeat his concerts that have been so successful in a land where he has almost become a musical messiah.

The late Serge Koussevitsky, overly-sensitive about his own struggle against anti-Semitism, once suggested that Bernstein change his name. Bernstein refused. His Jewishness is a part of him in much the same fashion as his creative energy, his musical talent or his physical features. The name is part of the person, and the person has made the name Leonard Bernstein, a man to be remembered.

What Most People Need Least — 'A Hole In The Head'

It has been clearly established through the land that the thing most people need least nowadays is a hole in the head.

Breathes there a man who has not said, "I need it like I need a hole in the head"?

Al Borenstein is not one to fly in the face of such an obvious expression of public opinion. So, for some two years, he felt impelled to take people at their word.

He was able thus to dissuade himself from proceeding with his idea for "The Arrow." This, as he conceived it, was a device which could be attached to the human head, with point protruding from one side and tail from the other, in such a way as to make it appear that the wearer had been skewered by an archer.

The arrow was, of course, just one of a million ideas which are constantly haunting Borenstein's imagination inasmuch as he is in the business of creating and producing novelties, not to mention gimmicks and gadgets, which is a business where imagination is the essence of economic survival.

Borenstein and his attractive brunette wife, Harriet, are consequently almost totally preoccupied with the prospects of one or another of his notions.

What bothered him was that he could not disassociate the arrow from the hole in the head, which is understandable, when you stop to think of it.

It seems to his wife that he always, sooner or later, would shrug the whole thing off by saying, "Who needs it?"

Talk would then turn to more pleasant things.

Among the pleasant things in the life of Borenstein, who is a tall, well-fed man in his early 30s, is his luminescent light-pull, which is shaped like a lamp.

This sold more than 7,000,000 copies.

Another even more pleasant thing is "Digit," a sliding square puzzle.

This has sold 15,000,000. One of the mysteries of his life was why a 7-square puzzle he developed did not sell, whereas a 15-square puzzle like "Digit" sold like crazy.

This, both Borenstein and his wife could afford to laugh off.

When they would get through laughing, however, the arrow idea would still be there.

"Nothing," said Borenstein, "is new, it seems. The arrow must be 40 years old, at least. The magicians used to employ the same device to provide the illusion of a knife piercing an assistant. The silent movies used to use the same thing in Westerns to show cowboys shot with arrows."

About six months ago, he got to thinking that the arrow might hold some small appeal for children playing cowboys and Indians. Not much appeal, you understand, but some.

"So we designed a wire head-piece connecting the two plastic pieces of the arrow," said Borenstein, "and put it into production."

He made his first big sale by simply wearing the arrow into the office of a big downtown distributor. It created an immediate sensation.

After the initial distribution, the orders started pouring in from all over the country. One of the first was for thousands from a convention of radio and TV people in Chicago. Other conventions followed suit.

Borenstein and his wife got up one morning recently and saw a TV star wearing one of the arrows for laughs on his nationally telecast program.

Pictures in a national magazine showed two women wearing arrows at the Oklahoma semi-centennial.

Orders are coming in now from Hawaii and as far abroad as Lebanon.

There is, as a result, a night shift as well as a day shift at Borenstein's plant in Forest Hills, which is called the Roalex Co. Sales are already well into the second million.

Borenstein, however, is still firmly convinced that what most people need least is a hole in the head.

"Unless you dramatize it," he said.

Not To Establish Formal Relations With Israel

BONN—A spokesman for the West German Foreign Office, asked about a comment by Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion that he favored early establishment of diplomatic relations, said, "it would seem the time has not yet come to establish normal relations with Israel."

It appeared the Bonn spokesman was referring only to the present time, however, and probably to the period between now and the September national election. The spokesman cited specifically the recent press conference statement of Foreign Minister Heinrich von Brentano that "relations between the federal republic and Israel are so unclouded, clearcut and good that once both parties agree the time has come to establish normal relations, nothing but direct talks will be needed."

Israel maintains a purchasing mission in Cologne but the Bonn Government is not represented in Israel.

In Frankfurt, former Nazi victims who worked as slave laborers in the German IG-Farben factories were advised through the Official Gazette that they can register their claims against the German trust within a period of six months. The announcement in the official organ of the Bonn Government constitutes another step toward implementation of the $7,000,000 settlement between the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany and the IG-Farben chemical corporation.

One-time inmates of the Auschwitz concentration and extermination camp who were employed in the IG-Farben synthetic rubber factory at Buna-Monowitz or in other nearby IG-Farben plants at Fuerstengrube, Heydebreck and Janina should either themselves or through an attorney submit the necessary data to the IG-Farben "Gläubiger-meldestelle" (creditors' registry office) at 55 Bockenheimer Landstrasse in Frankfurt, West Germany. Where applications have already been entered in the past, they need not be repeated.

Plans of the Jewish Convalescent Home of Rhode Island to conduct a building fund campaign were announced by Mrs. Elizabeth Spivak, president.

The buildings of what had formerly been the Jewish Orphanage on Summit Avenue would fit into plans for the new Miriam Hospital, the building committee headed by Samuel Shore, together with Dr. Charles Willinsky, advisor to the committee, agreed following an inspection.

Sweating It Out

Hot weather item for a guy in hot water: Fred Haney, manager of the Milwaukee Braves, walked out to the mound to remove a pitcher. Said pitcher, like others of his craft who have been getting hit solidly, asked to be permitted to remain in the game.

"Let me stay in," he urged. "I'm just starting to get warm." Retorted the manager: "You can do it faster under the shower. We've got plenty of hot water there."

