NEW MEASURES FOR THE ENCOURAGEMENT of foreign investments have been promulgated by the Israel Government . . . a series of . . . measures provide for . . . liberalization of the conditions for foreign investments in the field of taxation, exemption from some payments, and regulations of economic activity.

ANY DOUBTS THAT SOVIET influence in Egypt was growing were dispelled with the announcement that Russia will build five new airfields for the Arabs.

A CALL FROM THE ITALIAN Jewish community to the authorities to exercise "great firmness" in dealing with attempts to re-awaken Fascism marked the 20th anniversary of the promulgation of Mussolini's laws "for the protection of the Italian race" which led to the murder of 8,000 Jews of an Italian community of 45,000 within five years.

A COMMITTEE TO ENCOURAGE people of retirement age in the United States to emigrate to Israel has been organized by the Association of American and Canadian Settlers in Israel. Such immigration would provide the country not only with the foreign currency received from the U. S. but also with the valuable human resources of an element able to contribute spiritually and even economically to Israel, said Carl Alpert, association president.

DURING A KNESSET Ceremony commemorating the 10th anniversary proclamation by the UN of the Declaration of Human Rights, President I. Ben Zvi reminded the Knesset members that the UN Charter was not new to the people of Israel, since the laws on basic Human Rights were first promulgated at Sinai.

OFFICIAL CENSUS FIGURES released in Istanbul last week show the Jewish population of the city to be close to 33,000.

SOME 500 MEMBERS ON THE staff of the Jewish Agency in Jerusalem have been dismissed in conformity with the agency's decision to reduce its staff for economic reasons.

THE DETROIT BOARD OF FIRE commissioners has appointed the first Jewish Fire Department chief in Detroit history. Joseph Adler, a veteran of 40 years with the department, was promoted from deputy fire chief.

A NEW CONFLICT BETWEEN religious and secular authority in Israel developed last week when the Rabbinical Council declared that no outside agency could compel a supervising rabbi to grant kosher endorsements.

A NEW FOUNDATION RECENTLY established by Baron Edmond de Rothschild began its initial grants to meet educational and religious needs in Jewish communities in French provincial areas . . . First grants provided for the salary of a Jewish teacher in the Vosges town of St. Die, the salary of a rabbi in Toulouse and tuition for correspondence courses for Jews in isolated areas.

$300,000 Fund Campaign Planned For Providence Hebrew Day School

A building fund campaign with a goal of $300,000 has been voted for the construction of a new Providence Hebrew Day School.

The project was discussed at a meeting of community leaders and Hebrew Day School officials at the home of Judge Frank Licht last week.

School Closed

The present school on Waterman Street was closed recently because of fire safety regulations. Since then classes have been conducted in the school building of Temple Beth El which its Board of Trustees has made available on a temporary basis.

Judge Licht, chairman of the meeting, told the gathering that on visiting the school he was impressed with the progress of the school's pupils both in secular and Hebrew studies.

Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen of Temple Emanuel, characterized this meeting as the "turning point in the history of the school, and a step toward more complete community acceptance."

During the discussion, Louis Handwerger, president of the Jewish Community Center, unofficially offered the use of the Center facilities by the Day School, with the thought that when the Center goes out for a new building that the Day School could be included in the plans. In another suggestion, Alexander Rumpel asked whether there had been thought of the possible use of abandoned public school buildings. Both of these suggestions were deemed unfeasible by the majority who spoke.

Sees No Alternative

After all desiring to speak had been heard, Mrs. Archibald Silverman said she could see no alternative but to erect a new building. She then made a motion that a campaign and building committee be formed and that a goal of $300,000 be set for the erection of a new fire proof building for the Hebrew Day School. The motion was passed. A Building Fund Campaign Committee comprising a cross-section of community leadership is now being formed.

Other Speakers

Other speakers at the meeting included Max Brodsky, honorary president of the Providence Hebrew Day School; Lewis Korn, treasurer; Jerome Feinstein, chairman of the construction committee, and Rabbi Akiva Egozi, school principal.

Joseph Galkin, executive director of the General Jewish Committee, pointed out realistic aspects of raising this sum of money and expressed the opinion that gifts be made over a period of three years as is done in most capital fund campaigns. He also proposed a plan for the purchase of various school rooms and the auditorium as memorial gifts.

Judge Licht expressed the best wishes and greetings of Henry J. Hassenfeld, General Jewish Committee president, who was unable to attend the meeting.

Present at the meeting were David C. Adelman Herman Aisenberg, Archie Bellin, Mrs. Samuel Bresnick, Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen, Rabbi William G. Braude, Max Brodsky, Benjamin Brier, Benjamin Bromberg, Alter Boyman, Rabbi Abraham Chill, Joseph Dubin, Dr. Philip Dorenbaum, Rabbi Akiva Egozi, Jerome Feinstein, Max Fish, Dr. Jay Fishbein, Samuel Gereboff, Louis Garfinkle, Joseph Galkin, Abraham Goldstein, Louis Handwerger, David Hassenfeld, Morris Kirshenbaum, Lewis Korn, Rabbi Saul Leeman, Judge Frank Licht, David Meyers, Nathan Resnick, Rabbi Nathan Rosen, Alex Rumpel, Joseph W. Ress, Isaiah Segal, Ralph Shuster, Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Silverman, Archie Smith, Jack Sydney, Joe Thaler, and Max Winograd.

Recent Growth of Anti-Semitism Condemned by West Germans

BONN, Germany — The recent outcropping of anti-Semitism in West Germany was condemned last week in a number of West German newspapers.

The Frankfurter Allgemeine said the cases that had come to light represented a test by "incorrigible anti-Semites" to see again "how far they can go."

The comment was inspired by action of a Hamburg court in dismissing charges against the author and printer of a virulent pamphlet that said it was an "immense lie" that 6,000,000 Jews had been killed by the Nazis.

At the request of Max Brauer, Lord Mayor of Hamburg, Chancellor Konrad Adenauer has ordered the Federal Justice Ministry to see whether further action can be taken against the two men, Friedrich Nieland, 66-year-old Hamburg timber merchant, and the printer, Adolf Heimberg, 77.

The Frankfurter newspaper said:

"Fortunately disgust over such demonstrations of primitive hatred is almost general. Too frequently and too quickly, however, this disgust is expressed in laments that anti-Semitic outrages by individuals cast a bad light on all Germans and could bring political repercussions."

The article said the impression that objections to anti-Semitism in Germany were based exclusively on political considerations should be corrected. "Only then will the German people have the right to deplore the fact that German courts often seem to point out the right loopholes in relevant legislation to the racial baiters of yesterday."

The Bild of Hamburg, a newspaper with more than 3,000,000 circulation, published a front-page editorial under the single word "Alarm."

"The time has come to say loudly and clearly that something must be done," it declared. Cases of anti-semitism are few it added "but the few are too many."

The Neue Rhein Zeitung of Essen criticized the decision of Hamburg judges for having found that they distinguished between the "Jewish people" and international Jewry" and that he was proposing action only against "international Jewry."

After what happened under the Nazis the article said, there can be only one possible attitude: "Stern treatment of anyone who insults a Jew because of his race."

Here Nieland told a West German news agency in an interview that he was not an anti-semiter but was trying to help the Jewish people.

Newspaper Criticizes Dayan Talk

Speech Also Attacked By Mapam Leader

TEL AVIV — Moshe Dayan, former Israeli Chief of Staff was sharply attacked in an editorial in "Davar," Histadrut daily.

Editorial Attacks Dayan

The "Davar" editorial strongly criticizes Mr. Dayan for one of his many speeches, delivered recently in Jerusalem. In this speech, Mr. Dayan voiced ideas and phrases not to the liking of the Histadrut organ. Speaking of the situation in Israel and of the relations between the young and older generations, Mr. Dayan remarked that those who fought for Israel's existence in the War of Liberation and the Sinai campaign should not be looked upon as understanding less of the crucial problems of Israel than "those who sit on the fifth floor of the Histadrut building."

Says Talk Dangerous

This talk about young people sacrificing their lives in contrast to old politicians who sit in offices is dangerous and has unpleasant implications, states "Davar." The "fifth floor" of the Histadrut Building, it continues, houses people democratically chosen for their functions, which they perform in good faith for the welfare of the Histadrut and the country.

