

Adenauer Sends Message Deploring Hitler's Reign

WASHINGTON — Chancellor Konrad Adenauer informed a major America Jewish organization that West Germany was waging an "uncompromising battle against anti-Semitism in courts, press, radio and private associations."

In his special message to the American Jewish Committee, Dr. Adenauer said that the German people "are fully aware of human rights of liberty promulgated in the German Constitution."

He then made sharp reference to the Hitler period, declaring that "recent dictatorship on German soil gave an awful lesson in experience as to what befalls a people, disregarding these rights."

The message was addressed to the agency's board, holding its annual meeting at the Shoreham Hotel here.

"Anti-Semitic Phenomena"

Dr. Adenauer emphasized that all efforts of his government "for the reconstruction of Germany and the re-establishment of friendly relations with the free nations would be endangered unless democracy is firmly anchored in the conscience of German citizens."

He said "anti-Semitic, anti-democratic phenomena" had come to the surface in Germany, but he said they should not be over-estimated. Before the Hitler period, it was estimated that Germany had a Jewish population of 450,000. About 25,000 live there now.

Dr. Adenauer's message followed a recent meeting in Bonn with Irving M. Engel, honorary president of the American Jewish Committee. The 53-year-old committee is devoted to combating bigotry and discrimination and the furthering of intergroup relations.

Addressing the dinner session of the agency, Mr. Engel termed the Hitler period "Germany's undigested past, which, if not faced and dealt with, could represent a grave danger to the future of Germany's democracy."

Mr. Engel, a New York lawyer, stressed that a major area of concern was "education of German youth for citizenship."

He asserted that Chancellor Adenauer's government "already has done a great deal to compensate victims of Nazism for their material losses." But he stressed that more must be done "to demonstrate to the uncommitted peoples of the world the impact of democracy."

He reported that West Germany's educational system had made some progress in teaching political science, civics and citizenship in the schools and labor unions and through adult education.

In this connection, he urged that West Germany and the United States exchange "experiences for the purpose of eliminating intergroup and interracial tensions."

Morocco Discussed

In another address, Herbert H. Ehrmann, Boston lawyer and president of the agency declared

U. S. Grant To Aid Israel Scientists

JERUSALEM — A five-year $125,000 grant was made last week by the United States National Health Institute to three Weizmann Institute scientists for continued study on the basic protein components of cells of living tissue.

Recipients of the grant are Prof. Ephraim Katchalski, chairman of the Institute Biophysics department, and Dr. Michael Sela and Dr. Arieh Berger of the same department to continue and expand their work on Polyamino Acids as protein models. Their study also covers research on the chemical properties and biological activity of the acids.

The Hadassah School of Nursing here will be expanded into a university-level institution to meet the demands of Israel's growing nursing profession, it was announced here last week by the director general of the Hadassah Medical Organization, Dr. Kalman Mann, at the 41st graduation exercises of the institution. Twenty-seven nurses were awarded diplomas at the graduation ceremonies.

New Drive on Jews Noted In Provincial Newspapers

NEW YORK — Soviet provincial newspapers and reports of travelers recently in the Soviet Union indicate that there has been a sharp increase in Soviet attacks against Judaism and religious Jews. Anti-Semitic violence was reported to have increased.

The most striking example of anti-Jewish material in the press was contained in the Sept. 27 issue of Dnestrovskaya Pravda, published in Tiraspol, Moldavia. Three articles that occupied more than a page of this issue were devoted to attacks on Jews and Judaism.

The major article was presented over the names of three Jews who declared they had renounced Judaism. They called it a fraud and accused various religious Jews in that city of being thieves. An unsigned article in the same issue said synagogues in the United States served "the ruling circles of the U.S.A." and termed Judaism "the enemy of the revolution and of socialism."

A third article in the same issue asserted that a woman identified as Shendel Iosifovna Roitman, a Jewish name, had tried to bribe school officials to have her daughter enrolled in a teachers institute.

The paper also carries a cartoon showing Jews practicing deception by means of an alms box.

However, the newspaper refers at one point to Premier Khrushchev's mention of the role of Jews in Soviet rocket success and at another point to many outstanding Jews in the world.

Material attacking religious Jews as thieves and picturing them as engaged in illegal activities is contained in the Ukrainian-language newspaper Kiyvska Pravda for July 29 and in the Smolensk newspaper Rabochi Put for September 13.

Synagogues have recently been reported closed in Tiraspol, Uzhgorod, Chelyabinsk, Royno, Drobych, Brest, Karaganda, Tashkent, and Samarkand. In the last two cities the closed synagogues were reported to be those of European Jews, while the synagogues of the Bukharan Jews, a Central Asian branch of Judaism, Fact or Fiction?

Jewish Juvenile Delinquency Increases

By Helen L. Elias

The current attitude in Providence toward our teenage boys and girls is like the famous story of the blind men and the elephant. The frightening "elephant" of teenage misbehavior appears different to each person you talk to.

Ask George Katz, director of the "Big Brothers of Rhode Island", and he says "Ninety percent of our Jewish children are no worse than any others. The child is only acting out his rebellion against parental restraints. We Jewish parents are over-protective. Our kids are not brought up to be fighters, or even to face up to any physical contact. Then when they go into a school like Nathan Bishop and maybe get shoved around a little, we get all excited."

Then an intelligent, conscientious Jewish mother of two teenagers living on the East Side says "My daughter is in a group that could easily develop into a neighborhood gang of delinquents, just because one child is a bad influence."

A prominent pediatrician who specializes in behavior problems, Dr. Eric Denhoff, has this to say: "I feel the teenager is being picked on. I am impressed by the high moral stability of Jewish girls."

