

Dr. Mordecai M. Kaplan

Dr. Mordecai M. Kaplan To Open Lecture Series

Dr. Mordecai M. Kaplan, theologian, author, founder of the Society for the Advancement of Judaism and founder of the Reconstructionist movement, will be the opening lecturer of the 1959 series of the Institute of Jewish Studies for Adults of Temple Emanuel on Wednesday at 9 P.M. in the temple auditorium. The title of the Dr. Kaplan's address will be "What Makes Jewish Religion Jewish?"

The second speaker of this lecture and study group series, now in its 32nd consecutive year, will be the Reverend Charles A. Baldwin, Chaplain of Brown University, who will speak on "Youth on the Campus — 1959 Model" on November 11.

Other speakers in the series are Dr. Lawrence H. Fuchs, chairman, Department of Politics, Brandeis University on "The Political Behavior of the American Jew" on Nov. 18; Dr. Morris N. Kertzer, national director of Inter-Religious Affairs, American Jewish Committee on "Lessons from Oriental Jewry — An Eye-Witness Report of Jews in Asia" on Dec. 2; Dr. Harold Weisberg, professor of Philosophy, Brandeis University and director of Brandeis summer school on Dec. 9.

Study courses preceding each lecture will cover Conservative Judaism; New Songs of Israel; Literature of the Old Testament; Beginners' Hebrew.

The institute is open to the general public.

Israelis Keep Busy At Politics

TEL AVIV—From the Lebanese border in the north to the port of Elath in the south, Israelis were busy at politics according to a New York Post article by Joseph P. Lash.

It was the Sabbath but even in the synagogues, once the religious services were over, the talk was of the coming elections.

Party orators criss-crossed the country side, with some 2,000 political meetings scheduled for the weekend, a large number of them in Tel Aviv which, with one-fifth of the 1,200,000 electorate is the great unknown of the campaign.

The biggest Tel Aviv rally is scheduled for Herbert Samuel Square. It will be addressed by former Ambassador Abba Eban and former Chief of Staff Moshe Dayan in their only appearance together in this campaign, though both are members of the moderate labor party, Mapai.

No Parades, No TV

Despite the bustle of activity, this campaign is a muted affair. This is partly because of ordinances banning loud speaker trucks touring the streets, and partly because of a gentlemen's agreement among the parties. There are no torchlight parades and there is no television.

Israel is a country so small and compact that the political meeting still has importance in reaching the public. Before election day on Nov. 3, Prime Minister Ben Gurion will have spoken to 400,000 people and Eban to 300,000.

The other ways the 24 parties reach the public are by paid advertisements in the newspapers, billboard posters and time on the government-owned radio.

The paid advertisements all feature the letter of the Hebrew alphabet by which the candidate lists are identified on the ballot. Mapai is "A" or "Aleph;" the religious front "B" or "Beth." A "Beth" advertisement this weekend says religious demands in the Knesset have always been countered by Mapai with the answer

"that may be the opinion of 15 per cent representing the religious electorate; the rest of the population, representing 85 per cent is opposed." The ad then calls on supporters of the Torah to "wipe out the 15-85 fiction."

Arms Issue: Few Takers

A religious party ad shows a devout Jew looking at a ship on which crates of goods marked "export to Germany" are being loaded. He holds the Bible in his hands and reads "not for export." But the issue of arms sales to Germany has not caught fire with the public.

Mapai posters feature pictures of Ben-Gurion with the slogan: "Say Yes to the old man." The opposition Herut Party, successor to the underground Irgun, has countered with a poster: "A pension to the old man." Another Herut poster shows Ben-Gurion standing on his head, a reference to his Yogi exercises, and is captioned: "And he calls Beigin a clown."

That is the way Ben-Gurion denounced the parliamentary antics of Menahem Beigin, leader of Herut.

Disclose Existence Of 'Nazi Storm Troop' In Virginia High School

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — The existence of a "Nazi Storm Troop" of about 20 high school boys was disclosed here as police made known the arrest of three teenaged anti-Semites. The group was suspected of defacement of property with anti-Jewish slogans, arson and theft of rifles and ammunition.

Police said some of the youths were linked with George Lincoln Rockwell, self-styled commander of a neo-Nazi organization in near-by Arlington.

Rockwell, a former naval officer, spread anti-Jewish propaganda in the nation's capital area for two years.

Youths aged 14, 17 and 18 are accused in the fire bombing of the home of the vice mayor of Alexandria. Anti-Jewish and Nazi slogans were pasted on the doorway.

At a juvenile court hearing, the 14-year-old pleaded guilty to arson. Sentencing was postponed for two weeks.

Juvenile court jurisdiction was waived on the 17-year-old who was ordered held for grand jury action on charges of conspiracy and violation of probation. The 18-year-old Lloyd J. Conner, was held for the grand jury on arson and burglary charges.

The father of the 14-year-old revealed the existence of the Nazi "Storm Troopers" at the local high school. He indicated the movement was inspired by Rockwell.

Complete Plans for D-Day

With the 1959 total thus far running more than $50,000 ahead of last year's figures, campaign leaders expressed confidence that Sunday's D-Day will be one of the most successful in the history of the General Jewish Committee. Leonard Y. Goldman, chairman of the intensive one-day house-to-house canvass, said that plans are complete.

Headquarters this year will be at the Commodore Room at Johnson's Hummocks. Captains and workers will report promptly at 9 A. M. for breakfast, Goldman said. Following breakfast, the workers will receive a final briefing and instructions and cards will be distributed for solicitation.

Mr. Goldman said that by 10 A. M. or shortly thereafter the captains and workers will go to their designated territories in the Greater Providence area to solicit prospective contributors.

Workers will report back to headquarters with the results as soon as they have completed their card coverage. A tentative tally of the D-Day results will be made at headquarters as soon as all workers have turned in their results.

D-Day is the final major event in the 1959 campaign and the leaders and workers have announced that they will make an all-out effort to add a substantial amount to the present campaign total which now stands at $450,000.

Henry J. Hassenfeld, GJC president, and Joseph K. Levy, general campaign chairman, said that this total represents a substantial increase over last year's figure from the same number of contributors.

Mr. Goldman announced that D-Day captains are Irving Ackerman, Harvey Blake, Joseph Block, Leo Cohen, Murray Cohen, J. Fred Coleman, David C. Dressler, Abraham Factor, Harold Fink, Harry Finkelstein, James Goldman, J. Goldsmith, Abraham Goldstein, Irving Gordon, Nathaniel Gouse, Leonard Granoff, Leo Greenberg, Leroy Haft, Saul Hodosh, Harold Homonoff, Irving Kaplan, George Katz, Alvin Kramer, Charles B. Kushner, Julius M. Licht, Richard Loebenberg, Nathan Ludman, William Mills, Aaron Mittleman, Harold Moskoll, Gerson Parmet, Max S. Portney, Arthur H. Rosen, Burton Salk, Kenneth Salk, Sigmund Saltzman, Joseph Schlossberg, Sol Selinker, Philip Simon, Milton Stanzler, Louis Strauss, Joseph Teverow and Samuel H. Wilk.