Mr. Dayan was also attacked by Mapam leader J. Chazan. His criticism was related to Mr. Dayan's proposal to dismiss five thousand officials of the Government and the municipalities, and also to bar all wages raises until Israel has achieved economic independence.

Introduce Bombing Legislation

WASHINGTON — Senators John F. Kennedy and Sam J. Ervin, Jr., along with 32 other members of the Senate, this week introduced legislation to make the bombing of educational facilities, houses of worship, business establishments, or community centers a Federal criminal offense.

Bill Introduced Last Year

A similar bill was introduced in May of last year by Senator Kennedy. During the recess, Senators Kennedy and Ervin circulated the bill among the other Senators so that prompt action could be taken when Congress reconvened. As a result, the additional co-sponsors, who come from both parties and from all sections of the country, requested that they be added as co-sponsors of the measure. Among those Senators are Senators Theodore Francis Green (D-R. I.) and John O. Pastore (D-R. I.).

The Kennedy-Ervin bill recognizes that explosives used in bombings travel in interstate commerce, and that individuals who transport or use them illegally thereby violate the Federal law. The crime is both a local and a Federal offense. However, Federal investigators have been handicapped by lack of authority. The bill would remedy this by establishing a presumption that the explosive moved in interstate commerce. If it is shown that no interstate facilities were used, the Federal jurisdiction would disappear.

Senators Kennedy and Ervin expressed gratification at the wide support the bill has received.

Ben Gurion Announces Easing Of Military Restrictions On Arabs

JERUSALEM — Easing of military restrictions on Arabs in border areas, and initiation of important development projects in areas largely inhabited by Arabs, were announced here recently by Prime Minister David Ben Gurion. He made the announcement after a three-hour meeting with the Arab members of the Israeli Parliament.

Some of the military restrictions have already been modified, but others will be eased considerably, Ben Gurion stated. The more than 1,000,000 Israeli pounds, will include four irrigation schemes to aid agriculture in the Arab-populated areas.

Policy Changed

The Prime Minister told the members of Parliament also that the Government has ordered a change in handling income from abandoned Arab properties which formerly belonged to Moslem religious institutions. The custodian of these properties has been instructed, the Prime Minister said, to turn the revenue over to local Moslem religious communities to aid them in meeting cultural and religious needs.

Ben Gurion announced that more than 3,000 claims for compensation for abandoned Arab lands have been settled, the claimants receiving about 4,500,000 Israeli pounds in cash and about 20,000 dunams of land. In addition, he said, economic rehabilitation is under way for 20,000 former Arab refugees who have returned to Israel.

The problem of the educated Arabs is also being met, Ben Gurion stated. More and more of them, he said, are being absorbed in public service and in the country's economy.

Steps have been taken, he added, to insure employment of Arab graduates of high schools and universities in the offices of the various Government ministries, and not merely in those offices that deal with Arab affairs alone.

Urges Education

Ben Gurion made one request of the Arab members of Parliament. He asked them to try to get more Moslem girls enrolled in public schools. Under Israel's compulsory education law, all Moslem children, girls as well as boys, are supposed to go to school. Moslem boys observe the law.

Girls, however, are often kept out of school in accordance with ancient Moslem tradition. About 60% of the Moslem girls in Israel go to school — whereas in Arab countries, female school attendance ranges from none at all to about 30%.

Last week, Histadrut Secretary-General Pinhas Lavon, addressing a cornerstone-laying ceremony at the dedication of a new building for the Israel Federation of Labor in the all-Arab city of Nazareth, announced that, in the very near future, Arabs will be admitted to full membership in Histadrut. The Federation had been originally the "Jewish" trade union movement, but is now becoming all-Israeli.

Recommend Change In Election Of Mayors

JERUSALEM — The Israel Cabinet voted recently to recommend a change in the system of electing municipal mayors from indirect to direct elections. The Cabinet passed the measure after a heated dispute during which one Minister walked out.

Until now, mayors have been elected by City Councillors who, themselves, are chosen on party lists and not on the basis of individual choice. Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion sponsored the bill changing the system to direct elections. The bill was opposed by the leftist parties. Leading the opposition was Minister of the Interior Israel Bar Yehuda, of Achdut Avodah, who tried strenuously to line up support for his views, especially from the Progressive Party.

Before a vote was taken on the measure, Mr. Bar Yehuda and Mr. Ben-Gurion exchanged heated arguments, and the Interior Minister walked out of the Cabinet meeting. The bill was passed, providing for a ministerial committee which will formulate new legislation to be presented to the Parliament.

Worry About Future Of Soviet Jews

NEW YORK — The American Jewish Committee believes that it may be proposed to the Soviet Communist Party congress that Soviet Jews be moved to Birobidjan in Siberia. The agency was concerned over the "future of Soviet Jews." The Communist party congress opens in Moscow on Jan. 27.

The committee, which has had access to information on developments concerning Jews behind the Iron Curtain, has received information from its Paris office indicating that such a proposal will be made.

The congress in Moscow will be concerned primarily with the adoption of the Seven-Year Plan for 1959-65, which provides for further economic development of Soviet Asia.

The committee said that within this framework the congress would deliberate on a working plan for the resettlement of Jews in the so-called Jewish autonomous region of Birobidzhan.

The committee cited Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev's statement last year that Jews were excessively individualistic and unwilling to participate in collective work.

This was followed by sudden publicity in the Soviet press in praise of Birobidzhan, where Jews were said to live a normal life and to enjoy their Jewish identity.

Birobidzhan was established by the Soviet Union in 1928, primarily as a Soviet alternative to Palestine for those Jews wishing a Jewish homeland. However, the number of Jews who moved to Birobidzhan was never more than a small fraction of the 3,000,000 Jews in the Soviet Union.

Many of those who did migrate left again, deterred by the climate and the primitive living conditions. Birobidzhan now has a population of about 150,000 of whom about 40,000 are Jews.

According to the information obtained by the American Jewish Committee, the plan for the revival of Birobidzhan could take three possible courses:

First, a larger Jewish settlement than the present one, but still only a token settlement. This would enable the Soviet rulers to declare the Jewish population of the Soviet Union "wherever they may reside" as members of a "territorial nationality," and on that basis "to deny them their cultural and other rights outside of Birobidzhan." Jews in the Soviet Union are regarded as a nationality or ethnic group rather than a religious community.

Second, the forced mass resettlement of Jews to Birobidzhan.

Third, "Birobidzhan would officially be made available to the Jewish population as a Jewish territory, and various means of indirect inducement would be applied to the Jews" to settle there.

According to the report, "what is involved in the situation is the reappearance in Soviet life of a Jewish pale of settlement, a vast official Soviet ghetto."

Finds United States Big, Beautiful

By Celia Zuckerberg

Five minutes of talking with Edy Harlaf and it is evident that her voice is particularly appropriate to her occupation. An attractive young woman with a truly expressive voice, she almost can make one see what she is talking about.

Miss Harlaf has been in the United States for six months now and will remain until next fall before she goes back to her native Israel. Here for a speaking engagement under the auspices of the Pioneer Women, the women's Labor Zionist organization, Miss Harlaf says that she is particularly interested in speaking to the younger members of the Pioneer Women. The older women's devotion to the cause is unshakeable and has been amply demonstrated.

Miss Harlaf, who was born in Jerusalem, is a graduate of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem where she majored in literature and the Bible. She is on the staff of Kol Israel ("The Voice of Israel") the only radio station in Israel. After she finishes her speaking engagements (she has been in about 25 cities already throughout the Eastern part of the United States and in Montreal and other cities in Canada) she hopes to study here at Yale University—particularly speech, television and radio. Although Israel does not as yet have a television station, she feels that they will have one within the next two or three years.

She has been a teacher in an elementary school and for two years she was a teacher in the Israeli army where she taught Hebrew, history and geography to newcomers.

She gives dramatic readings in the Bible and in the literature of Israel and of other countries which have been translated into Hebrew. These readings are given over the radio as well as throughout the country in cities and Kibbutzim.

She feels that the Moetzet Hapolat, the Working Women's Council in Israel of which the Pioneer Women is a sister organization, is most important, most powerful and strongest women's organization in Israel. It does the social service work of the country—this includes the establishment and maintaining in Israel of a large network of children's homes, day nurseries, vocational and trade schools, and integration centers for immigrant women.