And another well-known pediatrician and child psychiatrist, Dr. Herman Marks, gives this as his opinion; "I do not think this is a big or serious problem. Most Jewish children don't act out their aggressions anyway. Instead, they internalize them and get ulcers!" But then he added, "There is more alcoholism among young Jewish people today than ever before."

Another parent adds: "The community is missing the boat on children's problems. Most parents are hungry for knowledge about how to handle their youngsters and would welcome help. An organization like the General Jewish Committee should inaugurate community planning for our young people, in addition to its fund-raising activities. And I think that guidance in the schools should do more at the grade school level."

And the boys and girls themselves, what do they think? Many of them, like the group called "The Hubs" at the Community Center, police themselves as far as safe driving goes, with their own rules, a system of demerits, and a 'court' to pass sentence on their members who violate these rules.

In the opinion of Mark Forman, Youth Director at the East Side Center, the young people are caught between their natural drive for independence and a search for reasonable limits, imposed by their elders.

"Adolescence is the age of uncertainty", continues Mr. Forman. "The kids wonder . . . how much do my friends like me or do they like my car? Would she go out with me if I didn't have a sharp convertible? Should I drink if all the other fellows do?"

Of course every age has viewed the younger generation with alarm, probably since Biblical days, but now our children are driving, dating and drinking at an earlier age than ever before.

"Let a 16 year old boy have a car at night and take out a 14½ year old girl, and you're asking for trouble", says Mr. Forman. "What's more", he adds, "if the parents have no respect for the law, how can the kids? The boy sees his father go 70 miles an hour on a 50-mile-an-hour road, and he gets the idea that break-

Middle East Still Tense Says Israeli

NEW YORK — If the the rest of the world is relaxing the Middle East is not, according to Jacob D. Herzog, minister plenipotentiary of the Israeli Embassy in Washington.

He told 1,000 persons at the 21st annual lunch of the Jewish Teachers Community Chest, meeting in the Waldorf last week that "the Arab attitude toward Israel and the relations between the Arab states themselves are totally removed from the context of general international trends."

He added: "There are dangerous undercurrents in the Middle East that may come to the surface at any time. Thus far, the Middle East situation remains unaffected by the relaxation of international tension."

The Arab mind, Herzog said, "has been brought face to face with the threat to its own destiny and the integrity of the Middle East. Although their hatred has not abated one has the impression that Israel is no longer the central issue."

The Arab states, he said, are learning that Israel has "growing stability and peaceful intent," and they also are resisting the personal ambitions of Egypt's President Nasser.

Schools Supt. Theobald was cited during the meeting by the United Jewish Appeal in "grateful appreciation of his deep and abiding interest in the welfare of his fellow man, regardless of creed or background."

Suburban Jewish Family Becomes Matriarchy

The American Jewish suburban family has switched from "patriarchal" to "matriarchal" with the wife's ideas, opinions and values "clearly dominating" family life.

"The Jewish woman has acquired her new position of executive leadership by default," declared Rabbi Albert I. Gordon of Temple Emanuel, Newton, Mass., in his new book "Jews in Suburbia."

"Her husband, nice person though he may be, has become so completely engrossed in business affairs that he generally gives little attention to spiritual and cultural matters that involve his home and family."

Wife's New Status

"The husband's failure has led inevitably to the wife's new status," he asserts.

"The Jewish husband's position within the family has changed so markedly because his involvements with business affairs appear, in fact, to leave him little time for his family — at least, so he believes."

"He feels that it is his primary responsibility to provide for the economic welfare of his family."

USSR Press Publishes Anti-Semitic Articles

JERUSALUEM — The Soviet press, particularly that of the Ukraine, continues to publish anti-Semitic articles and cartoons, according to reports received here today.

One issue of Dnyesterskaya Pravda recently contained three anti-Semitic articles. The first, purportedly written "voluntarily" by three "old Jews," offered "disclosures" on "the lies and falsehoods of the Jewish religion" and on "dirty transactions" allegedly conducted in synagogues.

The second, headlined "What is Judaism?" describes the Jewish religion as a "reactionary movement linked with American States circles." The third is a "feuilleton" about "a Jewish mother's attempts to cheat Soviet school authorities to gain advantages for her daughter." The same issue carries cartoons of Jewish figures apparently engaged in illegal trading.

A recent issue of Kievskaya Pravda carries an article purportedly signed by two Jews describing black market activities allegedly conducted in synagogues. An issue of the Znamya Communist contains letters allegedly received from Israel complaining of "horrible conditions" there.

Jewish Students Favor Intermarriage

TUCSON, Ariz. — Jewish students attending the University of Arizona favor intermarriage by a ratio of two to one, according to a survey made by a university student for a minorities relations course.

The survey also showed that 59% Joel Botfeld, former president of the Tucson Jewish Youth Council. He charged that about 20% of the Jewish student population at the university were "college Marranos" who attended church services with their Gentile friends. He conducted the survey by means of a questionnaire among the 520 Jewish students on the University of Arizona campus. Slightly less than half answered the many queries.

The survey also showed that 59 of the students belong to the Hillel Foundation; 80% of the males have been Bar Mitzvah; 61% of the females had been confirmed; 78% attended Hebrew or Yiddish school, the average length of such study having been 6-1/2 years for males, 2-1/2 years for females, while 7% had no Jewish religious education at all.

Thirteen percent of the Jewish students do not attend High Holy Day services, and 40% attend classes on High Holy Days. Male Jewish students show the greatest amount of mixed dating, while a high percentage of the Jewish girls date Jews.