B'nai B'rith Head Asks Revision In Jewish Education

NEW YORK — The head of B'nai B'rith has criticized what he terms the "hesitancy" of the American Jewish community "to face up to its religious educational problems with the same vigor that it approaches social and philanthropic issues."

Label A. Katz, president of the 116-year-old Jewish service organization, warned last week that the "cultural upswing in Jewish life that is finding its best hope and impetus among young people is being thwarted by a haphazard and negligent approach to the need of their religious education."

He made these observations at a news conference at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel after the completion of a four-month tour of the country following his election last spring as the fourteenth president of B'nai B'rith. Mr. Katz, a resident of New Orleans, is 41 years old and is the youngest man to become president of B'nai B'rith.

Mr. Katz cited a recent analysis that concluded that Jewish education today was a "mile wide and an inch deep" and held that the educational content in Jewish schools was lagging behind the increasing enrollments.

He called attention to the lack of facilities and attributed the failure in Jewish education to "adult short-sightedness." He added that Jewish educators were "underpaid, overworked and short in number — boxed in by the lack of attention that is given to the problem."

Schools Woefully Inadequate

Mr. Katz held that the Sunday schools and afternoon Hebrew school study were "woefully inadequate, doing little more than perpetuating a kind of juvenile Judaism that has little relationship to religious and cultural life for the student in his later years."

In calling for "drastic revisions in Jewish religious education, Mr. Katz declared that until "this is accomplished, we will be short-changing our youngsters, arresting the cultural maturity of the largest Jewish community in the world."

The Jewish community, he said "ought to take a long, hard look at the quality of its all-day (parochial) Jewish schools and explore their short-comings."

A well-financed, coordinated effort by Jewish communities, he said, "could eliminate the physical shortage, open new and modern approaches to curricular development and expose Jewish youngsters to a religious education that would be relevant to their needs and interests."

Mr. Katz advocated that Jewish educators and religious leaders join with group workers to establish "higher standards of religious education."

This contact can be made only if the king of hearts is bare in either hand. It is impossible to get into dummy to finesse trumps without ruining the entries into dummy required to set up a spade trick, without which there are always four losers. So at trick two after a club led to the ace, she laid down the ace of hearts and followed it with the queen of spades. East won, cashed his club trick, and returned a diamond. This was taken in dummy and a small spade led and trumped. Dummy was entered again with the ten of hearts; the jack of spades was led, covered by East with the ace, and trumped by South. As the ten of spades fell from West's hand on the third round South could enter dummy with the queen of trumps and discard two losers on the two spades for an over-trick.

In bridge, as in life, there are many situations where success can only be achieved by making an optimistic assumption about the unknowable. Two women were the only two Souths to choose this line of play, which suggests that in these situations at least the incurable optimism of the female psyche has its reward.

Politics

A shopkeeper translated a poster of Mapam, a left Socialist party that favors a neutralist foreign policy.

"It is for a reduction of taxes," he explained.

"Is that good?" he was asked.

The shopkeeper replied: "Yes. But Mapam wants taxes to be reduced only on workers' incomes."

He pointed to a Progressive Party poster: "They want to reduce everybody's taxes." The Progressive Party, headed by Hoshe Kol and Pinhas Rosen, Minister of Justice, is like the Liberal Party of Great Britain. It was the most faithful and responsible participant in Ben-Gurion's various coalitions, but held only five seats in the Knesset.

Obituary

SAMUEL KATT

Funeral services for Samuel Katt, 52, of 80 Chaplin Drive, Kenmore, N. Y., formerly of Providence, who died Oct. 23 in Buffalo, N. Y. after a short illness, were held Monday at the Max Sugarman Funeral Home. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

The husband of Melrose Katt, he was born in Russia, a son of the late William and Esther (Pauster) Katt. He came to this country as a child and attended Providence public schools.

For the last ten years he had been president of the Bailey Construction Company of Buffalo.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a daughter, Miss Frances Katt, of Buffalo; two sons, Harold Katt of Miami, Fla., and Elliott Katt of Buffalo; a sister, Mrs. Herman Gentile of Cranston, and four brothers, Harry Katt of Providence, Max Katt of Buffalo, and Hy and David Katt, both of Detroit, Mich.

LOUIS LISKER

Funeral services for Louis Lisker, 69, formerly of Providence, a professional entertainer, who died on Oct. 23 in Long Island, were held the same day in the Riverside Chapel, New York. Burial was in Cedar Park Cemetery, New York.

A native of Providence, he lived on the East Side for many years. He sang and played piano, usually at private parties, from Long Island to Florida. He was working in Southampton, L. I., in this capacity when he was stricken.

A son of the late Samuel and Bluma Lisker, he moved to New York City about 30 years ago. His mother was one of the founders of the Miriam Hospital in Providence and was active in the organization of the Jewish Home for the Aged.

He had worked in this city as an entertainer and musician and sang in church choirs, principally at Grace Church.

He is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Jacob Hochberg of Providence, Mrs. Albert Brody of Haverhill, Mass., and Mrs. Samuel Acker of New York City.

Mrs. Marvin A. Lerman, who was married at Temple Emanuel on Oct. 25, is the former Miss Maxine Sandra Schwartz.

Society

First Son Born

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Libman of 91 Lexington Avenue announce the birth of their first son, Steven Bradley, on Oct. 5.

Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Zettel of Providence. Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Libman of Worcester, Mass. Great-grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Louis Zettel of Woonsocket.

Lerman-Schwartz

Miss Maxine Sandra Schwartz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Schwartz of 92 Meridian Street, was married to Marvin A. Lerman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Saul Lerman of 79 Lauriston Street, on Oct. 25 at Temple Emanuel. Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen, with Cantor Jacob Hohenemser, officiated at the ceremony, which was followed by a reception. Mrs. Sidney Factor was soloist.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride was gowned in ivory peau de soie with long sleeves, a bateau neck, fitted bodice with applique of alencon lace and a bouffant bustle back ending in a chapel train. Her tiered illusion veil fell from a crown of orange blossoms and seed pearls. She carried a Bible with a cascade of orchids, stephanotis and white roses.