When asked if the establishment of the state of Israel affected the work being done by the Pioneer Women outside Israel she said that originally the enthusiasm was tremendous. But it has lapsed. What some people do not understand she said is that a country is not built in ten years or twenty years, but takes generations. And then, of course, the country is in a politically difficult situation, immigration does not stop and the economic situation is "pretty tough."

Her English, which she speaks with only the slightest trace of an accent, she said she had been taught from the age of nine or ten in school. It is a compulsory foreign language in Israel. However, they concentrate on writing and reading, rather than speaking it. But her six months in the United States she says is what has helped her. She had a British accent at first because her teachers had been British, but she has since lost that here.

The only other times she had been in the United States previously was last March when she came here for 36 hours to bring tourists back to Israel's 10th Anniversary Celebration on the maiden voyage of the Theodor Herzl; and in May when she was here again for four days to bring a group from Hadassah to Israel.

Asked the question automatically of all visitors, she said that the United States was "a BIG country," and her voice made one see the bigness of it. She also says it is a beautiful country. She is particularly impressed with the New England landscape. She had read of it and seen pictures of it, but actually seeing it was another matter. In Israel she says there

Pawtucket Lawyer Appointed As Panama Consul To R. I.

For approximately two months now, a Pawtucket lawyer has been the honorary consul to Rhode Island from Panama. Although Jeremiah Gorin receives no pay (hence the honorary), for his services, he is quite pleased with the appointment, since he wishes to keep his ties with Panama.

Mr. Gorin, who has been practicing law in Rhode Island since 1946, was born in Panama. His family originally lived in Boston, but his father, hearing that business was good in Panama, moved there.

As consul, Mr. Gorin will take care of the affairs of any nationals of Panama in Rhode Island who wish help, will issue visas, and in general help to foster relations between the two countries.

Before settling in Rhode Island, Mr. Gorin had spent a great deal of time in the United States. Although he received his elementary schooling in schools of the Canal Zone, he finished his education in the United States — at Duke University and Harvard Law School from which he graduated in 1941.

Commercial High Class Plans Reunion

Members of the January 1924 class of the former Commercial High School will hold their 35th year reunion on Sunday, Feb. 15 at Topps Gaylord Diner, North Main Street, Providence. The dinner, for husbands and wives, will start at 7 P.M.

Highlighting the program will be a testimonial to the class's most eminent member, Gov. Christopher Del Sesto.

The arrangements committee includes Rose (Milvisky) Dunder, Rose (Delerson) Wallace, Grace (Ambrosino) Crudeli, Letitzia (Tammara) DeClemente, Mary (Dronney) Donnelly, Emma (Conca) Buonano, and Adelbert Gascon.

COMPLETES COURSE
Insurance Underwriters, Inc., with offices at 131 Washington Street, Providence, announced this week that Michael Silverman has satisfactorily completed the comprehensive course of insurance study conducted in Boston by the Employers Group of Insurance Companies.

Oriental Jews (those from North Africa, Syria and other Mid-Eastern countries) and the European Jews. The latter became particularly numerous after Hitler came into power in Germany. Colon, the main city of Panama, had three synagogues, one for each group.

Mr. Gorin served in the U. S. Navy during World War II and feels he was particularly fortunate. He was in Naval Intelligence and was stationed in Panama. So, although he was living at home, he still received overseas pay.

He was married in 1943, and his wife, the former Rosalind Fenton, worked in Panama during the war to be with him. They have three boys, Stephen, 12, Larry, who is 8 1/2, and David, 5.

Mr. Gorin points out that there is an export-import trade between Rhode Island and Panama. Also, there has been an increase in the tourist trade between the United States and Panama.

Panama exports hardwood, such as mahogany, and has a large export trade in bananas. (Mrs. Gorin mentioned that at the time she lived in Panama, she couldn't understand why she couldn't get a banana which tasted really good, until she learned that the best bananas were shipped out of the country.)

The population of Panama is a varied one. There are the white people, the negroes from the British West Indies and Africa, East Indians, as well as native Indians, many of whom are still quite primitive. Just recently the millionth citizen of Panama was born.

Mr. Gorin is a partner in the law firm of Goodman, Mackenzie, Gorin and Blease of Pawtucket.

Weizman Institute Guard Arrested For Espionage

TEL AVIV — A guard at the Weizmann Institute of Science at Rehovoth has been arrested and will shortly be brought to trial on charges of espionage, police officials announced here last week. The name of the arrested man was not revealed.

The suspect, who has been under detention since November, will face two charges: passing information to a foreign agent with the intention of violating the security of the state, and passing information without authorization with intent to harm the security of the state. The first charge carries a maximum sentence of 15 years in prison, while the latter may bring up to a life term.

During an extensive investigation, security agents learned that the supernumerary policeman, who came to Israel ten years ago, had maintained contact with a foreign agent in Israel. That agent apparently encouraged him to go abroad last July. While abroad he made contact with another foreign agent and underwent special training to prepare him for espionage in science.

Following his return to Israel, the suspect showed an unusual interest in what was going on in the laboratories and tried to make friends with scientists, according to the charges. He was present at important social functions, frequently coming without an invitation. While on duty, he entered laboratories — despite regulations which forbade it.

number of nuclear science projects in progress and, like other institutions of higher learning in Israel, is working on research contracts for the United States armed forces.

The special policeman, who speaks Hebrew, Yiddish and Russian, was teaching himself English, apparently in order to further his friendship with Institute scientists, most of whom use that language. He was a member of an anti-Communist group whose headquarters are in Germany and his trip abroad was taken on the pretext that he was attending in Germany an international convention of the organization. He was also present at the last nuclear science conference in Geneva and mixed with Israeli scientists.

The accused man has an 18-year-old son living in his country of origin. This young man is the child of his first marriage. In Israel, he lives with his second wife, a Polish Christian, and a ten-year-old son.

Labor Zionist Order Adopts Resolution

NEW YORK — A resolution appealing to the new U. S. Congress, which started its session on Jan. 7, for the elimination of the discriminatory provisions of the McCarran-Walter Immigration Law, was adopted here last week at the concluding session of the three-day national conference of the Farband-Labor Zionist Order. The resolution urged Congress to end the concept of "desirable" and "undesirable" peoples and races.

Another resolution calls upon the members and branches of the Farband to broaden and intensify their efforts in behalf of the United Jewish Appeal, the Histadrut campaign, the Jewish National Fund and the Israel bond campaign. Louis Segal, general secretary of the Farband, reported to the conference that members of the Zionist labor order purchased Israel bonds totaling about $35,000,000 during 1958. He emphasized that they also participated actively in the UJA and in the JNF.

Mr. Segal reported that the Farband has now 82,000 members. He said that the Farband was conducting a nation-wide cultural and educational program among its members, and that it was also organizing English-speaking youth branches throughout the country. The Farband, he said, is also planning the building of homes for the aged for members reaching retirement age.

Meyer Brown, president of Farband, announced that he would submit a four-year plan to intensify the activities of the order with a view that the younger English-speaking members should be inspired to continue the traditions of the Farband. The conference concluded with a banquet honoring Mr. Brown on his 70th birthday.

The establishment of an annual award for outstanding journalistic achievement in the Yiddish, Hebrew or English-Jewish press in the name of Mr. Brown was announced at the conference. Two prizes will be awarded annually to the two journalists who make the greatest contribution toward enlightening the Jewish public on an outstanding issue of Jewish concern.

Mobs Loot Jewish Stores In Havana

MIAMI — Looting of many Jewish stores in Havana and other cities following the fall of the Batista government was reported here from sources now in the Cuban capital.

The berserk mobs that celebrated the great event by indulging in violence, looting and sacking, were reported to have attacked many Jewish-owned stores.

Jewish arrivals here from Havana said they feared Jews might be made the scapegoats of the revolution because some Jewish segments were pro Batista.

However, Castro supporters in Havana are known to have sought and secured contributions from leading Jews in Havana and the provinces.

It is generally believed the Castro forces will not permit any anti-Jewish outbursts in its moment of victory or any time, but there is concern here over reports that some 150 Jewish-owned stores have been attacked by mobs.