The Jewish college student today, according to Botfeld, "does not know what a Jew is. To him religion is basically a philosophy, but he does not know what the principles of his Judaic faith are." Much of the blame for the situation, in Botfeld's opinion, must be charged against the parents, who are seen by Jewish youngsters as doing at home "the exact opposite" of the Jewishness taught at the Hebrew school or Sunday school sessions.

GJC Contributions Reach $507,000

Leaders of the 1959 General Jewish Committee campaign today announced that contributions have passed the half million dollar mark.

Henry J. Hassenfeld, GJC president, and Joseph K. Levy, general campaign chairman, announced that contributions now total $507,000, which represents $52,000 more than in the 1958 campaign for the same contributors.

This total includes the results of Y-Day held last Sunday by the Young Adults Division of the GJC.

Some 300 boys and girls turned out for Y-Day. They covered approximately one thousand cards and collected two thousand dollars, an increase over last year from the same number of contributors in the Greater Providence area. About 70 other boys and girls met separately in Cranston under the direction of Miss Ruth Green and canvassed the Cranston area.

Another in a series of report meetings will be held next Tuesday at GJC headquarters, 203 Strand Building in downtown Providence.

The Young Adult division held a Victory Dance at the Jewish Community Center on Sunday evening to celebrate their successful one-day fund raising drive for the 1959 GJC campaign.

This year's plaque for outstanding work was awarded to six clubs, five for a 100 percent turnout and the other for the largest number of workers for Y-Day. They were Hillman AZA, Little Rhody AZA, Temple Beth-David USY, Senior Judea, South Side; ULPs, and Temple Beth-El Provty.

Individual awards for outstanding work and collections were given to Howie Hoffman of the Cranston USY, Jerry Engle of the ULPs, and Enid Burrows of the Judy Ann Levin BBG.

In Quest Of A Linotype Machine

The conduct of the Southern Negro in the emotional controversy over segregation will someday be recorded as one of the most noble stories of the human spirit.

It is fantastic that the Negro has not done a single thing wrong. Over eleven million people, half of whom are illiterate, another third of whom are semilliterate; a civilization of many sharecroppers, truck drivers and janitors--and they have not done a single thing wrong.

Their houses are bombed, and the Negroes say, "Let's go to church and pray for the fellows who have bombed our houses." A cross is burned on their hills, and the Negroes roast marshmallows in the embers.

It is as if the Negroes had suddenly seen the same vision that inspired the Founding Fathers of America and had become this age's greatest connoisseurs of true democracy.

It involves the process of going to the judge with a writ, and when the judge says, "You have not exhausted all your means of possible relief," the Negro says, "Thank you, I'll start all over again in the morning," and a year later he is back again with the writ, and his children march up to the public school, and they are stopped, and the Negro marches down still another road of peaceful recourse.

This response is all the more remarkable when we consider the real meaning of racial segregation:

You are fifteen years old, and you have never seen your father in anything but overalls, and you have never seen your mother in anything but a uniform on the way to another woman's home. A car pulls up in your filth-littered yard, and a man shouts to you, "Boy, tell Jim to come at seven o'clock tomorrow instead of eight," or, "Boy, tell Nettie not to come tomorrow." And Jim is your father. And Nettie is your mother. So if you take a carton of cigarettes off a truck or get behind the wheel of a car that is not yours--because of the degradation, the lack of self-esteem, the uselessness of trying to prove your individual worth--you know by instinct that a record of even four juvenile arrests will not disqualify you from that job of janitor which is waiting for you.

What are they talking about when Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia and Governor Marvin Griffin of Georgia demand that racial segregation remain part of the American culture? They are talking about human degradation and death. Because of the entire system of racial segregation, seven Negro women die in childbirth to one white woman. Because of the system of racial segregation, tuberculosis, which is eighth as the cause of death among the white race, is second as a cause of death among the Negroes.

And what about the effect on the Southern white children growing up in an atmosphere of evasion? Children pick up the paper every morning and see big headlines: We have a new scheme to "beat" the law.

And here is the greatest tragedy of all. The South has produced some of the most creative minds of the American civilization, but now creativity has come to a halt. This civilization is not thinking about foreign affairs. It is not thinking of the expansion of its educational and health facilities. No, it is preoccupied with the project of trying to keep a fifteen-year-old Negro girl from going to a public school.

Caste has been first, but sexual myth has also played a part in this human drama.

In my state, we have a white high school which has a linotype machine and other printing facilities to teach children this highly skilled trade. There is no Negro school with such facilities.

And so when the white men get together, they talk about the superstition that the Negroes want to go to bed with white women, and when the Negroes get together they talk about a linotype machine.

There was a great calm over the South after the Supreme Court decision. The South was waiting for leadership which never came. There was no leadership in the state capitals because the politicians saw an opportunity to ride this issue for another twenty years. A quarter of a century ago, we had Cotton Ed Smith, Mr. Heflin and Senator Bilbo. The fellows today are no different. Their approach is

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Thirty-Six Years Ago In Providence

BY BERYL SEGAL

On November 14, 1923, thirty-six years ago to the day, a group of men and women gathered to discuss some problems facing the Jewish community of Providence and to do something about them.

Before the meeting was over, this group established itself as the General Jewish Committee of Providence, elected officers, and decided to call a city-wide conference to which all the existing religious, fraternal and civic organizations would be invited. We note some remarkable things about this General Jewish Committee of 36 years ago.

The name is the same as that of the General Jewish Committee of today. Yet at the time of the founding of the GJC in 1923, no mention was made that an agency by that same name ever existed before, nor was the existence of this committee known to the Jewish Historical Association of Rhode Island.