Miss Barbara Lerman, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. She wore a blue brocade gown with a bateau neck, puffed sleeves with a bouffant skirt and a matching rosette crown with a nose veil. Bridesmaids were Miss Cynthia Berlinsky, Miss Freyda Glantz, Miss Phyllis Schwartz and Miss Susan Bedrick. They were dressed in Persian blue silk taffeta with scoop necks, puffed sleeves and wore matching rosette crowns with nose veils. All carried cascades of white fujis and pom poms.

Kenneth Abelson was best man. Ushers were Roy Schwartz, brother of the bride, Donald Dwares, Murray Zaretsky, Louis Roses, Richard Oresman and Rick Germani.

The mother of the bride wore a sheath of ice blue satin with bugle beads and chiffon rosettes on the scoop neckline and an orchid. The bridegroom's mother was gowned in blue brocade with a bateau neck, fitted bodice, puffed sleeves and a bouffant skirt and carried a matching clutch bag on which an orchid was fastened.

After a wedding trip to Miami Beach, Fla., the couple will make their home in Providence.

Rubin-Sharp

At an afternoon ceremony at the bride's home on Thursday, Oct. 15, Miss Helen Laura Sharp, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ezra Sharp of 365 Olney Street, was married to Richard H. Rubin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rubin, of 416 Clinton Road, Brookline, Mass., and "Woodcove," Manchester, Maine. Dr. Israel M. Goldman, D.D., uncle of the bride, officiated at the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in ivory peau de soie, designed with a sweetheart neckline, a fitted bodice, short shirred sleeves and a full skirt, which ended in a chapel train. She wore a Venetian lace mantilla. Her bouquet was a crescent of phalaenopsis orchids, stephanotis and ivy.

Mrs. David L. Brodsky, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore aqua and blue brocaded satin with a bell skirt, a draped sweetheart neckline and short sleeves. She carried a bouquet of stephanotis and ivy. Alan A. Rubin was best man.

After a wedding trip to Europe, the couple will reside at 24 Robinson Gardens, Lewiston, Maine.

The bride attended Lincoln School, Smith College and the Harvard Graduate School of Education. Mr. Rubin attended Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., and Harvard College, and the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

To Be Guest of UJA—Rabbi Irving Miller, chairman of the American Zionist Council, and Miss Miriam Hadar, Miss Israel of 1958, will be the guests of the combined men's and women's divisions of the Blackstone Valley United Jewish Appeal at a meeting and dance which will be held in the Garden Room of the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel on Sunday. Cocktails will be served from 7 to 8 P.M.

Rabbi Miller has made frequent trips to Israel. On his most recent trip he participated in important discussions with Israel's top leaders. The American Zionist Council of which he is chairman, represents all organized Zionist bodies in America with an aggregate membership of 750,000.

ORGANIZATION NEWS

GREAT BOOKS SERIES

The second meeting of Great Books Discussions Series will be conducted at the South Side Jewish Community Center this Tuesday beginning at 8 P. M.

This semi-monthly program is open to all adults and young adults interested in an open discussion on some of the great writings of the past and present. Subject of this Tuesday's session will be the Declaration of Independence. Copies of the Declaration will be furnished to those attending. Discussion leader will be Mrs. Albert Gallo, who has been trained by the Great Books Foundation. Those planning to attend are asked to register at the Center office in advance, since only a limited number of openings now exist.

Enrollments are now being accepted for a similar series to be conducted at the East Side Jewish Community Center Building.

JEWISH BOOK MONTH

Temple Emanuel will mark Jewish Book Month at its next regular meeting to be held on Monday at 1 P. M. in the Temple meeting house. Mrs. Charles Reitman, program coordinator, will present Mrs. Jerrold Franklin, English teacher and the wife of a Brown University professor, who will give a review of Herman Wouk's new book, "This Is My God."

Mrs. Harry Dimond is over-all chairman for the meeting and Mrs. Burton Finberg is in charge of hospitality.

MEMBERSHIP TEA

Pioneer Women, Sabra Chapter, Evening Group, will hold their Membership Tea on Monday at 8 P. M. at the Sons of Abraham Synagogue.

Mrs. Aaron Klein will present a book review. The S. S. Center Golden Choral Club will entertain.

THIS WEEK WE ARE HAPPY TO PRESENT

An Orchid To...

Mrs. Harry Fowler

Martha Fowler has always been actively interested in community causes. She has never said no to any request for her help and participation, and has been a particularly hard worker in the annual campaigns of the General Jewish Committee. A member of the board of the Women's Division, she has served at various times as chairman of M-Day, co-chairman of Initial Gifts, and chairman of Vital Gifts. During the current fund raising drive, she was area chairman for the upper East Side for M-Day. She has played an important role in the GJC Women's Division.

A Carnation To...

Jacob I. Felder

The venerable Mr. Felder has for many years been one of the leading figures in Jewish life in Rhode Island. He served with distinction for a number of years as president of the Home for the Aged, and his administration saw great gains brought to the Home. Mr. Felder is a member of the board of the General Jewish Committee, and continues in an active role in the annual campaigns now as he has in past years. He has served as an area division co-chairman, and he currently is working to raise funds in the Trades and Industry Division.

Chairmen Announce Final Plans For Y-Day

Irving Weinreich, vice-president of Victor Company, and Samuel A. Olevson, Providence attorney, co-chairman of the GJC Young Adult Division Y-Day, have announced final arrangements for the one-day house-to-house canvass, which will take place on Nov. 8.

The Young Adult Division and the Cranston USY will co-sponsor a record hop with disc jockey, Howie Holland, on Saturday evening. A special worker's rally, featuring Miss Miriam Hadar, will be held on Sunday at 3 P. M. at the Temple Emanuel auditorium.

On Y-Day, workers in the Providence area will assemble at 9 P. M. in the Garden Room of the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel at which Mrs. Archibald Silverman will speak. Miss Ruth Green will direct activities for workers in the Cranston-Warwick area who will assemble for breakfast at 9 A. M.

at the Cranston Jewish Center.

A victory Dance for all workers will be held at the East Side Jewish Community Center from 8 to 11 P. M. following the solicitation. Music will be by Marty Curran and his orchestra. Awards to groups and individuals will be announced at this time.

Thomas W. Pearlman, general chairman of the Young Adult Division

FOUNDATION STONE
 NAZARETH in Galilee, Israel. —The foundation stone for the first Jewish synagogue in Nazareth in modern times was laid recently in a solemn ceremony attended by representatives of the Jewish Christian and Moslem faiths.

Nazareth has 24 Christian churches and one Moslem mosque. Speakers expressed hope that the new synagogue would symbolize a continued spirit of brotherhood between the adherents of the various religions in this historic Galilean town.