Eli Abrams

Swear In Eli Abrams As Deputy Sheriff

Eli Abrams, 47, of 98 Wilcox Avenue, Pawtucket, and the owner of the Eli Abrams Flower Shop at 47 Park Place, Pawtucket, was sworn in last Thursday as first deputy sheriff of Providence County. The ceremony took place at Republican headquarters, Jackson Street, Providence, with High Sheriff John F. Leonard administering the oath of office.

Mr. Abrams, who starts his new duties at a pay scale of more than $5,000 annually, will be in charge of the Providence County sheriff's office when Sheriff Leonard is absent.

In addition, he will be responsible for making all assignments of other deputy sheriffs to various courts in the County, which includes the cities of Providence, Pawtucket, Central Falls and Woonsocket.

Married and the father of two children, Mr. Abrams is a native of Providence and has resided in Pawtucket for several years. He is an Army veteran of World War II, and was Republican candidate for the State House of Representatives from the 10th District of Pawtucket in 1956 and 1958.

In Pawtucket he is a Boy Scout Committeeman, and a member of Congregation Ohave Sholam, Reback-Winston Post JWV, Knights of Pythias and Kiwanis

Italian Premier Leaves For Egypt

ROME — Italian Premier Amintore Fanfani conferred recently with Israel Ambassador Eliahu Sasson prior to the Premier's scheduled departure for a four-day trip to Egypt as a guest of the Government of President Nasser. Between his arrival in Cairo and his departure Fanfani met several times with President Nasser, signed an agreement for cultural exchanges between Italy and the United Arab Republic and participated in public ceremonies.

Pietro Nenni, left-wing Socialist leader, in a statement hailing the mission, declared that there was "room" for Italy as well as all powers large and small in the affairs of the Middle East and Africa. "Fanfani's trip is a positive fact," he added, and "it should not be impossible to reach an agreement on military non-interference and political non-interference in the Middle East."

(In Jerusalem, Israeli officials declined to comment on the fact that Fanfani will return home without coming here. However, it is understood that Israeli circles are not happy with that decision.)

Foods To Remember

GLAZED COOKIES (Parve)

2 1/4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup sugar
3/4 cup oil
1 tablespoon orange juice
3 tablespoons boiling water
2 egg yolks
2 teaspoons grated orange or lemon rind
1/2 teaspoon almond flavoring

Sift together flour, salt and sugar in a mixing bowl. Combine shortening, orange juice and boiling water and stir into the first mixture, beating till well blended. Beat egg yolks, grated rind and flavoring thoroughly then combine to form a dough ball. Chill in the refrigerator at least 1 hour. Pat or roll out to 1/4 inch thickness and cut into rounds, triangles or other desired shapes and arrange on ungreased baking sheets. Bake 8 to 10 minutes at 400° F. or till lightly browned. Cool and frost with the following mixture for a glaze. Yields 48 to 50 3-inch cookies.

Glaze:

Combine 1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar, pinch of salt, 1/2 teaspoon vanilla and 3 tablespoons orange juice. Spread on cookies when cool.

Here is a quick-easy recipe for a cookie-ball.

VEAL ROULADEN

1/2-inch thick veal steaks (bones and fat removed), allowing 1 large or 2 small cuts per serving. Pound these with a wooden mallet till very thin (or pound with edge of a heavy plate). Dust lightly with flour to which has been added a little paprika, celery salt or mixed herb seasoning. Place a strip of dill pickle in the center of each pounded steak and roll up, fastening with one or two wooden toothpicks. Dust lightly with the seasoned flour and saute in hot melted vegetable shortening or schmaltz, turning to brown lightly on all sides. Arrange in a casserole, cover and bake 45 minutes at 350 deg. F. or till tender. Serve with mashed potatoes, steamed rice or spaghetti.

WASHINGTON — A warning that if religious leaders do not take action to fulfill the "teachings of the Jewish heritage" in the area of race relations, the Jewish communities throughout the U. S., particularly in urban areas, will be faced with a serious problem in the near future, was sounded here by Dr. Normal Drachler of Detroit, president of the National Federation of Temple Educators.

Dr. Drachler stressed that the problem was extremely urgent because of the fact that the urban areas where Jews congregate will, within 15 years, have a Negro population of 50 percent.

An Old Faith In The New India

By Morris N. Kertz

A look of surprise swept over the finely-chiselled face of India's scholarly Vice President, Dr. S. Radhakrishnan, when I said to him, "Do you know, Mr. Vice President, New Delhi is the only capital of a large country in the free world that has no substantial Jewish community?"

We were seated on the terrace of his comfortable residence as I shared with him the few facts I had already acquired about the fifty Jewish families who live in New Delhi. Here was a city whose commerce and industry contained not a single Jewish family. The leaders of New Delhi's Jewish community are, instead, prominent in government. (This may be unique elsewhere but not in India, where Jews have a long-standing tradition of entering military and civil service.)

B. B. Benjamin, the president of the Jewish Welfare Association of Delhi and Northern India, the congregational body of India's capital, and one of the new city's "old settlers" (since 1930), is Undersecretary of the Ministry of Irrigation and Power. The vice president of the Ass'n the Hon. E. E. Jirhad, is Judge-Advocate of the Indian Navy. Another officer of the Jewish community is J. M. Benjamin, Senior Architect for the government, who designed his country's embassy buildings in Iran and Turkey. My host and guide in New Delhi, Ezra Kolet, the Association's secretary, and the Jewish community's single religious school teacher, serves the government as Deputy Secretary for the Minister of Finance. The only non-native-born Association official is E. J. Seegal, a refugee from Nazi persecution who by a strange turn of events is now a consultant on economic affairs for the German embassy in New Delhi.

At the time of my meeting with India's Vice President, I had not yet met any of these gentlemen, and during the course of the interview I mentioned that I was scheduled to meet the leaders of the Jewish community the following day. Since he did not know them, I asked if he would care to have their names. Dr. Radhakrishnan raised his hands in vigorous protest:

"Oh please . . . please . . . not in India. It's just not done! We never ask a man in government what his religion is. I don't want to be told which of our officials is of the Jewish faith — or any faith!"

One of the nation's outstanding thinkers and statesmen, the Vice President generally presides over the Indian Parliament; President Prasad, being old and somewhat feeble, rarely assumes this responsibility. As presiding officer, Dr. Radhakrishnan is the ranking advisor to Prime Minister Nehru. At one point in our meeting, I made a casual reference to the fact that I had just come from Jerusalem.

"I have a great deal of interest in Israel," he interjected. "The Jewish people are an extraordinary people. They have had more than their share of geniuses — Einstein, Marx, Freud." And he then continued speaking in admiring tones about Israel, especially of its scientific institutions and the Hebrew University.

Although we had come together to discuss philosophic and religious matters, I could not resist the temptation to pursue the subject further. At the time of our interview, Iraq's king had just been assassinated, and my only source of Middle East news was the New Delhi press. One black headline read, "Israeli Troops Massing on Syrian Border"; and another, "General Mobilization in Israel." A third, "Arabs Stronger Than Ever," was accompanied by the astonishing subhead, "As We Were in Port Said in 1956." Every story carried the same dateline—Cairo.

"Why," I asked the Vice President, "doesn't your government establish diplomatic relations with Israel?"

"That will come in time," he replied. "I have often spoken to the Prime Minister about it. We recognize Franco and others — why not Israel?" He added, however, that the time was not yet ripe, that India must consider her 43,000,000 Moslems who presumably are opposed to the idea of recognizing Israel.

"Are the Israelis at all fearful?" he asked, referring to the critical military and political situation. I assured him that they were not.

"Only the other day," he observed, "I hold a visiting Arab ruler that the Arabs were foolish in fighting the Israelis. I said to him, 'They have something to fight for and you don't. Clive, with 125 British troops, subdued 10,000 Indian soldiers — because the 125 knew what they were fighting for, and the 10,000 didn't. That's why you Arabs will always lose.'"

"But, Mr. Vice President," I could not refrain from saying, "this temporizing is no different than what you Indians accuse America of doing. You were talking earlier about my country, suggesting that we could stand a little more 'sacrificial democracy' — the abandonment of opportunism. Isn't your Israel position based on something other than principle?"

Dr. Radhakrishnan agreed, and repeated, "We will consider the matter of recognition further. It will come soon."