The place where this committee met and decided on a course of action was at the Strand Building, room 212A. The General Jewish Committee of today is also located in the Strand Building, on the same floor.

The chairman of the General Jewish Committee of 1923 was Archibald Silverman. Mr. Silverman was also the first chairman of the General Jewish Committee of today.

And the problems taken up by that committee were very similar to those facing the GJC of today.

The story of that committee organized when your parents and grandparents were young came to light in a minute book kept by the secretary, John A. Solomon. Shortly before he died, Mr. Solomon brought the record book of the committee to the office of the Herald. That was during the moving days from the downtown office to the new Douglas Avenue plant. The book was packed away in a case and was discovered only recently.

Mr. John A. Solomon was a meticulous man, and his minutes reflect his personality. I doubt whether we have records of any other organization so well preserved and neatly kept as these of the General Jewish Committee that existed from 1923 to 1925, of which he was secretary.

The First Annual Conference at which the General Jewish Committee was officially launched was held at the Girl's City Club, 183 Weybosset Street, on January 13, 1924. Seventy-five delegates from 35 organizations took part in that conference. Mr. Solomon lists the names of the delegates and the organizations they represented. You may find your own name or the name of a relative on that list of delegates.

Many of the people whose names appear again and again on the Executive Board of the committee were just as active in today's General Jewish Committee as they were then. About half of the delegates to that conference are no longer with us.

First and foremost on the agenda of the General Jewish Committee of 1923-1925 was Immigration. Those were the years when transatlantic boats of the Fabre Line came regularly to the State Pier of Providence, bringing immigrants from Europe. Here the United States Immigration authorities examined the passengers, allowed them to disembark, or ordered their return to their countries. The State Pier was a scene of joy and laughter to some, and of tears and disaster to others.

The Jewish immigrants were met at the Pier by a committee headed by Alter Boyman and Archibald Silverman. Those who were allowed to get off the boats were taken to the Hebrew Sheltering Society. They were given their first meal on American soil. Some needed financial aid. Some wanted decent clothes. The committee attended to their needs until they were reunited with their relatives in this country. Some needed train fare to distant parts of the land. That, too, was provided for them.

At one of the meetings of the General Jewish Committee, Mr. Silverman reported that five hundred Jewish immigrants passed through the State Pier of Providence in 1924. All of them were received by the Immigration Committee and were given the necessary advice and assistance.

Alter Boyman was concerned about the naturalization of the immigrants. We read his reports at every meeting about this naturalization work. He personally attended meetings of various organizations urging the newcomers to apply for citizenship. At one meeting, he reported about the purchase of 100 booklets of the Constitution of the United States in English and in Yiddish, at the fabulous sum of $7.50. These booklets he distributed among the organizations where study groups were formed to prepare for the Naturalization tests.

These were the years when the famous Johnson Bill was before Congress. That bill would restrict immigration from European countries to a 2% quota, based on the census of 1890. This bill practically stopped immigration from Eastern Europe since very few immigrants from these countries came before the 1890's, and the 2% quota would be very small indeed.

A committee consisting of Rabbi Morris Schussheim, Joshua Bell and Joseph Smith prepared a resolution protesting the adoption of the Johnson Bill. The resolution was sent to the two senators Colt and Gerry, and the three representatives Aldrich, Burdick and O'Connor from Rhode Island. All of them responded favorably, and their replies on the Official stationery are preserved in the folder of minutes.

In addition to the resolution, the General Jewish Committee also called a mass meeting of Protest against the anti-immigration bill. The meeting was held at the Elk's Auditorium, on March 30, with a panel of speakers.

The Johnson Bill, unfortunately, was adopted with modifications, and immigration from Eastern European countries was reduced to a trickle. Jewish immigration was especially affected.

This is a chapter in the life of the Jewish community of Providence that has not been written as yet. I have heard on several occasions about the immigration work at the State Pier, in my conversations with Alter Boyman and Archibald Silverman. In the minutes kept by John A. Solomon, we get a full picture of the unbelievable efforts of these two men for Jewish immigrants who were destined to pass through the Port of Providence.

In future columns we will touch on the other phases of the work of the General Jewish Committee of 1923-1925. It is good to refresh our community memory. The people of the General Jewish Committee of those days should not be forgotten altogether.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own. His views are not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

HISTORY: "The Gang's All Here," with Melvyn Douglas portraying Warren G. Harding, is based partly on fact and partly on author's license. Ex-President Herbert Hoover, who was a member of Harding's Cabinet, is one of the few surviving authorities on that period in American history, and his "Memoirs" contain the proof of what was fact and what was fiction.

The Veterans Bureau scandal and the suicide referred to in the play really happened. The next day Harding asked Hoover: "If you knew of a scandal in our Administration would you, for the good of the country and the party, expose it publicly or would you bury it?" Hoover advised public exposure, so that there would be at least some credit for integrity. Harding never mentioned the subject again.

The poker game sessions in the play are true. Hoover witnessed one of those games in the White House, but refused to play. On that last, final journey to Alaska, Harding played bridge from morning till midnight. Hoover was one of the four other bridge players in the party, and they arranged shifts to give each a turn at relief. From then on Hoover acquired such a distaste for bridge that he never played it again.

The final scene of "The Gang's All Here," concerning the death of the President, is both factual and fictional. Harding did have an incompetent doctor diagnose his ailment as an aftermath of having tasted bad sea food. But it was Hoover who, after talking with an able young Naval surgeon and with Interior Secretary Work--who had been a physician--wired Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur to have heart specialists meet them at the train.