Sweating It Out

On more than one occasion, Al Sydney of Cranston has told me that "it takes guts to be a Red Sox fan." I conceded that he had a point there, but not until now have I properly appreciated what he meant.

This year, this column has become a Red Sox fan. This may come as shocking news to some, so that strange remark needs amplification. I'm a Red Sox fan to the extent that in April I loudly and publicly picked the Bosox to finish second in the American League; and I'm now trying awfully hard to root them up there.

Right now it looks like a long and hard pull, and after sweating through a large number of games, I can see why there is so much gnashing of teeth and gums, so much hair pulling (among the men who have hair), so many beaten countenances, among Red Sox fans. Let's face it, men, things are really rough!

At times during the first half of the campaign I found myself wondering, as the Sox wallowed in the mire and threatened to fall apart at the seams, what in the world I saw in them anyway. Yet, what I considered to be a most careful appraisal of the clubs as the season started led me to pick the men of Higgins. So—come on, you Bosox! Let's go!

Right now, as the second half gets under way, Boston is riding reasonably high in the water in third place. But Chicago and its lead are such a long way off! Why, the White Sox are still actually figuring they have a chance for a pennant. That attitude will have to change. Not until they concede to the Yanks and start worrying instead about Boston can the darker Sox begin to creep toward the runnerup spot.

But the Red Sox fans have changed, too. In April, the fans' opinion of their stellar club was, to paraphrase Yogi Berra's 1957 classic: "Nobody's going noplac." Translated, that means that nobody figured the Sox would prosper at all this year. The experts had Boston consigned to fifth place, and Detroit was supposed to battle the Yankees for the pennant, while Cleveland and Chicago fought it out for the bottom of the first division.

To that extent, this column is well up on the fans in the forecasting department—to date, at least. For my forecast of second place was far more appropriate than the public's general opinion of the team's merits. And, too, second place is closer to their current spot in third place than fifth place is.

To tie it up more neatly, I foresaw the Red Sox as an interesting, competent, solid first division club. Few others thought likewise. Now, those same fans are talking a different fight. They worry about how many games out of first place they are, rather than about whether they can make the first division.

What I'm proudest of, though, is what I wrote about the famed (or infamous) infield that smelled up the Fenway environs so badly in recent years. Take a listen at the following, from the April 19 column.

"I see Red Sox as much improved. Last spring Sox were overrated because of strong 1955 performance; this year underrated off last year's miserable showing. Infield much improved. Klaus at short adds indefinable spirit, Malzone at third should make it, Mauch better than Goodman . . . ."

They laughed when I said that, really they did; but did you know that the Red Sox were leading the league in double plays last week? And did you notice, too, that the most recent Bosox spurt came, not when Malzone started slugging, but when Billy Klaus started hitting and fielding. Billy picked up the entire club, as he did two years ago.

So, whether the Sox climb higher than third, I claim my prediction was not at all bad—not as of July 12, anyhow. To that extent my faith has been justified. But oh man, how you suffer rooting for that club!

Roster Change

You may not have noticed it during the excitement of the early days of July, but one of the last of the Jewish ball players has left the majors. Saul Rogovin, the pitcher who saw service in both leagues, and who at times seemed headed for a spectacularly successful career, was assigned to Miami of the International League on July 1 by the Phillies.

Saul, who gained the nickname of "Sleepy" because of a freakish physical condition that causes him to drowse when he is sitting for a long time, such as in a dugout or bullpen during a three hour game, did little chucking this year. He went to the mound in relief four times for a total of eight innings, and gave up eight runs. Rather ungood.

But Rogovin, without alibiing his poor performance, has a reasonable explanation—simply that "I didn't get a chance to pitch".

"I don't blame the Phillies," the right hander said when apprised of his demotion. "They have a bunch of promising kids who throw hard, but I never got a real chance and when I did relieve it was usually after two or three weeks of not pitching."

So now Rogovin is with Miami. Should he get steady work for his new club, he could still come back to the big time as a fireman. He is 33 years old, which is young enough for an effective reliever. "T'would be nice if he makes it."

One of Saul's teammates with the Marlins is Cal Abrams, much-traveled outfielder, also in both leagues. Cal recently had a hot streak going for three weeks, during which time he slugged away at a .446 pace with 33 hits in 74 at bats, thereby boosting his average almost 70 points, up over the .300 mark.

And out in San Francisco, farm club of the Red Sox, is Leo Kiely, and the southpaw Irishman is really firing away. Leo had a relief record of ten wins and NO defeats up to last week, and an overall record of 11-2, all of this tacked on to an ERA of 2.29. Sounds like he might be back.

Anything to get the Sox into second place—even Kiely!

TEL AVIV — Israel is participating in the International Geophysical Year with a comprehensive program of data collection. Information will be sought on meteorology, the ionosphere and cosmic rays, as seen from observation posts here.

The Hebrew University in Jerusalem, the Technion in Haifa and the Government's meteorological service are the three main participating institutions. Meteorological field measurements and radiation reports will be made in Jerusalem, Haifa and Lydda. Radio wind observations will be made daily during the entire geophysical year, which is actually 18 months. Measurements also will be made in Elath.

Centers of the observations will include the roof of the new physics building of the Haifa Technion, and two caves on the slopes of Mount Carmel where underground cosmic ray intensity will be recorded. Ionospheric measurements will start next December, because an ionospheric recorder to be received on loan from the U. S. Committee for the Geophysical Year has not yet arrived.