ORGANIZATION NEWS

YOUNG ADULTS

Sheldon Rothschild has been elected chairman of a special planning committee of the Young Adult Association of the Jewish Community Center. The group is now developing plans for its 1959-1960 program year.

Named as co-chairman was Miss Sylvia Zuckerman. Miss Estelle Rosenberg was elected secretary-treasurer. Other board members named are Robert Roth, Sanford Gold, Miss Paula Eckstein, Miss Adrienne Backman, Bernard Gordon, Everett Shiffman, Irving Zeidman, Morris Lipson, David Epstein, and Martin Uffer.

The Young Adult Association is planning a Thanksgiving weekend dance at the East Side JCC building on Wednesday evening, Nov. 25. Plans are also being made for a Chanukah Ball at the Sheraton-Biltmore on Sunday, Dec. 27.

The group is sponsoring weekly Young Adult Canteen Nites at the South Side Center building, on Tuesday and Sunday evenings at 8 o'clock.

JUNIOR CONGREGATION

Services of the Junior Congregation at Temple Emanuel will resume on Saturday. Pupils in grade Gimel will hold their own services, conducted by Mrs. Aaron Klein, in the chapel. Pupils of grade Daled and above will meet in the school auditorium, where the services will be conducted by Dr. Aaron Klein and other members of the weekday school staff. Services will begin at 10 A. M. and end at approximately 11 A. M.

MR. AND MRS. CLUB

The Mr. and Mrs. Club of the South Side Jewish Community Center will conduct a "Post-Halloween Party" at the South Side JCC building this Sunday beginning at 8 P. M.

The affair will be open to all adult Center members. Program chairman, Mrs. Herbert Rothschild, has planned a variety of party games, dancing, prizes and refreshments. Dress will be informal, no costumes required.

FETED AT DINNER

Arthur I. Darman, Woonsocket industrialist and civic leader, was honored Sunday at a party for his 70th birthday given at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel by more than 200 friends and neighbors.

A check for $6,000 was presented to Mr. Darman as a birthday present. He will contribute this money to the building fund for a new Jewish temple in Woonsocket.

Siegmund Berger of Woonsocket was chairman of the dinner committee, assisted by Israel Medoff and Morton Smith.

ATHLETIC ACTIVITIES

The Jewish Community Center opens its fall-winter indoor athletic schedule this Sunday.

The East Side Center will use the facilities of its George Friedman Memorial Health Center and the Nathan Bishop Jr. High School gymnasium. The South Side Center will schedule activities at its own gymnasium, and at the Roger Williams Junior High School gymnasium.

Among the activities being offered are adult men's handball, basketball, volleyball, and gymnastics; teen basketball, weight lifting, body-building, and wrestling, and elementary school gym. In addition, women's "Centerella" figure control classes are being offered at the East Side Center.

The East Side program will be directed by Richard King, while Anthony Neri will direct the South Side program.

PLAN CAKE SALE

Dodeem B'nai B'rith Girls will hold a cake sale on Thursday at Almacs Super Market on Waterman Street from 4 to 9 P. M. The proceeds will be used for various B'nai B'rith projects.

MIZRACHI WOMEN

The Mizrahi Women's Organization of America will hold their national convention from Nov. 8 through 11 at the Breakers Hotel, Atlantic City, N. J.

Delegates who will attend the convention from the Providence Chapter include Mesdames Harry Yuloff, Morris Lecht, Philip Plushner, Morris Fishbein, Sarah Zatzsky and Ralph Shuster.

A Wise Choice

Among the twenty men and women of Rhode Island who were honored by Brown University recently because, according to President Barnaby C. Keeney, they "have distinguished themselves in their several ways in service to Providence, to Rhode Island and to the nation in which we live," were Irving Jay Fain and Benjamin Brier, leaders in the Jewish community for many years. Both men were wise choices for the awards they received.

Mr. Fain, who has many business interests and is secretary and vice-president of the Apex Tire and Rubber Company as well as an officer of several other firms, has participated widely in national as well as local affairs. He is a past president of the Urban League and he served as 1958-59 general chairman of the Citizens United for a Fair Housing Law in Rhode Island.

Jewelry manufacturer, president of the Brier Manufacturing Company of Providence and the Nemo-Brier, Ltd., of Quebec, Canada, Benjamin Brier has been a leader in many of the Jewish organizations in Providence. He is a trustee of Temple Emanuel and a founder of the General Jewish Committee of Providence. He has also served as president of the Miriam Hospital. Last June he was named a Fellow of Brandeis University.

Although the interests of Mr. Fain and Mr. Brier lie in different fields, they both have in common the fact that whatever they have undertaken, they have done thoroughly and wholeheartedly. They have given much of their time to the service of the community in which they live and have served not in just one phase of charitable and communal affairs but in varied activities.

Because of the interested and devoted endeavor of these two men, the community has been enriched, and they both well deserve the recognition accorded them by Brown University.

We have a tendency to take for granted much of the work done by our leaders. Recognition of this sort brings out sharply that many of our citizens are accepting and fulfilling their responsibilities to their local community, their state and their nation.

In The Herald

Ten Years Ago This Week

Dr. Myron Keller was re-elected president of the Temple Emanuel Men's Club.

A check for $160,000 was presented to the United Jewish Appeal by Archibald Silverman, president of the General Jewish Committee of Providence, Inc., at an emergency meeting held in Washington, D. C., to point up the appeal's crucial need for immediate cash for its program of relief and rehabilitation in Israel.

Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen of Temple Emanuel was elected president of the Rabbinical Association of Rhode Island at the annual elections.

Mrs. Thomas Goldberg and Mrs. Ephraim Feingold were co-chairmen of the Jewish Home for the Aged Women's Association Annual Linen and Equipment Shower.

Twenty Years Ago This Week

Sydney J. Hoffman was general chairman of the 35th Anniversary celebration of the Rhode Island Workingmen's Beneficial Association.

Mrs. Jacob Licht was chairman and Mrs. Benjamin N. Kane was co-chairman of the annual dinner-dance of Temple Beth Israel which was to be held on Dec. 12.

Mrs. Louis Smira was chairman of the Annual Women Pioneers Concert which was planned for December.

Samuel M. Magid and Judge Philip C. Joslin were elected president and vice-president respectively for their seventh term at the annual meeting of the Home for the Aged.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Rabbi Meir, The Wonder Worker, And The Noble Prize

BY BERYL SEGAL

The frail old woman in the ward of the Strong Memorial Hospital at the University of Rochester was weak and undernourished. She needed perfect rest, good care and nourishing food. The rest and the care were given to her by the hospital, but the food, the food she would eat, the hospital could not give her. The nurse in charge of the ward was worried. Three times a day the food tray would be brought to her bedside, and three times a day the meals were untouched. The old lady would ask for hot tea and toast and would accept only fruit juices. The nurse told her problem to the young intern assigned to the ward. He examined the patient's chart, then bent over the old lady's bed and spoke to her in Yiddish.