In the play the President's death follows his swallowing an overdose of pills. Hoover, who was there, reports that the cause of death "undoubtedly was a heart attack."

SYD COHEN
Lew Myers . . . 25
Years At Ledgemont

A long time ago as the years fly—in 1923, to be exact—the newly organized Ledgemont Country Club hired its first employee for its course in West Warwick. The man who achieved this "first" thereupon assumed the twin duties of golf pro and greenskeeper.

It is now about ten years since Ledgemont moved its operation to Seekonk, and, as has been noted, 36 years since it all started in the first place; but the passing of time and the change of locale have had no noticeable effect on the first employee Ledgemont ever had. The job of greenskeeper is now held by another—but Lew Myers, as he was at the beginning, is still the club pro.

Such a career cannot go unnoticed, and so the members of Ledgemont will honor Lew at a testimonial banquet this coming Sunday evening in honor of his 25 years of service.

Wait just a minute, now! How's that again? 1923 from 1959 is 36 years. How come this is billed as a 25th anniversary affair?

The answer is simple. There was one 11-year period in which Lew was away from Ledgemont. Sunday's banquet marks exactly his 25 years of service to the club.

In the years since he first decided to make golf his career, Lew Myers has racked up a long and impressive string of "firsts" and other accomplishments, and he has sat in on a number of very substantial and significant changes in the game he loves.

The names of famous golfers that have entered his life are newsworthy in themselves. To list just a few of the better known of these, there is Jean Bauer, almost perennial Rhode Island ladies champion a while back, and one time New York state titleholder. Lew helped substantially in her development. There is Glenna Collett Vare, one of the top all-time names in all golfdom, whom Lew Myers helped develop as a player when he was assistant pro at Metacomet prior to the opening of Ledgemont.

There are many others — all of them prominent golfers in their day, even if their names are not exactly household words today, so many years after the height of their fame. Lew was instrumental in fashioning their careers.

Golf certainly has changed since Myers first started playing near his native Ossining, N. Y., and particularly since he came to Rhode Island in 1915 to serve as assistant to his brother Eddie at Metacomet.

For one thing, Lew recalls when the would-be pro had to serve a five year apprenticeship; and for another, when the pro served, in addition to his principal duty, as groundskeeper, and club-maker, and in numerous other capacities.

Club-maker, you say? That's right! According to Lew, the old-time pro, back in the days golf clubs were made of hickory shafts, made these shafts himself, and even cut his own grips. Many pros, when their home seasons were done (golf was not then a year-round sport) took to the pro circuit. But others, who didn't care for the rigors of all that traveling, stayed at home, and made and repaired clubs. Artisans as well as stars they were!

Cutting the grass on the fairways and the greens today is such a routine and repetitious process that it is taken completely for granted. But Lew Myers can tell of the time when the grass was cut only during haying season, and then only by horse-drawn mower. And in order that the hooves would do as little damage as possible to the fairways, the horse set wore boots, no less!

Drainage was non-existent then, or at best, rather primitive. And where chemicals now keep the greens green the year round, it was the custom then to cover them with birch branches to keep the frost away.

Caddies now get from $2 to $5 per round; Meyers chuckles when he recalls that they once received 15 cents for the first hour, and 10 cents per half hour thereafter.

Most Eastern courses used to open on Decoration Day and close for the year on Labor Day. Now, with heated and spacious clubhouses, and all that goes with today's modernity, golf is a year-round sport, save for the periods of mud and deep snow.

As it has in all competitive sports, the prize money is different today than it used to be. Lew remarks that $100 used to be big money when he started out — and he won a good healthy share of it — now the winning purses are astronomical by comparison.

Earlier in his Career, Lew Myers was ranked as one of the top ten pros in New England. He held the course record at the old Ledgemont, and at a leading Florida course. He was one of the first of the pros to play the circuit, and he did this several years. He played in the first Opens held in Texas and Los Angeles. He finished with the leaders in the Texas, South Central, Beaumont, Florida-West Coast, St. Petersburg Miami and Massachusetts Open tournaments; and he was runner-up several times in the New England PGA championship tourney, in addition to tying for the Rhode Island Open.

Lew was president of the New England PGA for two terms, and served for several years as a member of the board of directors. He founded the N. E. PGA get together dinner that set the pattern for the efforts of pros, manufacturers, greenskeepers, club officials and members in promoting the game. This dinner was taken up as a national pattern.

Myers was one of the originators of the Providence Lodge of Elks golf tourney, and he helped found the Knights of Columbus tourney. He was one of the first to start group instruction in the schools. He promoted junior golf on the public links, and gained state recognition of public links golfers, thus enabling them to play in RIGA events. He ran the first women's championship tourney.

a little fancier, but they are really nothing more than Bilbos in gray flannel pants.

All of this relates to the statement of a woman outside Central High School in Little Rock as the nine Negro children finally went through the door. This woman gasped: "My God, the niggers are in!" Why should this woman have felt that her world had suddenly come to an end? Actually this woman has been brought up in an atmosphere which tried to give her caste the easy way. While the Negroes were going to the back of the bus and to separate schools and filling the jobs of janitors, this woman had status without money, without the necessity of voting, without the need to join a labor union.

Still, the remarkable thing about the whole matter is the way the Negroes have responded.

They have just not done anything wrong.

The white woman says: "The Negroes are very happy; they do not want to end racial segregation, my maid told me so." She calls her maid in and says: "Nettie, what do you think of this Supreme Court decision?" And the maid says: "Lordy, Miz Emily, we never sees the paper."