New Delhi is a new community in a very ancient land. (It did not loom into prominence until 1938.) Its present Jewish residents, most of them originally from Bombay and Calcutta, are recent settlers. The Bukharin Jews from beyond the Himalayas, who formed the bulk of Delhi's community before World War II, have departed as the fur trade in which they made their living declined.

In 1956, a Center was opened, built in the brief period of six months — a fact locally referred to as "a miracle." It is called the Judah Hyam Hall, and was built with the aid of funds collected from Jews in all parts of India, Britain and America — 170 contributors in all. The gifts ranging from 4,000 rupees (five rupees to the dollar) to two rupees, came from Jews in cities with exotic names like Poona, Simla, Nagpur and Bulandshahr. The seventh largest gift was that of the Temple Israel Religious School of St. Louis, undoubtedly the result of Rabbi Ferdinand Isserman's visit to New Delhi.

The Jews of New Delhi are particularly proud of their Center, whose site has an interesting "past." In 1932, Jacob Solomon, active in community affairs, had acquired a large plot of land for use as a cemetery, which was established in one section of the property. When land values skyrocketed after New Delhi became the capital of India the community could not afford to purchase additional property for a center. Since the cemetery tract had not been consecrated entirely for its original purposes, the community sought and received religious sanction from Britain's chief rabbinate to divide the property in two, and to build a center on the unconsecrated half.

The Center consists in the main of one large hall, where all the religious, social and educational activities are carried on. Though the worship ritual is Orthodox, men and women sit together, and there is no inhibition about riding to prayer. Scattered throughout the vast city, Jews would find it impossible to walk to services.

Creative Jewish life is difficult to maintain. Secretary Kolet, a warm and engaging person, complained about the lack of teaching tools that handicapped his work as religious instructor. The school's textbooks are meagre, and his own Jewish knowledge is limited. A compensating love for his work, however, has transformed the economist into an inspiring pedagogue. The fifteen children of the religious school enthusiastically perform festival plays written by their teacher. Mr. Kolet was especially appreciative of the new-found interest in the community evinced by the United Synagogue of America and he would like nothing better than for some American synagogue to "adopt" the New Delhi Sunday School.

At a formal reception in my honor, the children of the school sang, with a good deal of gusto, such familiar songs as "Heveinu Sholom Aleichem," to which they added a distinct oriental flavor. The president, Mr. B. B. Benjamin, who combines his skills in the Ministry of Irrigation with a widely applauded cantorial prowess, offered some illustrations of Indian-Jewish chants, especially those sung during the week of my visit (the Week of Lamentation). The nusach was supposedly Italian, but the chants bore only slight resemblance to those I had heard in Mediterranean cities. Faint echoes of Bengal and Hindustan had apparently infiltrated. The congregation urged me to teach them a few basic synagogue melodies of the Western world. I responded with a rendition of the standard "Sholom Aleichem," and this, as I have learned from recent letters, has now been adopted for Sabbath worship.

I also attended a party celebrating the birth of a son to the Shapiro family. Louis Shapiro of South Africa is a UNICEF official responsible for a program covering the entire country. Most of the women present were dressed attractively in the traditional sari. They are not career women and, like their husbands, are indistinguishable from the general population in their physiognomy and in the color of their skin and hair. With few exceptions, they had emigrated from the South of India; some trace their ancestry to the Bene Israel, other to Cochin Jewry. Whatever their origin, their roots in India are many centuries old.

Among all the families whom I met in India and in Pakistan, the names given to the children are invariably Biblical. This was true even in the case of one family, in which the mother has maintained her Catholic faith. The most common Jewish surnames in both countries are Hayim, Samuel, Solomon, David, Moses and Judah. The handsome young official of the Pakistan International Airways, who arranged my passage from Karachi to New Delhi, was named Moses Samuel, an excellent illustration of the rule. But often the surnames are Indian, many of them ending in "kar," appended to the name of a city. Penkar, for instance, is the family name of those Jews who trace their ancestry to the village Pen.

Dr. Radhakrishnan had asked me if I were familiar with the story of the Black Jews of Cochin, a segment of Jewry little known to the West. According to my New Delhi informants, the Cochin Jews were the backbone of Judaism in India for many centuries. They were the scholars, the rabbis and teachers; without them, the Jewish faith might not have survived as a living religion in that part of the world. But now that many of them have emigrated to Israel, there are few religious functionaries available — "mohalim, Torah readers, cantors and teachers — for the smaller communities.

In New Delhi itself there are no paid Jewish functionaries. When a male child is born, a "mohel" in Ahmedabad (with 100 Jewish families and a synagogue) is immediately notified, and he sets out on a 350-mile journey to the nation's capital, "Mezuzot," an important item to New Delhi Jewry, and "matzot" are ordered from Bombay.

The standard Jewish histories have little to say about the Jews in India. The comprehensive history of Margolis and Marx does not contain a single reference, and the six-volume Graetz has little more than a paragraph. The history of the Indian Jews, however, is an ancient and venerable one. I was shown a picture of a copper plate, containing a royal charter for Jews, written in the Malayan tongue, which dates back to the year 379 C. E., and suggests an earlier Jewish settlement in the year 72 C. E. Of more recent vintage is a set of exquisite tiles which have adorned the floor of a Cochin synagogue since 1762. According to one tradition, these were owned by the Emperor, a gift of a Cantonese ruler. When the Emperor's Jewish advisor pointed out that the pigment in the tiles contained butter fat, and that the Emperor therefore could not, in all good conscience as a Hindu, walk on them, he turned them over to the Jewish community. One street in Cochin is called Synagogue Lane, and is located in a section whose official name today is Jewish Town.

As the world shrinks and the sub-continent of India is drawn closer into the orbit of our own experience, we can expect that the student of Jewish affairs, in addition to exploring Indian Jewry's present, will wish to delve into that far-flung community's past. For that purpose I recommend H. S. Kehimkar's "History of the Bene Israel of India," published in Tel Aviv in 1937, a veritable treasure-house of information about the impact of the Orient on Judaism. And should the Jewish tourist from the West ever find himself in Bombay, Calcutta or New Delhi, he will not only receive a warm welcome from his fellow-Jews in these distant cities, but will also rediscover a sense of kinship with a part of his people that has, despite long separation from the centers of Jewish life, remained loyal to the common Jewish heritage.

See Extension Of Soviet Influence

LONDON — A further extension of Soviet influence in the United Arab Republic was seen here recently in an agreement signed in Cairo under which the Russians will construct five new air fields in Egypt.

The agreement also provided for Russian building of a thermal power station at Suez and an undisclosed and unspecified number of "new enterprises." The agreement followed talks between A. Nikitin, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Soviet Council of Ministers, and Abbas Aziz Sidky, Central Minister of Industry for the UAR. All of the new construction is slated for Egypt.

The new UAR-Soviet agreement followed President Nasser's announcement over Cairo Radio in November that the NAR would launch a five year plan in 1959 for the industrialization of the UAR at a cost of 256,000,000 pounds sterling.

The first shipment of Russian equipment under the industrial credits agreement with the United Arab Republic arrived at Alexandria last month.

is no winter. Snow can be found on top of some of the higher mountains, but it is not the same as seeing snow in quantity. She mentioned the snow which had fallen recently, and when told that she should have been here the year before when she would have seen a real blizzard, she said she had been in New York last March at the time of the heaviest snowfall that city had had in 40 years. She was so happy with it, she said she spent her time "running in the snow."

In the fall, she was in Connecticut, and she feels there is nothing lovelier than the changing colors of the trees. In Israel there are not as many trees, and the ones there are do not change with the seasons. And she is also amazed with the number of lakes in the eastern part of the United States. In Israel there is but one.

Styles in the United States and Israel are very much the same — "there is the same trapeze and chemise . . . and short shorts," said Miss Harlaf. They are a little more casual in their wear in Israel, but even that is changing.

Although she feels that programs on the radio in Israel are more "highbrow" than here, she says they also have "rock 'n' roll, and we love it."

On the radio they carry educational programs for the youth and for adults which encompass such subjects as Hebrew, science and political and social problems. Three times a day there is Bible reading. According to Miss Harlaf the Bible is "not a book only. It is life itself . . . the basic law . . . the government's law. No matter what a person does or how old he is, the Bible is part of him. We try to rebuild our life according to the Bible."