A smile brightened her pale wrinkled face. She sat up and she held on to him. She told him of her fears of eating non-Kosher food. The intern explained to her that she must not be particular now. She must eat well so that she might go home soon and become a "bale-boste" in her own kitchen. He suggested a menu that would not be too offensive to the old woman's habits and yet be sufficiently nourishing. The patient did as the young intern advised.

Day-by-day the young intern would visit with his patient for a therapy session in Yiddish. Before she left the hospital, the old woman embraced the young intern and told him of her resolution; as soon as she comes home, she will drop a few coins in the charity box of Reb Meir Baal Nes, Rabbi Meir the wonder worker. He, the Holy Man, whose bones rest in the Holy Land will surely see to it that the intern who was so kind to her may become a great and famous doctor.

Was it because of the blessings of the old woman and the intercession of Reb Meir Baal Nes? Who knows? But the young intern at the old woman's bedside is now the co-winner of the 1959 Nobel prize for research in the medical sciences, Dr. Arthur Kornberg.

The anecdote about the old woman and the intern was told to a member of the staff of the Yiddish daily newspaper "Forward" in a conversation with the Nobel Prize winner's brother and sister in New York. In granting the interview, they assured the reporter that their brother would be happy to know of the story in the newspaper which was the daily companion of his father and mother and grandfather who could read no other language, and spoke no other language.

As I read this interview and considered the background of the Nobel Prize winner, I realized that it is a precious document. It is a study of Jewish life in America. From cloak-shop-workers to Nobel-Prize-winner in one generation.

The parents of Dr. Arthur Kornberg came to America at the turn of the century from a little town in Galicia, Austria. Like so many other immigrants who swarmed to the New York shores during these years, they were swallowed up by the giant needle trade industry. Father Yosef Kornberg, a sample cloak maker. Mother Leah, a cloak finisher. Grandfather David Kornberg, a cloak presser. The hours at work were so long, and the wages so meager.

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

Vladimir Nabokov, the author of "Lolita," tries to avoid interviews. When he recently arrived in Paris he immediately was surrounded by waiting reporters who questioned him about "Lolita"... In the cloak shop, the two young immigrants met. In the round of union meetings and public lectures they learned to know their new country. And when Yosef and Leah married and children came, they were determined that their offspring would not spend their days in the cloak trade.

And so Arthur as well as the brother and sister were sent to College. Not Ivy League colleges. City College of New York was all they could afford. Not a college your son is likely to attend.

But apparently neither poverty nor humble beginnings can block the way to greatness, providing the spark of greatness is present.

During the past three years, the Nobel Prize in Medical Research was awarded to three young American scientists, who are sons of Jewish immigrants. The pattern of the background of the three young scientists has many things in common.

Jonah Salk, the son of a small business man.

Joshua Lederberg, the son of a Rabbi.

Arthur Kornberg, the son of a cloak-maker.

The three began life in traditional Jewish homes, went to public schools, and their colleges were not among the Great Name schools.

The three men had few luxuries in their youth, and relied on their own resources at an early age in life.

The three men are known to be dedicated to their work and have resisted the temptations of lucrative jobs with private enterprises, and have not given in to the lure of profitable private practice of medicine, preferring to engage in their research as underpaid assistants and professors.

The three men fondly remember their Jewish education as children, which did not in the least deter them from their goals.

And America does not think of them the less as American scientists because of their unadulterated Jewishness.

A Wise Choice

Among the twenty men and women of Rhode Island who were honored by Brown University recently because, according to President Barnaby C. Keeney, they "have distinguished themselves in their several ways in service to Providence, to Rhode Island and to the nation in which we live," were Irving Jay Fain and Benjamin Brier, leaders in the Jewish community for many years. Both men were wise choices for the awards they received.

Mr. Fain, who has many business interests and is secretary and vice-president of the Apex Tire and Rubber Company as well as an officer of several other firms, has participated widely in national as well as local affairs. He is a past president of the Urban League and he served as 1958-59 general chairman of the Citizens United for a Fair Housing Law in Rhode Island.

Jewelry manufacturer, president of the Brier Manufacturing Company of Providence and the Nemo-Brier, Ltd., of Quebec, Canada, Benjamin Brier has been a leader in many of the Jewish organizations in Providence. He is a trustee of Temple Emanuel and a founder of the General Jewish Committee of Providence. He has also served as president of the Miriam Hospital. Last June he was named a Fellow of Brandeis University.

Although the interests of Mr. Fain and Mr. Brier lie in different fields, they both have in common the fact that whatever they have undertaken, they have done thoroughly and wholeheartedly. They have given much of their time to the service of the community in which they live and have served not in just one phase of charitable and communal affairs but in varied activities.

Because of the interested and devoted endeavor of these two men, the community has been enriched, and they both well deserve the recognition accorded them by Brown University.

We have a tendency to take for granted much of the work done by our leaders. Recognition of this sort brings out sharply that many of our citizens are accepting and fulfilling their responsibilities to their local community, their state and their nation.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Rabbi Meir, The Wonder Worker, And The Noble Prize

BY BERYL SEGAL

The frail old woman in the ward of the Strong Memorial Hospital at the University of Rochester was weak and undernourished. She needed perfect rest, good care and nourishing food. The rest and the care were given to her by the hospital, but the food, the food she would eat, the hospital could not give her. The nurse in charge of the ward was worried. Three times a day the food tray would be brought to her bedside, and three times a day the meals were untouched. The old lady would ask for hot tea and toast and would accept only fruit juices. The nurse told her problem to the young intern assigned to the ward. He examined the patient's chart, then bent over the old lady's bed and spoke to her in Yiddish.

A smile brightened her pale wrinkled face. She sat up and she held on to him. She told him of her fears of eating non-Kosher food. The intern explained to her that she must not be particular now. She must eat well so that she might go home soon and become a "bale-boste" in her own kitchen. He suggested a menu that would not be too offensive to the old woman's habits and yet be sufficiently nourishing. The patient did as the young intern advised.

Day-by-day the young intern would visit with his patient for a therapy session in Yiddish. Before she left the hospital, the old woman embraced the young intern and told him of her resolution: as soon as she comes home, she will drop a few coins in the charity box of Reb Meir Baal Nes, Rabbi Meir the wonder worker. He, the Holy Man, whose bones rest in the Holy Land will surely see to it that the intern who was so kind to her may become a great and famous doctor.