And that night the maid goes home and says to her husband: "Jim, get a move on you with that supper; we'll be late for the N.A.A.C.P. meeting and let's try to put some life into our integration committee this time."

ment in Providence, founded annual golf tournament competition for numerous charitable and civic organizations, and he originated the annual collection of clubs, balls, and other equipment for distribution to disabled veterans. Quite a record!

When Lew Myers joined brother Eddie in 1915 (Eddie is now at Pinebrook in Boston), Metacomet was a nine-hole course along the Ten Mile River. He remained at Metacomet until coming to Ledgemont in the summer of 1923 (the new club opened the following year). Ten years elapsed, and then Lew moved to Louisquissett, where he stayed for two years, then to Triggs Municipal, where his tenure was considerably greater—nine years. He returned to Ledgemont in 1944, and is still going strong after 15 consecutive years as the pro.

Lew will no doubt have plenty of opportunity for reminiscing about the past when the members of Ledgemont salute him for his long and practically historic service, on Sunday evening.

Again and again the parents come in for censure, accused of everything from neglect of their children to over-protectiveness. The parents themselves admit that all too often when some parents have a problem they are ashamed to seek out help. One mother said that she felt it was very hard these days to hold the family together because there were so many outside activities demanding the time and energies of both the children and the parents. Many parents are inclined to avoid teaching their children anything about sex, but in the opinion of Dr. Denhoff, this may not be too bad. He feels that sex education can probably be handled better in small groups led by competent instructors.

But once more the parents are at fault in other fields, according to him. "Jewish parents tend to make their kids very unhappy, always nagging them about their hair, or skin blemishes, or food. They literally force the kids to rebel. These boys who run wild... the parents are to blame. They just push the cars at them. But even with all this, most Jewish children stop misbehaving before they get into serious trouble because of the close-knit ties and the strength of our family life."

Does anyone have a kind word to say for the embattled parents? From Dr. Maurice Laufer, Director of the Bradley Hospital for Emotionally Disturbed Children, comes a provocative question, in the vernacular: "How come parents are such rats, all of a sudden?" He feels that both children and parents are being affected by the social pressures of our time.

"There is no one cause of this behavior problem among children. This is true of all youngsters today, including Jewish. It must represent a social phenomenon. It's got to be because of social changes. Why, even Chinese children today, for the first time in the history of their race are being brought into court for offenses that were always unheard of among them. In their families, as in Jewish families, the old patterns are being broken down. The children are in rebellion and the strong family ties are being severed."

In Dr. Laufer's opinion, both parents and young people are followers of the current hedonist philosophy which preaches that the pursuit of pleasure is the main end of life.

When asked for the answers to these problems, Dr. Laufer has more questions to ask: "These kids have everything. Why do they rebel? Are we Jews so well-integrated into the general community that our children can be affected by the general breakdown of discipline among young people?"

He thinks that parents tend to put professionals like himself in the position of God and most professionals like this.

"We need," he says "Arthur Godfrey's word... humility. We need to admit that we don't know the answers."

But Dr. Laufer does have some suggestions to make in connection with the whole problem of teenage misbehavior. He says that social workers are greatly concerned with what is going on, particularly on the East Side of Providence, and the fact that most misdemeanors are covered up by the parents, and so nothing much is done about them.

"For some kids", he says, perhaps the open road to Police Court and Juvenile Court might do some good. Perhaps then pressures within the community might demand action; might generate concern with the problem."

More constructively, he suggests that a non-prejudiced group of social workers, psychiatrists and educators should be called together, not as experts alone, but as concerned citizens, and make at least a start toward facing and solving the problem of our young people and their behaviour.

"Of course," he adds wryly, "we will find even deeper problems as we delve into this one."

Perhaps, but in the opinion of many citizens of our community it would be well worth the risk.

Adenauer

that the rising nationalism in Morocco had been marked "by demonstrations of religious and social prejudices, with Jews as prime targets."

He told the session that the Moroccan Government had recently stopped all emigration of Jews to Israel and had decided to join other Arab states "in terminating postal, telephone and telegraphing service to and from Israel."

Mr. Ehrmann's address was based on reports the agency had received from its overseas branches.

He criticized the Egyptian Government for its refusal to permit the passage of Israeli vessels through the Suez Canal. He also appealed to the United States Government "to refuse to countenance the tactics utilizing the plight of the Arab refugee as a political weapon and a means of political maneuvering."

Frederick F. Greenman, New York lawyer and chairman of the executive board, presided.

At another session the Rev. Francis S. Sayre Jr., dean of the Washington Cathedral and chairman of the United States Committee of Refugees, said that unless the United States liberalized its immigration policy, it would suffer a propaganda and prestige loss "in the eyes of the rest of the world."

have apparently been permitted to function.

It was reported that in Konotop, in the Ukraine, authorities banned prayers in the synagogue on the eve of the Jewish New Year but relented and permitted prayers on the first day of the festival. On the second day those who tried to worship were reported to have been dispersed by the police.

In Kiev, on the eve of the New Year, all private prayer groups in homes were ordered dissolved, it was reported, leaving only one small synagogue for the city, which is believed to have 200,000 Jews.

In Kharkov, where there has been no synagogue for several years, all private prayer groups were dispersed several months ago. On the eve of the New Year the authorities are reported to

by Sylvia Porter

In a speech a while ago, Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, told of an elderly gentleman who surprised his friends by taking off suddenly on a tiger-hunt. "You can't realize the excitement," he remarked later, "of walking through a thick jungle and never knowing when a tiger is going to leap out."

"How many tigers did you shoot?" he was asked.

"None," he said.

"Then your safari was a failure!"

"Listen," retorted the old fellow, "when you're hunting tigers, none is plenty!"