Her readings in literature include the American writers, Walt Whitman, particularly liked by the Israelis, and the work of Edgar Allan Poe — translated into Hebrew, of course. When asked about Israeli writers, she said that there have been some small things which are very good, but except for one whom she called a genius, the writers "are too near this miracle . . . and far from what happens in the Diaspora." There is also the fact that since most of the writers come from outside Israel originally, their writing is not completely Israeli but colored by their former

Brown President To Observe Israel Education System

Dr. Barnaby C. Keeney, president of Brown University, is flying from New York today for two weeks of observation of the educational system of Israel. He is undertaking the survey on behalf of the America-Israel Society to which he will submit his comments and opinions upon his return.

While in Israel, Dr. Keeney will visit institutions of higher learning and secondary schools, including Hebrew University in Jerusalem; Technion, the University at Tel Aviv, and Bar Ilan University at Ramat Gan. He will speak at the Hebrew University and before the Israel American Friendship League.

He plans to return to Providence at the end of the month, flying from Tel Aviv on Friday, Jan. 30.

life — as American writing was by Britain in the early days of America.

Miss Harlaf's father, an economist, who teaches at Technion, the Israel Institute of Technology, was born in Lithuania. Her mother came from Poland. They both were Zionists and it was in Israel they met, when her father was teaching her mother Hebrew. Her mother now helps Miss Harlaf in translating Polish literature into Hebrew. Although her father was "brilliant in literature", at the time he came to Israel, economists were needed and since he was also an accomplished mathematician, he now teaches economics at Technion.

Miss Harlaf is now in Providence and will appear at a joint Oneg Shabbat of the Pioneer Women of Providence tonight. It will be held at the Cranston Jewish Center on Park Avenue starting at 8:30 o'clock. Miss Harlaf will speak from the pulpit and read from the Bible. She will then lead the audience in singing Israeli songs. The Oneg Shabbat will be held after the service, which will be conducted by Rabbi Saul Leeman assisted by Cantor Jack Smith.

DEBATE ON SCROLLS

NEW YORK—The authenticity of the Dead Sea Scrolls was debated here by two scholars at a meeting of the Society of Biblical Literature and Exegesis, held at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America. Dr. Solomon Zeitland of Dropsie College argued that the dates ascribed to the find were erroneous, but his former pupil Dr. Robert Gordis, professor of bible at the Seminary, said they were authentic.

ORGANIZATION NEWS

'THE ENCHANTED TREASURE'
"The Enchanted Treasure" an adaptation of Washington Irving's "The Legend of the Moor's Legacy", will be presented as the third program in the Jewish Community Center's 1958-1959 Children's Theatre Series on Sunday, Feb. 8, at Hope High School.

Written by Anne Nicholson, this play will be presented by the Traveling Playhouse, an adult dramatic company, directed by Ken and Kay Rockefeller. Two performances of the play were presented at the Metropolitan Museum in New York City last January. Special season tickets will be made available for this presentation and the additional two remaining shows of the current season.

YOUNG ADULTS' PROGRAMS
Members of the Young Adult Association of the Jewish Community Center have completed plans for a series of special Sunday night programs which will get under way this Sunday.

A full length feature film program, "Pinky", with Jeanne Crain, Ethel Barrymore and William Lundigan will be presented at the East Side Center building this Sunday at 8 P.M.

On Sunday, Jan. 25, the group will conduct a "Cabaret Canteen" program at the East Side JCC building with dancing and a floor show.

Dr. Daniel Drucker, head of the Brown University Engineering Department will conduct a discussion program featuring his recent travels behind the Iron Curtain on Sunday, Feb. 1. This program will be open to young adults only.

Additional programs scheduled by the group include, "Jazz Jam Session", "Folk and Square Dance Workshop", "Jewish Music Month Program", and a panel discussion on Jewish community leadership. Membership in the Young Adult Association is open to all adult men and women aged 18 through 30 who are Center members.

TO LAUNCH DONOR EVENT

A luncheonette at 12:30 P.M. and a meeting at 1:30 of the board of the Ladies Association of the Jewish Home for the Aged will be held on Wednesday at the Home. Mrs. Saul Seigle, president, will launch the donor event of the year which will be held in March. Mrs. Lloyd Bazelon is chairman of the donor event.

Mrs. Samuel Harrison and Mrs. Ben Rabinowitz are co-chairmen of hostesses for this meeting. They will be assisted by Mesdames Irving Beranbaum, Bertram M. Brown, Samuel Brown, Aaron Caslowitz, Jack Cerel, Edward Consove, Samuel Deutch, David Dressler and Samuel Fabricant.

TO ENTER TEAM

The East Side JCC will enter a team in the Providence YMCA's "Bee Volleyball Tournaments" to be conducted at the Providence YMCA this Saturday.

Sanctioned by US Volleyball Association, the tournament will include entrees from Providence, Lynn, Worcester, Woonsocket and other New England communities.

Members of the Providence JCC teams are Milton Wintman, Maurice Dressler, David Temkin, Martin Miller, Harry Coppel, Howard Weiner, Burton Fain, Jack Pritsker, Herbert Weintraub, Robert Green, Marshall Ritch and Arthur Finkelstein. The JCC teams are coached by John Rudert.

DELEGATES TO INSTITUTE

Louise Berman, Fredda Bloom, Toby Alterman, Davida Millman and Bruce Nelson were delegated by PROVTY to attend the New England Federation of Temple Youth's Winter Leadership Institute which was held in Lenox, Mass., from Dec. 28 to Jan. 2. Rabbi Jerome Gurland of Temple Beth El was chosen to serve as dean of Institute. The next meeting of PROVTY is scheduled for Sunday.

TO HOLD BANQUET

The mid-season banquet of the Sackin Shocket Auxiliary Bowling League will be held on Monday at Oates Tavern on Douglas Avenue, starting at 7:30 P.M. Mrs. Alfred Elman is chairman.

PLAN SPECIAL EVENTS

Two special events for members of the East Side Center's Sunday Club Program were announced this week by Mrs. Gustaf Sweet, chairman of the JCC Children's Activities Committee.

A "Western Hoedown" will be conducted on Sunday, Jan. 25, at 3 P.M., following regular club meetings. Club members have been asked to attend in Western costumes.

A mother and daughter afternoon tea and dance recital will be presented for elementary school girls and their mothers at the East Side Center on Sunday, Feb. 1, at 4:30 P.M.

Following the tea party, a complete ballet presentation of "Swan Lake" will be presented by the New England Junior Ballet Company. Judith Maxwell, Center dance instructor, will also present a demonstration of dance lesson technique. Admission will be by invitation.

West led a heart.

On the face of it the contract is a certainty, but South had learned a lesson of the highest value in bridge—never underestimate your opponents! He reasoned that since West had doubled and stood a potentially costly redouble he must be pretty confident of setting the contract. But West had no club tricks and no heart tricks, and could be counting, after the bidding, on not more than one diamond trick. It followed that he must be counting on no less than three trump tricks, so that three of the missing trumps at least must be in his hand, and possibly all four. Moreover, the heart lead must be a singleton, for otherwise West would first have tried to cash a diamond trick and get a look at the table.

If this hand is played in the normal way East will get in on the diamond before all trumps are drawn, and enable West to trump a heart to defeat the contract. South, therefore, realized that he could make his contract only if he could discard the two losing diamonds in his own hand, so as to prevent East getting in. If the clubs break 3-3 and the missing four trumps are in the West hand, the contract can thus be made. South, therefore, played off A, K, Q, and a small club, discarding his two diamonds, thus restricting his losers to three trump tricks and making his redoubled contract.

The morals of my story are: first, pay as much attention to your opponents' bids as to your partner's, because they are the guide to the analysis of the hand. Secondly, never double where that bid gives a clue which makes possible an otherwise unmakeable contract. When East drew this latter point to the attention of his partner, West self-righteously replied, "Well, I made three tricks." In bridge as in life some people are quite happy to lose as long as they feel themselves to be in the right.

Staff Association Installs Officers

Dr. Nathan Chaset was installed as president of the Miriam Hospital Staff Association on Monday. Other officers installed include Dr. Charles Potter, vice-president; Dr. Stanley David Simon, secretary, and Dr. Leonard Sutton, treasurer.