Was it because of the blessings of the old woman and the intercession of Reb Meir Baal Nes? Who knows? But the young intern at the old woman's bedside is now the co-winner of the 1959 Nobel prize for research in the medical sciences, Dr. Arthur Kornberg.

The anecdote about the old woman and the intern was told to a member of the staff of the Yiddish daily newspaper "Forward" in a conversation with the Nobel Prize winner's brother and sister in New York. In granting the interview, they assured the reporter that their brother would be happy to know of the story in the newspaper which was the daily companion of his father and mother and grandfather who could read no other language, and spoke no other language.

As I read this interview and considered the background of the Nobel Prize winner, I realized that it is a precious document. It is a study of Jewish life in America. From cloak-shop-workers to Nobel-Prize-winner in one generation.

The parents of Dr. Arthur Kornberg came to America at the turn of the century from a little town in Galicia, Austria. Like so many other immigrants who swarmed to the New York shores during these years, they were swallowed up by the giant needle trade industry. Father Yosef Kornberg, a sample cloak maker. Mother Leah, a cloak finisher. Grandfather David Kornberg, a cloak presser. The hours at work were so long, and the wages so meager.

In the cloak shop, the two young immigrants met. In the round of union meetings and public lectures they learned to know their new country. And when Yosef and Leah married and children came, they were determined that their offspring would not spend their days in the cloak trade.

And so Arthur as well as the brother and sister were sent to College. Not Ivy League colleges, City College of New York was all they could afford. Not a college your son is likely to attend.

But apparently neither poverty nor humble beginnings can block the way to greatness, providing the spark of greatness is present.

Failure Of A Forecast

The appointment of Charley Dressen to manage the Milwaukee Braves emphasizes this column's wisdom in getting the heck out of the forecasting business. Trouble is, the column didn't quit making its unpredictable predictions on time. The announcement in this space that there would be no more out-and-out forecasts of events to come followed by a few months the positive assertion that Birdie Tebbetts had joined the Milwaukee organization for the sole purpose of working smoothly into the managerial ministry.

Sports writers normally are fond of pointing to their soothsaying only when time and events have proved them right. "The (un) good is oft interred with their bones."

Alas, such a state of blessed obscurity is not for me. My arguments in favor of the proposition that Tebbetts was meant to succeed Fred Haney were so convincing, or at least, so thought-provoking, or something, that they have not been forgotten. Since I am constantly reminded of them, I must needs own up to them.

Pride goeth before a fall, quoth a bard of yesteryear. Ods bodkins, how in the world could he have known of me?

Last week, the papers told how Lou Perini was trying to convince Tebbetts to pick up the vacant managerial portfolio. It looked so good that Birdie was already being hailed as the new manager. Downtown, I met two fans who flattered me by remembering that I had predicted this a long time ago. "You were right!" they exclaimed. Modesty to the background, I must admit I beamed. Twice more during the week, other readers offered their felicitations. Man, this was nectar for the gods!

And then the Braves lowered the boom. Tebbetts would not take the job. Dressen was named!

Well, a week has passed, and the pieces have been picked up, and business is going on as usual. The bouquets have been tossed into the trash barrel, and now we roll up our sleeves and start slugging away at the perpetrators of the dastardly deed, under the premise that a good offense is still the best defense.

Well, what gives with this situation? It has fooled the best-known experts all over the country, including sources who are very close to the Milwaukee front office.

Comes now an opinion—strictly a guess, it must be admitted—that so far is unsubstantiated by anything I have read from other quarters. This is one of those times when a man feels that he is right, and the world is wrong. In other words, I stoutly stand by my original reasoning: to wit, that the Braves hired Tebbetts with the managership in mind.

The fly in the ointment, and this is part of my surmise, came in the reaction to the hiring of Tebbetts, and the manner in which the hiring took place. That reaction, which is described below, wounded Tebbetts deeply, drove John Quinn out of Milwaukee in favor of a general managership elsewhere, and upset the entire Braves organization almost to the point of demoralization.

Here's what happened, step by step. First, Birdie Tebbetts' Reds, after a tremendously successful campaign the year before, had fallen flat on their faces. Tebbetts, manager of the year with a third place outfit the previous season, now was hung in effigy in Cincinnati. Toward the end of the season, he resigned.

Shortly after that, rumors began to fly that Tebbetts was coming to Milwaukee. How the news leaked is not known. However, the Braves were caught with their pants down. They had not intended to release this story until after the World Series. They were startled to learn about it in the Milwaukee papers several weeks ahead of their own timetable.

Faced with this situation, the Braves' front office did a very stupid thing. It was decided to deny the story categorically.

So it was that from Perini to Quinn to Haney, Milwaukee stoutly denied that the story had any substance. Caught in this squeeze, Tebbetts, who as it turned out, already had signed a long term contract with the Braves, made statement after statement that he had not been approached by Milwaukee officials, that he had no agreement with the club, that he knew nothing of Milwaukee's interest in him.

These foolish denials continued, believe it or not — and this is absolute fact — until the very day before the Braves introduced Tebbetts as their new vice-president.

That's when the reaction took place. The sportswriters and sportscasters were furious. They denounced the organization, and Birdie in particular, for such systematic and deliberate lying. Birdie's integrity took a public beating. It was a real donnybrook.

Then the press took its revenge, and it is this factor that I deem significant (again, this is my guess) in view of what happened last week. Stories began to appear that Tebbetts had been brought in as John Quinn's superior. It was thundered that this was a heck of a way to treat John, who was directly responsible for putting the Braves at the top of the baseball world. Why hadn't Quinn himself been moved up to vice-president in appreciation of his efforts? Further, the accusation was made that Tebbetts had come to look over Haney's shoulder, and take over the club at the first opportunity.

All these charges very likely were untrue. But now, when Milwaukee denied them, the denials themselves only seemed to emphasize that something was being hidden from the public, as in the case of the hiring of Tebbetts.

The direct result of all this was that John Quinn found himself in an intolerable position, and had to quit. This was an eventuality that neither Perini nor anyone else had even imagined; certainly, it was an event that none of them desired.

Another result — and this is strictly my own opinion — is that Tebbetts was so deeply hurt by all that had transpired, by the damage to his reputation that his lying had done, by the bitterness that had developed between the press and him and Perini, and between him and supporters of John Quinn, that he swore that he would not now, under any circumstances, undertake to manage the Braves.

In many public utterances since his official appointment, Birdie repeated that theme, although he always left the door open a bit to protect him if he did decide to return to the field as a manager. Naturally, his words were not taken seriously; and his eventual appointment to succeed Haney seemed foregone.