Funston used that anecdote to pound home a point he has been making with appropriately mounting urgency recently--that "no abuses are plenty" in any of the securities markets.

Now Funston is no "Sir Galahad" of the financial world. None of the individuals in power in Wall Street or Washington today--and that goes for the head of the Securities & Exchange Commission, the presidents of the various securities exchanges, the heads of the securities self-policing organizations, etc.--is trying to act this role.

Funston, though, is acutely aware that "excesses in any direction will hurt the Exchange far more than any other institution." All the authorities are on the lookout for any threat of another "1929," are determined to avert the danger of a routine stock market decline being turned into a rout by illegal manipulation.

This is another difference between the areas.

For the blunt fact is that there was no policing, no regulation of the securities markets worthy of the description 30 years ago this month. There were, of course, viewers-with-alarm. But direct controls over margin requirements were still to come. All the important securities regulatory laws we have today were then far in the future.

Today reckless speculation in the thousands of stocks listed on the nation's exchanges and the tens of thousands of stocks listed nowhere (traded over-the-counter) again is alarming.

BUT serious efforts are being made to curb it. Pressures are increasing for greater controls and supervision over the unlisted securities markets. Legislation has been introduced into Congress to end the "double standard" between corporations with shares listed on an exchange and corporations which do not have to obey exchange rules.

This past spring, unreasoning, almost hysterical gambling in the so-called glamour stocks again roared to a terrifying speed.

BUT warnings immediately went out from the New York Stock Exchange to member firms against encouraging the speculation, and warnings went out from the firms to the public cautioning against the speculation. Since then, the gambling has calmed down.

In recent months stock tipsters again have been operating on a disturbing scale.

BUT policing authorities are moving against the fringe tipsters. You are being repeatedly told to avoid any dealings with "boiler room" operators--strangers soliciting your stock orders by phone. In New York, the Attorney General's office has frankly hinted he's considering asked a new law to control fringe "investment advisers."

In the past couple of years, some sickening scandals and weird manipulations involving well-known companies have hit the newspapers. BUT the scandals have been broken by alert reporters and regulatory authorities able to get information from which they were barred 30 years ago. The manipulations haven't multiplied into great disasters and new, tighter controls are likely to come.

The crooks haven't been banished; our protective laws and rules are far from adequate.

BUT the significant point is our awareness of the existing pitfalls, our determination to build barriers against them--in time.

In 1929 all Wall Street was the equivalent of a gigantic pit for America. But the nation didn't know it--not even after it fell in.

have confiscated the eight Torah Schrolls in the apartments where the prayer groups had met. Similar measures have been reported recently in Minsk and in the Moscow suburb of Kuntsevo.

Anti-Semitic violence and propaganda in recent weeks were reported to have been far more extensive than the single reported incident in the Moscow suburb of Malakhovka, where an attempt to burn down a synagogue took place Oct. 4. It is now reported that the woman who died in that incident, Mme. Sarah Gordovskaya, did not die by accident, as first believed, but was strangled and her body thrown into the blaze.

Copies of the anti-Semitic leaflets posted in Malakhovka at that time have now reached this country. These show that they were signed with the initials of an organization calling itself "Kill the Jews and Save Russia."

Circulars of similar content are reported to have been distributed in at least three Ukrainian cities, Kharkov, Kiev, and Vinnitsa, on the eve of the New Year. One of the leaflets that has reached this country criticizes the Bolsheviks for having rushed to give the Jews equality.

It is reported that on the eve of the New Year windows in the Great Synagogue of Moscow were broken, and this was repeated several days later. On the holiday itself, in the town of Timiriavzskii, hoodlums are said to have broken into an apartment being used for a prayer meeting and beat the worshipers.

Windows in dozens of apartments occupied by Jews in the Moscow suburbs of Pushkino and Perlovka have been broken recently, it is reported; in some cases the apartments were entered and their contents destroyed. In the suburb of Marina Roshcha stones were thrown into the synagogue during the recent celebration of the festival of the "Rejoicing of the Law."

ADL Asks Southern Jews For Intelligent Efforts To Deal With Problems

MIAMI — Throughout the history of the South, Jews have maintained pleasant relations with their neighbors — to such an extent that many of them rose to positions of preeminence in political and economic circles.

Until recently, there has been little reason to doubt that this pleasant relationship would continue in the future. The May, 1954 Supreme Court ruling on separate but equal facilities seemed to put it all to sudden question. A number of factors governed the change:

Most Jews, despite their long-standing Southern traditions, found segregation inimical to the teaching of their religious heritage.

The South, particularly since World War II, has attracted an increasingly large permanent population with originally Northern roots and with outspoken feeling about segregation, showing little or no sensitivity toward the "special role" of long-standing Southern Jewry.

Jewish civil libertarian organizations, with national offices in the North, have continued to support the Supreme Court ruling despite requests from some Southern Jewish communities that such support be modified in the name of continued friendly Jewish-Christian relations here.

If the segregation-integration battle was sufficient cause for fear, ardent racists and noted anti-Semites have since added fuel to the fire through speeches and the publication of hate literature depicting all Jews as pro-integration — although this conclusion is far from the truth.

Shun Fears

The recent meeting of six Southern regional boards of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and the aftermath of its reports are especially welcome today in light of these developments. The meeting, held in New Orleans, heard discussion from Jewish leaders throughout the South.

Uproshot of the gathering was a statement calling for "throwing off immobilizing fears" and for the development of "intelligent efforts" to deal with problems of human relations and law and order in the South. The Anti-Defamation League leaders also: Urged cooperation with Southern Christians in helping to solve race problems and in achieving greater interreligious understanding.