Annual reports of the committees of the staff were presented and Dr. I. Herbert Scheffer, executive director, reported on the continued increase in growth of the Miriam Hospital. In the five years since the hospital has moved to Summit Avenue, the number of patient days of service in any one year has increased from 31,650 to 57,889. The average occupancy of the hospital has increased from 58.4% in 1953 to 99.3% during 1958, he reported. Dr. Alex M. Burgess, Sr., the director of professional education, commented on the educational program being conducted at the hospital.

A Carnation To...

Mrs. Abraham Grebstein
 This space cannot do justice to Edith Grebstein's achievements. As chairman of a Pioneer Women's project, she raised $12,000 for a village in Israel's Negev. She founded the life membership group in the Pioneers, and in short order raised $8,000 through that means. And it was she who originated and developed the program in which women make cancer dressings through Jewish organizations.

Mrs. Grebstein has worked conscientiously on behalf of the Cancer Society and the Polio Foundation for 15 years. She raised large sums of money for each, and has countless citations awarded in appreciation of her efforts. This remarkable woman loves to work for mankind—and she gets results!

Joseph Schlossberg
 There is no need to state the fact that Genial Joe Schlossberg always has been interested in the welfare of his community. He has proved that often, through his work as a Providence City Councilman for many years, and through his participation in civic and Jewish communal affairs.

Not the least of his contributions has been his vocal ability. A noted cantor, who formerly served officially at Temple Beth Israel, Mr. Schlossberg has provided excellent entertainment at countless organizational affairs, and always without a fee. What's more, he seems always to be genuinely pleased to do something for somebody else.

A Sign for the Spirit

The communion of spirit and policy that has arisen between Israel and the new nations of Africa and Southeast Asia is an encouraging and significant development. Not only does it expand the network of Israel's friendships, but it links the Jewish State to the most portentous theme of our times — the awakening of the African and Asian masses.

This meaningful rapprochement transcends the ordinary diplomatic alliance. It derives its impetus in large part from a natural affinity with the Jewish people's conception of freedom as creative struggle epitomized in the modern revival of Israel; from the inspiration of a dream fulfilled and nationhood achieved against overwhelming odds. Thus, the example of Israel serves to fertilize the spirit of other peoples emerging into freedom. "Israel as an historic idea," Abba Eban has said, "is greater than Israel as a geographic fact." The growing bonds between Israel and the world's youngest democracies would seem to prove this proposition.

Because the political reality of Israel is no longer a source of continuous wonder, we often tend to forget about the profound meaning that the resurgence of Jewish nationhood has had for the world as a whole, not only for Jews. Our postwar, cold-war world is hungry for a symbol of what the human spirit can do in the achievement of freedom. Within this frame, the ordeal — and indeed the success — of Israel has caught the imagination of millions who seek somewhere a sign for the dominant power of the human will. The miraculous ascent of Jewish vitality from the depths of agony has borne meaning for the East, where a new dawn is breaking, as well as for the West. The fledgling states of Africa and Asia readily identify themselves with Israel's struggle and already many of them have begun to integrate her experiences and skills into the reinforcement of their own societies and economies.

Indications of Israel's burgeoning association with the East were underscored by the opening in Tel Aviv last month of the first Afro-Asian Seminar on International Cooperation. Although boycotted by the Moslem countries of the Middle East and North Africa, delegations of twelve states, oblivious to the mutterings and rumblings of Radio Cairo, have come to spend three months in Israel, studying, observing and discussing. The meetings are being attended by prominent statesmen and labor leaders from such countries as Ghana and Burma, Nigeria and Ethiopia, French Sudan, Ivory Coast and Dahomey. While in Israel, the foreign delegates will inspect, in particular, that country's highly developed cooperative setup in such diverse areas as agriculture, industry, public services, marketing and finance.

The seminar, whose participants represent more than 650 million people, is the result of a visit by Israel's Foreign Minister, Golda Meir, to West Africa last year. On that occasion, the leaders of newly-liberated states and countries on the threshold of independence expressed a desire to learn at first hand from Israel's experience in order to aid in a solution of their countries' similar economic and social problems. The seminar, therefore, is in no sense a political one, unlike those held frequently, with far greater fanfare and altogether different objectives, in certain African and Asian capitals. Its name — Seminar on International Cooperation — is not a semantic disguise for something more sinister, but an exact description of its purpose and intent. Mrs. Meir struck the true keynote when she told the delegates at the opening session: "The significance of this meeting is that it is for something and not against somebody."

This surely makes the present gathering in Israel unique. At a time when most international get-togethers are "against somebody," a meeting that is "for something" affords welcome relief from the more usual chest-thumping, bombast and denunciation. Although peace in the Middle East may not yet be within reach, the fact of young nations bound together by common ideals and meeting in prolonged association holds forth the vision of an ultimate accord. The Afro-Asian Seminar on International Cooperation is a sign for the human spirit.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

About Ourselves

By BERYL SEGAL

We may not know it, but we are constantly being studied. At this very moment someone may be measuring our noses, describing our eating habits, observing our manners, and checking on our tastes in music, in reading materials, and in recreation.

In research offices of many national organizations specialists compile statistics on the size of our families, on the amount of money we give to charities, on the kind of job we hold, and on the rate of births and marriages and divorces among us. In many a university, students earn their advanced degrees by preparing studies on the way we worship, how we vote, what we think about Dulles and the conquest of space, and how we deal with our relatives and neighbors.

The facts pried out by these studies and surveys are neatly catalogued, turned into graphs and curves, and tabulated into scientific figures of percentages and averages.

And we who read these reports and look at these graphs and tables sometimes find ourselves in the position of the guest speaker who after being lavishly introduced to the audience looked around and wondered who was being introduced. Was it he himself or someone else?

I have been looking into a thick volume published recently, which consists of a collection of surveys about Jews, the aim of which is to give us an insight into the social pattern of the Jews of America. We are told that the volume contains nearly a half-million words, and that it was done by specialists. These specialists we learn are in the employ of the American Jewish Committee, the American Jewish Congress, B'nai B'rith, the Jewish Board of Guardians of New York, and others. My feeling was somewhat like that of the guest speaker. Am I like that?

Needless to say, this volume hardly contains all the surveys available. I daresay that such surveys would fill many half-million word volumes. And the end is not in sight. The number of surveys keeps multiplying. Surveys of large cities, small towns, neighborhoods, societies, and of small "sample" groups.

But last year the Federal Government issued a study of religious affiliations among the American people which is brief but extremely significant.

As everyone knows the official census conducted by the Federal and State governments does not include any reference to religious affiliations or to matters of faith in general. Hence the figures on the number of Protestants, Catholics and Jews in the United States were unofficial. Various religious groups conducted studies among their own congregations and published figures. Their accuracy was never doubted, but it was questionable how complete they were.

And now the Bureau of Census published a study made during the year 1957 on "Religion Reported by the Civilian Population of the United States". The study was made on a sample of the population in 638 counties and cities, and the question of "What is your religion?" was asked of civilians over 14 years of age only, and military personnel and people employed by the government were excluded from this study.

The results are very significant. They tell us a few facts about ourselves, some of which we did not know, and others which needed confirmation.

We learn that there are now in the United States about five million Jews. That means that Jews comprise 3% of the population in the United States. Protestants make up 66%, Catholics 26%, and the remainder belong to other faiths or prefer to call themselves Free Thinkers.

The Jews are concentrated in big cities. That is not new. But the census gives definite information on that point. Fully 96% of our people live in cities, and 69% are concentrated in the cities of the Northeastern part of the United States. This figure becomes significant when we learn from that same report that only 26% of the general population lives in that area.

Only 8% of the Jews live in the South, while 31% of the general population lives in the Southern states. This concentration in the East is hard to explain now. In the days of the great waves of immigration it was natural for the newcomers to remain close to the ports of entry, in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, or Boston. They did not venture further West or South for obvious reasons. But why their children and grandchildren should still remain in such concentrations in the same areas is not so easily explained. Can it be that the family ties among Jews are so great that children stay close to their parents rather than spread out into new areas?

On mixed marriages we find some interesting facts.

Among Protestants the number of mixed marriages is 9%. Among Catholics it is as high as 22%. Among Jews the percentage is 7%, and the total of families of mixed marriages among the Jewish population today is 98,000. The breakdown is also of interest: 57,000 Jews are married to Protestants, and 41,000 to Catholics.