Wrong as my prediction was, I would be willing to bet on the result if Birdie Tebbetts could be given an injection of sodium pentathol, the so-called truth serum, and asked this question:

"Birdie, isn't it true that the Braves, when they signed you, intended you to be the field manager to succeed Fred Haney?"

If his answer in such a case should be anything but "yes," I would forthwith demand an analysis of the ingredients of the serum.

In short, I'm a hard man to convince. Bloody — yes! But also unbowed!

TO START NOAR IVRI

A Noar Ivri, Hebrew Speaking Youth Group, is being organized under the auspices of the Hebrew Culture Council, according to an announcement by Alter Boyman, president of the Bureau of Jewish Education.

The group will be for boys and girls in the high school grades. Those interested in joining may list their names at the Bureau office. Joel Sharir will serve as advisor to the group.

The Hebrew Culture Council will also sponsor an advanced Hebrew Study Course it was announced by Mrs. Charles Potter, chairman. Men and women who have completed the equivalent of Book II, Ivrit Hayah, may enroll in the course.

CRANSTON SISTERHOOD

"Rhapsody in Blue," a modern jazz ballet featuring the Jerry Gordon dancers will be presented at the monthly meeting of the Sisterhood of the Cranston Jewish Center which will be held on Wednesday at 8:30 P. M. at the Center.

All choreography is by Jerry Gordon. Mrs. Reuben Karten is program chairman.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

On this day, in October of 1929, there were no giant corporation pension funds in Wall Street buying stocks for income and profit. For, odd as it may seem to the millions of younger Americans who think we've always had pensions to protect us in our older years, as a practical matter, there were no pension funds in our land as recently as 1929.

Now, though, corporation pension funds alone hold over $9 billion of stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange. In the past decade, pension funds have increased their ownership of stocks 1,720 per cent!

On this day, 30 years ago, there were no mutual funds in Wall Street investing day after day the savings of millions of us in long lists of stocks for income and profit. The investment company movement had been born, but it was an infant, and it was to be all but destroyed in the stock market collapse of 1929-32.

Now, mutual funds alone hold $10.6 billion of stocks listed on the Big Board in New York, 620 per cent more than they owned a decade ago. Other investment companies hold another $4.4 billion.

On this day, in the blackest month of Wall Street's long history, it was the INDIVIDUAL who overwhelmingly dominated the stock market. Big or small, investor or speculator, professional or amateur, the stockholder in 1929 was primarily an individual.

Now this is no longer true.

A great and growing force in the stock market is the institutional investor—the pension fund, the mutual fund, the savings institution, the life insurance company, the personal trust fund, the foundation.

Here is another of the fundamental distinctions between the markets of 1929 and 1959. And, although no one can yet grasp the full significance of this development, we know it is of towering importance.

On an average day, institutional investors now account for one-quarter of all trading on the New York Exchange (against practically zero in 1929). Last year institutional investors bought $3 billion more shares of stock than they sold.

Home For The Aged Event

Mrs. Max Leach, chairman of the Annual Linen Event of the Ladies' Association, Jewish Home for the Aged, has announced that the date and place of the event has been changed. The affair will take place on Thursday, Nov. 19, at 1:30 P. M. at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel.

Women who will model for the Fur Fashions by William H. Harris include Mesdames Peter Bardach, David Daniels of Woonsocket, Marvin Holland, Ira Kanter, Harvey Menco, Louis Millen, Melvin Rosen and Fred Weingeroff. Mrs. Cathy Powell will be commentator. Among the door prizes are one week's vacation for two at the Shoreham-Norman Hotel and Villas in Miami Beach; a vacation for two at Grossingers; and a weekend at Englewood Cliffs Milk Farm in New Jersey.

TO LAUNCH DRIVE

The launching of the Miriam Hospital Women's Association 1959 Equipment Event drive in communities outside of Providence will take place after a coffee hour on Thursday at 1 P. M. at the home of Mrs. Owen Kwasha of Cranston.

Mrs. Lewis M. Goldstein, Pawtucket, chairman, will be assisted by Mesdames Ruth August, Philip Baron, Martin Buckler, Ruth Champaign, Leonard Holland, Marvin Holland, Nathan Levitt, Alan Novogroski, Mitchell Sack, Warren Schreiber, Ralph Semonoff, Sam Shaver, Ben Sinel, Joseph Thaler, Aaron Weinstein and Irving Wolf, Jr.

In the Cranston and Warwick areas, Mrs. Melvin Hoffman is chairman and will be assisted by Mesdames James Abeshaus, Norman Bienenfeld, Arthur Blackman, Raymond Cohen, Newton Cohn, Owen Falcofsky, Herbert Galkin, Milton Jacobs, Sherman Kaufman, Irving Sigel, Allen Strauss, Justin Strauss and Charles Weisel.

Other outlying district chairmen are Mrs. Martin Goodman and Mrs. Robert Robbins, Woonsocket; Mrs. Max Furman, East Greenwich; Mrs. Murray Kay, Bristol and Fall River; Mrs. Gilbert, East Providence and Mrs. Kwasha, Newport.

MISS HADAR TO SPEAK

Miss Miriam Hadar, Miss Israel of 1958, will be the guest speaker at a Young Adult Y-Day rally to be held Sunday at 3 P. M. in the Temple Emanuel auditorium. A motorcade will escort Miss Hadar from the airport. There will be a question period after her talk.

JUNIOR HADASSAH

The first meeting of the Providence Chapter of Junior Hadassah will be a membership brunch which will be held at the home of Mrs. Eli A. Bohnen at 500 Elm-grove Avenue on Sunday at 11:30 A. M.

An explanation of the ideas and goals of Junior Hadassah will be presented by Maxine Roy, president, and Joan Wasserman, a guest from Brandeis University and a national Junior Hadassah board member.

Girls, 16 years of age and older or juniors in high school, are invited to attend this meeting. Transportation can be arranged by calling Maxine Roy at DE 1-8561, or Joy Cowen at PL 1-5742.

Reports Polish Jews Fed and Sheltered

GENEVA — None of Poland's 40,000 Jews is hungry or shelterless, Charles H. Jordan, European director of the Joint Distribution Committee said recently on his return from a 10-day tour of Poland.

"Conditions are in marked contrast with what we found when we resumed welfare operations in Poland two years ago," he said.

"We came into the country primarily to meet the needs of the thousands of Jews repatriated from Russia. We found, however, that large groups of the settled Jewish population—the aged, the invalided, the unemployable and their families—were not eligible for public relief or were receiving a stipend insufficient to meet their needs."