Flatly stated that fears among Jews arising from violence against synagogues, increased distribution of anti-Semitic literature and other activities of hate-mongers "are not warranted."

Indicated that increased anti-Semitism stemming from the integration-segregation battle has had little effect upon traditionally friendly attitudes toward Southern Jewry.

Order on Rise

The Anti-Defamation League leaders are to be warmly applauded. To begin with, they put the spotlight on the fact that Jews are not alone in their desire to live in accordance with the Supreme Court ruling.

Obliquely citing the decline in violence against synagogues, they suggested that the general social tone of the South is such as increasingly to search for a realistic approach to the integration order.

And frankly discussing what has seemed to be a genuine challenge to the traditional position of the Jew in the South in the wake of the 1954 court order, the ADL leaders allayed prevalent fears in this regard.

The gathering, added to the recent experiences in Little Rock, Ark., and elsewhere, seems to indicate that law and order are on the increase and that, as the ADL suggested, "immobilizing fears" need paralyze our best intentions less and less.

Sholom Aleichem Stars Carnovsky

Morris Carnovsky, veteran of Broadway, Hollywood, and the Stratford (Conn.) Shakespeare Festival, has been signed for a major role in the "World of Sholom Aleichem", to be presented at New England Mutual Hall in Boston, Mass. by Folklore Productions and the Actors Concert Theatre in late November.

Howard da Silva who directed the highly successful performance in New York a few years ago, will again direct a top Broadway cast for the Boston appearance.

"The World of Sholom Aleichem", a dramatization in English of three Jewish folk tales, will be presented for nine performances the evenings of Nov. 24 through the 29 and matinees Nov. 25, 27 and 29. Its production will serve as a timely contribution to the centennial of the birth of the famed Yiddish author Sholom Aleichem who has been termed the "Mark Twain" of Yiddish literature.

Dr. Max Talmadge

Dr. Max Talmadge To Speak At Center

Dr. Max Talmadge, Ph.D., senior psychologist at the Emma Pendleton Bradley Hospital in Providence, will be the featured discussion leader at the opening program of a series on "Problems of Adolescence" to be conducted at the East Side Jewish Community Center building this Wednesday beginning at 8 P. M.

Open to all parents of adolescent boys and girls, this series is jointly sponsored by the JCC and the Jewish Family and Children's Service. Subsequent programs will be conducted on the third Wednesday evening of each month, through March, 1960.

Currently associated with the Institute of Health Sciences at Brown University, Dr. Talmadge is also engaging in a Public Health supported research study at the Providence Lying-In Hospital, and is teaching a course in "Personality Development," in the Brown Extension Division.

"The Meaning of Adolescence" will be the title of Wednesday evening's session, and the program will include presentation of a special film of that title, prepared by the Canadian Film Institute.

Suburban Families

Often, as he assumes more responsibility in business, this becomes an obsession with him to the extent that he leaves the rearing of his children, in all its phases, to his wife.

Fills Vacuum

"To fill this vacuum, she has been obliged to step into the breach and set standards for her family. That is why, it appears to me, a new 'matriarchate' is developing," adds Dr. Gordon.

Children's moral codes and ethical standards require example and support and these often suffer because teen-agers fail to receive active and direct guidance from their fathers, he says.

"The authority associated with the father's role in the family is often lacking," according to Rabbi Gordon. "The youth who may be rebelling against a mother's over-protectiveness finds himself without his father's guidance when he needs it most."

Intellectual Bent

In suburbia, Rabbi Gordon found that Jewish students "evinced very nearly the same concern for the intellectual pursuits as did earlier generations."

He points out that no synagogue in America could function well today if it were not for the women who help to blueprint the program, agitate for its adoption and support it with their efforts.

Bridge

By REVOKE

Albert Morehead directs the Master Solvers' Club in the American "Bridge World." In this column, which I find the most interesting and instructive in all bridge journalism 56 top experts give their opinions each month on difficult problems of bidding and play. Here is an interesting example.

- ♠—A, Q, 9, x, x
- ♥—A, K, J
- ♦—A, Q, x
- ♣—x, x

Given that you open 1S on the hand and your partner responds 1NT, what is your next bid? Most of the experts suggested 3NT. Some, however, think 3D—which invites 3H—a better bid. I, myself believe that this problem is rightly dealt with only if you originally open 2NT. It may seem that the lack of a stop in clubs disqualifies this hand from such an opening, but there are hands where it pays to make the less orthodox but more promising bid. Some hands just do not fit any pattern. With the Stayman convention it is unlikely that partner will bid 3NT with a short club suit. If he is short of clubs his hand will probably either have a biddable diamond suit or promise a game in one of the majors, in which case he will make the conventional bid of 3C.

However bid, the hand may turn out something of a gamble, and it is a better gamble if the strong hand is the closed hand. Here are three hands which he suggests might be opposite the one given above.

- | | |
|-----------------|---------------------|
| A | B |
| ♠—x, x | ♠—K, x |
| ♥—Q, x, x, x, x | ♥—10, 9, x, x, x |
| ♦—K, x, x, x | ♦—K, x, x |
| ♣—Q, x | ♣—J, x, x |
| | C |
| | ♠—J, x |
| | ♥—10, x, x, x, x, x |
| | ♦—J, x, x |
| | ♣—A, x |

He suggests that over the sequence 1S, 1NT, 3D, you will get the required 3H response. Certainly in example C that is the case. But over the other possible sequence—1S, 1NT, 3NT—there is no reason why any of the three hands should bid further. On the other hand, over an opening bid of 2NT there should be no difficulty in arriving at the correct contract of 4H.