We also learn that the birth rate among the Jews is low, and is on the decline, while it is rising among Protestants and Catholics.

This fact is no doubt related to the urban nature of the Jewish population. The birth rate is higher among the rural population and lower in the cities.

Finally we are told in this census that 9,000 non-white people are Jews, and that 8,000 of them are women.

Two items in this report make this survey valuable.

It takes the guessing out of the number of Jews in the U. S., and it establishes the percentage of intermarriages among Jews. No two existing surveys could agree on these two points, and the discrepancies were especially great with regard to the number of intermarriages. There is a survey placing the number of intermarriages as high as 30% in Iowa, and as low as 3% in New Haven, and many percentages in between for other localities. The estimate of 7% given in the Bureau of Census report might well be the correct national average.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own. His views are not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

Says Hate Literature Has Been Increasing

ALBANY — Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz said last week that "there had been a substantial increase in "hate literature." He asked a legislative committee to look into the matter.

In a letter to Assemblyman Joseph R. Younglove, Republican of Fulton County, chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee on Offensive and Obscene Material, the Republican Attorney General said:

"A matter of deep concern to all right-thinking people is the increase in these publications."

SYD COHEN

Signs of Spring

The poet once rhapsodized that "if winter comes, can spring be far behind?" In New England, we have an even better barometer. A new season is in the borning when (1) Manager Higgins asserts that Billy Consolo will be given a thorough trial at shortstop, and (2) there is talk of the promise in the right arm of Willard Nixon.

The first thesis hasn't occurred yet, but just give Higgins time. He'll get around to Consolo's chances as soon as he emerges from the hibernation into which he usually enters each autumn (I am sorely tempted, and find it difficult to refrain, from saying Mike goes into hibernation at the beginning of each season, following the close of spring training. But I just won't be that nasty this far in advance of the opening game).

As for Nixon, he's loose, literally and figuratively. There is a whole article about him (complete with picture) in this week's Sporting News. His sore arm, says Will the former Yankee killer, is all set. And Nixon says he expects to come back as good as ever. He might have added, for the benefit of those Red Sox hopefuls who are new at this stuff, that his best never was too good, if you spread it over any full season. Nixon once achieved the super-monumental task of winning 12 games while losing 10. It was an exhausting performance; Willard never got over it, or came up to it.

So now he is confident of coming back as good as ever! Oy, is this ungood!

Which reminds me of something Jimmy Piersall said a couple of weeks ago, following his establishment as the center fielder of the Indians. Quoth Jimmy, as have other (unnamed) Sox players during this very off-season:

"There are two things the Red Sox should do in order to get set for a pitched battle with the Yankees: 1 — Tighten up the defense, mainly the infield (modest fellow, that centerfielder). 2—Crack down on the players. That is, get a little tougher."

How's that again, James? "Keep the players on their toes, like the Yankees do. I mean, keep them worried. Nobody ever says anything to the Red Sox players". Meaning, presumably, that the Cronin-Higgins combine believes that complacency is a more admirable policy than pressuring the boys about the insecurity of their jobs.

It must be true. This column quoted other Boston players in almost the same vein just a few months back. Now where are those characters who think Higgins did a good job considering his material?

Anyway, Spring is almost with us, men! As soon as Higgins gives us the word on Consolo, it will be official.

To sort of prove that 1958 was just as screwy a year as any other of recent vintage, this column listed several sports oddities last week.

Then there are the prophecies that went wrong in 1958 — aside from my own, that is. This annual list always is good for a couple of hearty chuckles. For instance, here are some predictions, the dates on which they were made, the names of the men who made them, and editorial comment on how they turned out:

January 7 — "... I would not come out of retirement if I were traded to another club." — Quarterback Norm Van Brocklin. (The Los Angeles Rams traded him to Philadelphia, and he played.)

January 11 — "I'm awfully confident I'll be pitching a lot more this year than I was before." — Gene Conley, Milwaukee Braves. (Confidence is good for the soul, not necessarily for the arm. Gene hurled only 72 innings, later turned to pro basketball to get some activity.)

January 17 — "We can't help but have an upward movement." — Roy Hamey, Phillies' general manager. (What the Phils couldn't help was dropping from fifth place into the National League cellar.)

January 21 — "Frank Baumann is ready to become a big winner." — Johnny Murphy, Red Sox farm director. Also, "Baumann can mean to this club what Mel Parnell used to." — Manager Mike Higgins. (Sorry to aggravate open sores, but Frank appeared in ten games, won 2 and lost 2.)

February 3 — "Tim Thompson should do as well for us as Frank House. He'll hit 15 home runs. He'll get a fair chance." — Jack Tighe, who at the time was Detroit Tigers manager. (Whether Thompson would have hit 15 homers is academic. His fair chance lasted for two weeks, when he was sold to Toronto.)

February 19 — "Jim Hegan is the catcher we've been looking for." — John McHale, Tiger general manager. (After all that looking, the Tigers couldn't see Hegan. Jim was sold to the Phillies in July.)

March 1 — "Thirty victories is a modest total for my brother Von and me this year." — Lindy McDaniel, Cardinals. (Lindy wasn't modest enough. Von was farmed out in May. Lindy followed after posting five big league wins.)

June 15 — "We are getting a good sinker-ball pitcher in Bill Fischer. They won't get many home runs off him." — John McHale, Tigers. (Fischer gave up 12 homers in only 67 innings before being sold to Washington.)

August 12 — "What we need is timely hitting, not a new manager." — Gabe Paul, Cincinnati general manager. (What the Redlegs got was a new manager.)

September 30 — "Whitey Ford is the key to the outcome of the World Series. If he's right, the Yankees have a fine chance to win it." — Jackie Robinson, and other experts. (Whitey failed to win a game in three starts, but the Yanks still won the Series.)

November 11 — "I deny those reports that I'm planning to quit in the immediate future." — Bennie Oosterbaan, Michigan football coach. (What Bennie means when he says "immediate future" isn't exactly clear. He quit just three days later.)

Rhode Island's
Sports Awards

By now you know that the Sports Award show presented annually by the local group of sportswriters and sportscasters known as Words Unlimited is in the planning stage, and that it will be held Thursday, Feb. 12 at spacious Hope High School auditorium. It bears repeating that the admission charge will be only $1.50 for what is guaranteed to be one of the finest sports programs ever held here.

Because each headliner will be announced simultaneously on radio and TV and in the newspapers on a pre-arranged release date, I cannot list all the highlights and "name" speakers here. One of the features, however, will be a showing of the 1958 World Series movies — in color, no less — in a 35-minute re-creation of last Fall's thrilling seven game classic. There will be more to the Series than just the film, as you will learn later.

Can't say yet that "they're going fast!" because the tickets have just come off the presses. They do go on sale next Monday night. A call to this or any other newspaper's sports department will tell you where to get them.

Meanwhile, watch for the announcements next week of Rhode Island's Athlete of the Year, and Coach of the Year. Can you guess the names of the winners?

CALL FOR CAMPAIGN

PHOENIX, Ariz. — A call for the Phoenix community to initiate a campaign of educating immigrants in the principles of American democracy was voiced by the Jewish Community Council as a result of the arrest of a German immigrant youth charged with anti-Semitic violence against a local Jewish family and a Jewish nursing home.

The 21-year-old former member of the Hitler Youth movement, Reinwald Lewitz, and two other youths were said to have signed confessions admitting a four-month crime spree including an attempt to set fire to the Kivel Nursing Home, firing nine bullets into the home of William Himmel-farb, and an arson attempt on the Himmelfarb home.

The Dog and his Shadow

Carrying a bone in his mouth, a dog crossed a river on a narrow bridge. He saw his own image reflected in the water and decided that it was another dog with a bone larger than his. Consumed with envy, he opened his mouth to grab the other bone and lost his own.

The man who has a planned Sun Life of Canada insurance program need envy no one. For no one can better face the future than the man who, through the medium of life insurance, has provided for his retirement years or, if he should not survive, for his family's future security.

Life insurance is my profession and I am at your service. Why not call me today? You will be under no obligation.

Christmas Carol for 1959

*This year when I bought Christmas gifts
I learned that I'd been rash;
I hadn't saved my money,
and I was short of cash.
Well, next year's shopping will be fun!
INDUSTRIAL I'll thank.
Today I joined the Christmas Club
at "Everybody's Bank".*