20,000 Aided in Year

He said the JDC "has served 2,000 men, women and children during the past year with emergency relief, housing assistance, cash grants, feeding programs, medical assistance, vocational training through ORT, religious education and supplies, care of the aged and support of a summer camp program for children."

Jordan reported that with Max Braude, ORT director general, and Samuel Haber, assistant director of JDC in Europe, he was received by Stanislaw Zawadzki, Polish Minister of Labor and Welfare. He said Zawadzki praised the results achieved by JDC and ORT.

Jordan also met leaders of Jewish cultural, social and welfare groups and the Vaad Hakehilot.

"The Vaad Hakehilot operates 16 canteens in which hot, kosher meals are served six days a week," he said. "These canteens supplement the cash relief we provide to 7,535 families and our school feeding programs through which 2,500 children are served daily. Thus every needy Jew in the country is insured of a daily supply of food."

All Records Broken During 5th Anniversary Event At Sullivan's

All previous sales records at Joe Sullivan's Steak House and the Howard Johnson's Room, popular Providence restaurant at 1303 North Main Street, opposite Sears, were reported smashed during the restaurant's recent fifth anniversary celebration.

Originally intended to last for one week, the anniversary celebration had to be extended for another week because of the popularity of the charcoal broiled steak dinner that was advertised as the highlight of the event. This dinner, normally offered for $2.70, was served for only $1.76 in the Howard Johnson's Room.

A careful kitchen tally revealed that more than 6,000 of these steak dinners actually were served. This bettered by far all previous records for any two week period.

The 6,000 figure was beyond the wildest dreams of the weary but happy management, which found its facilities taxed to the utmost, despite the addition of extra kitchen and dining room personnel.

Many patrons reluctantly had to be turned away and asked to return the following week, and the Restaurant's normally ample parking facilities were strained beyond their capacity.

When it was all over, the entire staff was unanimous in the opinion that the fifth anniversary celebration was the biggest and most successful event held at any time during those five years. This opinion was eloquently substantiated by the sales receipts and records.

A delighted, grateful, and most appreciative management extended its thanks to its many patrons and friends, and pledged that it will reciprocate by offering similar outstanding dinner specials in the future.

John D'Alessio, managing director, also offered the reminder that booking for Christmas parties and other social events are now being taken for the charming Colonial Room, attractively situated upstairs over the famous Hickory Room. Completely private, the Colonial Room provides accommodations for up to 90 persons. Menus are sent on request. Information may be obtained by calling TE 1-4143 or TE 1-4576.

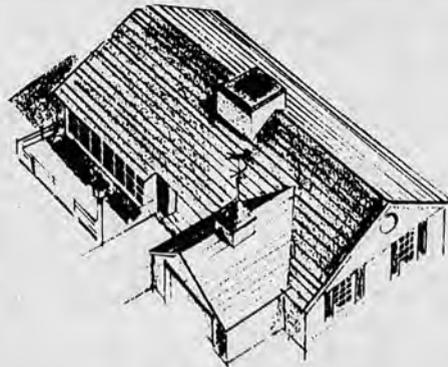

WHY BETTER BUILDERS INSTALL OIL HEAT!
And Why YOU Should, Too!

The better builders, who represent the vast majority of Rhode Island contractors, put the best in homes they build to make the home sell faster, satisfy the buyer more. So it's natural that they'd install oil, the fuel that provides better, safer, more dependable heat for less money.

These are the same reasons why you should insist on oil heat. If the home you're building or buying has oil heat you know it's a quality built home.

If it doesn't have oil heat — change it — it's so easy and costs so little. Get a free estimate now.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Right now institutional investors hold $45 billion, or 16.3 per cent, of the $276 billion of stocks listed on the Big Board. Just pension funds and investment companies own 8.6 per cent.

And dwarfing even these types of institutional investors are the commercial banks which in their personal trust accounts hold $31 billion of common stocks.

What sort of operators in the stock market are these?

They are typically buyers for the long term, choosing stocks that they expect over the years will grow in value as the nation grows.

They are typically indifferent to intermediate, temporary price fluctuations, and are not under pressure to sell in any particular market.

They are typically holders of high-grade securities, representing established corporations which have proved their worth.

They are typically continuous buyers, investing funds as they receive them, and buying securities both on price rises and declines.

Each characteristic emphasizes more than the last, how dramatically different the institutional investor is from the individual—particularly from the individual speculator.

What, then, does this development imply?

It suggests that a new, professional force has entered the stock market since 1929, which should help stabilize prices. During last month's stock price break, for instance, many mutual funds went on a buying spree.

It suggests that the individual is being replaced in many instances by the institution and this too should be a force for stability since the institutional investor buying for a 10-20 year pull presumably will be less volatile than the individual buying for a one-two year pull.

It does imply this is, in fact, a "new era" stock market.

SPECIAL SERVICE

A special Sabbath service will be held tonight at the Cranston Jewish Center conducted by Rabbi Saul Leeman. Cantor Jack Smith will chant the liturgy. The consecration ceremony will welcome beginners into the Hebrew school and will start at 7:30 o'clock.

APPOINTED CHAIRMAN

Bernard J. Margolis, a vice-president of the Bureau of Jewish Education, has been appointed chairman of the National Survey Committee.

Mr. Margolis said that it will be the purpose of his committee not only to study the National Survey on Jewish Education which was recently completed under the aegis of the American Association of Jewish Education in terms of its broad application to Jewish education in the United States, but particularly with regard to its significance for developments in Jewish education in Providence.

TO PRESENT BOOK REVIEWS

In conjunction with Jewish Book Month, the Sisterhood of Temple Beth Israel will present a program of capsule book reviews at its next meeting on Monday at 8:15 P. M. at the Temple.

Participating in the program will be Mrs. Sol Resnick who will review "The Second Scroll" by A. M. Klein, Mrs. Leonard Sholes who will discuss "Across the Threshold" by Shonie B. Levi and Sylvia R. Kaplan, and Mrs. Israel Tabatsky who will review "For Two Cents Plain" by Harry Golden.

Mrs. Jerome Levy, vice-president in charge of program, is chairman of the evening. A coffee hour will follow.

ANNUAL DINNER DANCE

Mrs. Walter Chucnin is chairman of the annual Dinner Dance of Temple Beth Israel which will be held on Saturday, Nov. 7, at 6:30 P. M. in the ballroom of the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel.

Mrs. Chucnin will be assisted by a committee which includes Mesdames Arthur Richman, program book; Abraham Ralsner, reservations; Oscar Levy, dinner; Maurice Weisman, music; Benjamin Elman, invitations; Julius Lightman and Maurice Cohen, decorations; Aaron Bromson, treasurer; Meyer Mushlin, telephone; Harold Chase, publicity, and George Berk, ex-officio.
